It was from Monclova, in Coahuila, that the declaration of the Constitutionalists was issued. Governor Carranza again showed the sterner qualities of leadership when he proclaimed his reasons for renouncing the new government and the principles upon which he would make his fight. He maintained that he was the regularly elected executive in his state. He represented a government that was based upon a constitution. The individuals who had seized the federal government had received no authority from the people, but had, on the contrary, overthrown constitutional government. He set the voice of the people above treachery and murder and fear of punishment.

Coahuila was the home state of the Maderos and had come to look forward to better things than the iron hand that wrung great profits from its citizens. Practically the whole people aligned themselves with the governor, and his influence spread quickly.

And Don Venustiano Carranza, the man who started it all—what of him?

In the first place, there should be called to mind the huge, rugged figure of a ranchman of the mountains. He stands more than six feet tall and carries as much flesh as is likely to stick to a man who leads his own forces in the field.

Carranza wears the paint brush whiskers that are still favored by the more stable men of the republic. There are glasses upon his nose, for his eyes are very poor. He has been a ranchman because of those poor eyes. In his early manhood he came near losing them altogether and was forced to give up his chosen profession of the law because of their weakness.

Carranza is fifty-four. He is of mixed Mexican blood, some of which is old Spanish and some of which is native Aztec and Indian. His education was secured in Mexico, and he speaks little English. He has served as mayor of his native town, as judge, as senator, as governor. His people idolize him, and his election to the office of governor was by a unanimous vote. On his ranch graze considerable herds of cattle and horses, and he is classed as well to do. He is not wealthy, however, as were the Maderos, all his property probably being worth $250,000.

A month after Huerta had assumed authority over Mexico there was a condition of chaos from the Rio Grande to Tehuantepec. The people had loved Madero despite his ineffectiveness. They had come to hope for something better than the peonage from which they had suffered. They broke into insurrection wherever a leader appeared and in organizations varying from bands of twenty men to organized armies 10,000 strong had defied the federal government. Yet the whole was without co-ordination and there was no national leader to whom they might look.

The casual observer has been prone to think that merely a condition of brigandage has held sway throughout Mexico. Closer observers do not always hold that belief. They say that Mexico is experiencing little more than growing pains. It has passed through a certain period of its growth. Under Diaz it had an awakening to the riches the land contained, and those riches were exploited to all the world. Men in authority went money mad, and the government was run in the interest of these exploiters. The masses were not allowed to share in the prosperity of the few.

In Mexico a large proportion of the population is illiterate and very poor. But it likewise has a considerable percentage of cosmopolitan and cultivated people. Great numbers of well to do Mexicans send their sons to the United States and to Europe for their education. These young men are quick and emotional and ready to absorb the spirit of things about them. They become imbued with outside governmental ideas and preach their gospels upon their return. So has the spirit of better government finally reached the peon himself.

This condition provided a fertile soil for the gospel of Carranza. Gradually the simple declaration of the Constitutionalists permeated the whole country. There were leaders in different communities who had flung the flag of rebellion to the breeze, but who were battling on no broad national basis. There was the necessity of all these elements being pulled together into a concerted movement against the central government of Huerta.

Carranza offered a rallying point for all such. His forces soon became so strong that the federal troops found themselves bottled up in the fortified cities of Saltillo and Monclova. In Chihuahua the federals soon found themselves in possession only of Juarez and the city of Chihuahua.

And so the struggle has waged and extended until in many sections the federals have been driven into the cities and Carranza has been able to proclaim that the Constitutionalists are masters of the greater part of Mexico. Many of the warring factions have been drawn to the standard of Carranza, and among those who have pledged their allegiance is the remarkable leader of a guerrilla band of rebels, General Emiliano Zapata. He is a cross between a bandit and a patriot—a man who pillages and yet dreams of obtaining land for the poor.

SUCCESS OR FAILURE

"The Bank that pays 4%"

"If you want to know whether you are destined to be a success or a failure in life, you can easily find out. The test is simple and it is infallible: Are you able to save money? If not, drop out. You will lose. You may think not, but you will lose as sure as you live. The seed of success is not in you."

STATEMENT OF CHAS. KURTZMAN THE PLAINFIELD FUR DEALER

To the Plainfield people who are interested in furs—

ON THE FUR QUESTION.

As a rule, any lady, in doing shopping, no matter how small may be the article desired, is careful to buy it right. But when it comes to buying furs, no matter how careful she is, nor how much she may know about the subject, it is still necessary for her to trade at a place where she can have confidence in the reliability of the dealer. In buying of an exclusive furrier you cannot suffer from misrepresentation, because if the dealer was not reliable, he could not stay long in town. You are protected by his personal training and knowledge. In buying at a department store you have no such protection. There you deal with a clerk who merely registers her employer's orders like an automaton.

QUEEN QUALITY SHOES

Are worn today by over a million American women.

Not because they are sold at popular prices.

For many others are sold at lower prices.

But simply because in Queen Quality Shoes are combined the three most desirable features that footwear can possess. Style, comfort and wearing qualities. For this reason over a million satisfied women are unwilling to pay less for inferior shoes or more for custom made shoes which look no better and wear no better. Here is the best value in town.....$3.50, $3.75 and $4.00

PLAINFIELD
THE CITY OF OPPORTUNITY

Where a Hearty Welcome awaits the Stranger. Her Multifarious Advantages as a Locality Richly Endowed by Nature as a place of Residence and Manufacturing Centre. One of the State's most Progressive Communities. Twenty-four Miles from New York City. 125 Trains daily. Commutation $7.85 Monthly. Population 32,000. More Beautiful Homes than any place in the State.

PLAINFIELD.

Plainfield occupies the rather unique position of being at the same time one of the most beautiful residential cities about New York, and an industrial centre of growing importance. While it is the home of thousands of commuters, who go to the Metropolis every day, returning in the afternoon to enjoy the pleasures of suburban life, it is in no sense a suburb, but a modern city, that has within a comparatively short time been evolved from what was little more than a typical Jersey country town. An attempt has been made in this special edition of the Daily Press to convey a comprehensive idea to the reader of what Plainfield is today, its attractions, advantages and resources, what has been accomplished in the past by its progressive people and their hopes of the future. No attempt has been made to overdraw the picture, that is unnecessary even if it were desirable, but one has been earnestly made to set things down as they are. Accuracy has been the aim; the most reliable sources of information have been sought, and it is believed that every statement made in this sketch can be verified. The best idea of any city can be gained by a study of the individual activities of its citizens, and the attention of the reader is directed to the numerous articles descriptive of the industries of the city, that are found in the columns of this issue. They will give a better idea of the city than a general sketch could possibly convey. Under appropriate sub-heads the various activities of the municipality have been gone into at length and it is hoped that a desire to see Plainfield may be stimulated in the minds of everyone into whose hands this edition may chance to fall. For the benefit of those who would like to get some idea of Plainfield in a nutshell, a few salient facts are succinctly set forth in a small space.

FACTS ABOUT PLAINFIELD.

Plainfield is located at the foot of the Watchung Mountains on the Central Railroad of New Jersey, twenty-four miles from New York, which is also reached by the Reading and Baltimore and Ohio Railroad trains. The population of the city, including North Plainfield and its environs, is conservatively estimated at 30,000 souls. The trip to New York can be made in 45 minutes, the commutation fare each way being 13 cents daily, including the ferry. The regular fare is 55 cents one way and $1.05 the round trip. By trolley to Jersey City or Hoboken the fare is only 25 cents. There are over 100 trains daily to New York and also frequent trains to Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and other points South and West. The city has two national banks, two trust companies and a savings bank, several building and loan associations, a Chamber of Commerce and Board of Trade, two high schools and 11 grammar and primary schools, several colleges, thirty churches and religious societies, Young Men's and Women's Christian Associations, numerous fraternal societies, one of the best fire departments in the country and an unsurpassed water supply. It has excellent hotels, a public library and art gallery, a famous hospital, musical literary and social clubs of various kinds, two theatres, where Broadway stars frequently appear, two new moving picture theatres and fine golf and tennis grounds. Its side walks and streets are unusually well paved and are bordered with beautiful shade trees, giving the city a park like appearance that is most attractive. There are 30 miles of sanitary sewers, the streets are lighted by electricity and a trolley system of six lines, radiating from the central station, makes all parts of the city easily accessible. The main line of the Public Service Company passes through the city providing quick and cheap transportation, the rate being a little over a cent a mile to Newark, Elizabeth, the Oranges, Westfield, Somerville, New Brunswick, Rahway, Asbury Park, Red Bank, Long Branch, Atlantic Highlands, Hoboken, Jersey City and other points. Numerous industries are located in Plainfield and the city has some of the most beautiful and attractive residential sections to be found anywhere.

PLAINFIELD IN THE PAST.

It is not intended in this sketch to deal with the Plainfield of the years gone by, except incidentally, and to show the wonderful progress that has been made. The people of the city are essentially modern, living in the present, but with their minds fixed upon a bigger and a better future. History, however, is always interesting and instructive; it carries with it a lesson, just as experience does to every thoughful and progressive man. As a city Plainfield dates from April 2, 1869, when a charter, ratified by the people April 21, of the same year, was granted by the Legislature. At the election 683 votes were polled, 427 in favor, and 256 against, the measure. At that time the population is estimated to have been about 5,100. For many years Plainfield, at one time known as "Millton," had been quite a flourishing country town, and the fact of its becoming a city did not naturally change its status. The place was for many years a part of Westfield Township, and the first official mention made of it was on October 11, 1707, when the records of the Friends' Society show that a daughter was born to John and Elizabeth Laing, in Plainfield on that date. The post office was established here April 1, 1800, before which time the people received their mail at Scotch Plains, letters being received irregularly, once or twice a week. At the time the post office was established there were about 20 houses in the village, 150 people, and a store conducted by Thomas Nesbet, at the corner of what is now Park avenue and Front street. These and the old Friends' Meeting House, on Watchung avenue, still standing in an excellent state of preservation comprised the town. Plainfield Township was organized in 1847. At this time the principal industry was the manufacture of hats and clothing. There was strong opposition from Westfield to the incorporation of the new township, but it was accomplished and a strong impetus given to its growth. From this time on the progress of the town was steady and has continued so, for the place has never experienced the doubtful benefits of what is known as a "boom."

FINE RAILROAD SERVICE.

No one force has exercised such a potent influence over the destinies of Plainfield, and has contributed so much to its development, as the railroads. They have as a matter of fact been really the power that has transformed it from a country town—a mere way station—into the beautiful city it has become, for without their aid and co-operation the efforts of the most progressive and enterprising of its citizens would have come to naught. Much of this credit is due to John Taylor Johnson, for a number of years president of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, who when he came here to live, realized that if Plainfield was to become of any importance as a community, the tracks running through the city must be elevated. He proposed the elevation, eliminating thirteen railroad crossings within the confines of the city, a proposition that met with much opposition at the time, but it was eventually carried out and an impetus given to the growth of the place, that in a few years transformed it. Before the great work of elevating the tracks was begun the railroad station was a frame building, standing on the present site, with a saloon in one section of it, and but little accommodation for the traveling public. There were but few trains running in those days and the schedule was very irregular. A bell in the cupola of the station was rung by the agent to notify the inhabitants when a train arrived or was about to leave. He acted as ticket and freight agent, express agent, porter and for a time as telegraph operator. At the present time twenty-five men and often more are employed, there are 47 passenger trains stopping at Plainfield going west every 24 hours, and 44 going east, exclusive of special, relief and freight trains, and it would be a fair estimate that an average of 140 trains of all descriptions pass through the city every day. With the elevation of the tracks the people of the city become imbued with the spirit of progress, a number of wealthy New Yorkers were induced to locate here, and since then it has grown continuously from a population of about 4,000 to the more than 30,000 it has today. Mr. Johnson's plan of making the train service equal to the needs of the community is still carried out by the officials of the Central, the Reading and the Baltimore and Ohio, the three roads passing through the city. Plainfield now has four stations, about equal distances apart; Netherwood, the North avenue, the Grant avenue and the Clinton avenue stations. One of the chief industries of the city is "going to New York." And this is not an unpleasant occupation for the trains running over the tracks of the Central of New Jersey are finely equipped and speed over the perfectly ballasted, four-tracked road bed from Plainfield to Jersey City, many of them without a stop. Though the distance from New York to Plainfield is 24 miles, express time to Broadway is but 45 minutes, including a delightful trip of 10 minutes on the North River, with its attendant exhilaration of atmosphere and glorious panorama of land and water. The Central Railroad of New Jersey is remarkable for the cleanliness of its cars—only anthracite coal being burned—and the desirable class of people who are its patrons. The more exclusively inclined, however, ride in palatial club cars, where the short trip can be most enjoyably spent. The promptness to schedule is also a feature of this road which commends itself to business men.

PASSING THROUGH THE TUBES

From time to time the question has been agitated as to the feasibility of using the tunnels under North River into New York, by arrangement with other roads and there is hardly a doubt in the minds of thougntful men that this will eventually be consumated. It would undoubtedly be a big thing for Plainfield, she would receive another impetus such as that which resulted from the elevation of the tracks, the time to the city would be materially shortened and Plainfield would experience a boom such as it has never had. The project is feasible, though costly, but that it will be carried out in time optimistic men have not the slightest doubt. It is a big idea, but Plainfield is full of big men who are accustomed to conceive and carry out big things.

INDUSTRIAL PLAINFIELD.

Comparatively few of the 30,000 people who live in Plainfield and its environs, fully realize the extent of its manufacturing interests. Many of them have become so accustomed to look upon it purely as a home town, a sort of suburb of New York, that they have given but little attention to its industrial growth, a part of the life of every community that is its backbone, and without which no city can expand and prosper. It is well to have a city of beautiful homes, even if those who occupy them spend most of their time in New York, but without the industrial element it cannot grow as it should, or what growth it does have, must be essentially artificial to a great extent. Plainfield industries are of a character that bring to the city workingmen and women of unusual intelligence and character, many of them skilled mechanics, who earn good wages and spend their money with the home merchants. They make the best kind of citizens, stimulating trade in a healthy direction and building up the city as no other agency could. The day when the location of industries here was discouraged has passed, the property holders and merchants realize that the factories, with their hundreds of wage-earners, are the best asset a city can have, and without them Plainfield would indeed become simply one of the many environs of the great metropolis, 24 miles away. The industrial growth of the city has not been what might be called phenomenal, but it has been steady and healthy, and every year it increases more rapidly. Its industries are high-class, diversified and backed by ample capital as will be seen by referring to other pages of this edition in which many of them are described at length. It has two big printing press plants, two new and splendidly equipped silk mills, an automobile factory, employing hundreds of men, a factory for the manufacture of talking machines, four factories employing several hundred girls, making ladies' undermuslins and boys' garments, a great mill, one of the largest dynamo works in the State, several ice cream factories and manufacturing confectioners, one of the largest tool works in the country, an automobile tire manufacturing plant, a factory for the manufacture of wrist bands and finger bandages, one for making druggists' supplies and surgical implements, large marble and stone works, a factory making patent automobile joints, employing 500 men or more; brass and bronze works and other industries. These are all in a flourishing condition and their weekly payrolls, amounting to thousands of dollars, are a stimulus to trade that hundreds of beautiful homes would never give. Both the Chamber of Commerce and the Board of Trade are doing splendid service in attracting the attention of investors to Plainfield, and anyone interested in locating a plant of any desirable kind would do well in communicating with either or both of these wide-awake commercial organizations.

MILLION A YEAR FOR BUILDING.

In the neighborhood of a million dollars is spent every year in building operations in Plainfield, most of it in beautiful residences, for the city, although growing as a business centre, is still essentially a home town, drawing largely for its population from the commutors who go every morning to New York, returning in the evening. Every year the residential section grows more beautiful and the class of houses erected larger, more substantial and artistic. During the last five years, with the single exception of 1910, there has been an increase in the amount of money expended on building. The books of Building Inspector Doane show that in 1908 the amount spent was $860,000; in 1909, $990,000; in 1910, $863,000, in 1911, $1,000,000, and in 1912 the amount grew to $1,843,000. The present year promises to make an excellent showing, many new buildings having been contracted for. Nothing better and more accurately shows the growth of a city than the records of the Building Inspector'sOffice, and these show that while the growth has not been remarkably rapid it has been steady and substantial. Few cities of its size have a better record of building operations, if we except the large manufacturing towns.

HON. PERCY H. STEWART, MAYOR OF PLAINFIELD.

IN THE WATCHUNG MOUNTAINS.

There is no doubt in the minds of those who have carefully studied the evolution of Plainfield from a country village to what is admittedly the most beautiful residential city about New York, that the Watchung Mountains are one of its most valuable undeveloped assets. Hitherto, with a few exceptions, its handsomest and most costly residences have been built on the level plain at the foot of the hills, but as these latter become more accessible, because of the building of modern roads, they must in the near future be the site of hundreds of magnificent country homes, cosy bungalows and pretty cottages. There is a superb chance for the building of summer homes in the Watchung Mountains, unsurpassed by anything South of the Catskills and Adirondacks, and in many respects superior to them. From Scotch plains to the "Notch," Johnson's Drive, stretches across the hills, well graded and macadamized. This drive is one of the most beautiful in the country, and makes possible some lively and enchanting views. It runs along the front ridge of the mountain at an average heighth of about 400 feet above sea level, and 250 above the plain. At some future time trolley lines will be built along this drive and connect with the Somerset street line, which now extends to the foot of the mountains. This will make still more accessible miles of desirable building sites along the brow of the mountains. These will be protected on the north and west by a crest of the ridge, which rises back of the drive. Every site through all this distance will command a fine view of the park-like city below; the valley for many miles to the south and east; Netherwood to the southeast, and the hills and dales beyond stretching away to Amboy Bay and the seacoast. It will be comparatively easy to continue the trolley line southwest to Washington Rock, from which the American commander was accustomed to watch the British fleet in Amboy Bay during those dark days that tired men's souls, and saw the beginning of the greatest Republic the world has ever known.

NEW YORK EASILY VISABLE.

From this and other points, one could sit on his piazza and on a clear day, without the aid of a glass, sweep the horizon, bringing into view the Highlands of Navasink, Staten Island, New York harbor, the bridges and the skyscrapers of the metropolis. It is not a dream of fancy when one sees in the near future the slopes from Scotch Plains to Washington's Rock covered with the residences of the mountain dwellers of Plainfield. And since science has tamed and harnessed that unknown force which we call electricity, these mountain dwellers can come and go in its tireless currents as quietly as a mother carries her child, and as swiftly as the eagle glides over the crest of the mountains along the unmarked pathway of the circumambient air.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNTRY CLUB

NATURAL BEAUTIES OF PLAINFIELD.

The evidence that the people appreciate the natural advantages of climate, soil, water, plain, hill and mountain, is seen on every hand. The fall "Indian summer" days is one of the best times to see Plainfield, although it is an all-the-year-round city, every month having charms all its own. But October and November are ideal out-door months here. The streets are wide, regular and tree-embowered. One may drive, ride or walk for hours about the city and its environs, enchanted by far-reaching vistas, under interlacing branches of elm and maple, oak and chestnut, meeting fresh surprises and new delights at every turn. And when autumn glides in with her brushes and palette, painting and tinting every leaf on tree and shrub, over park and well-kept grounds, and the long stretches of mountain side, where gold and purple, scarlet and green, in all the countless shades and combinations, while the unseen artist alone knows how to combine, Plainfield is a fairy land, indeed. Then beauty riots in glory through the long, soft soothing days, when Nature puts the earth to sleep, and covers her with a vari-colored blanket, whose slowly fading beauty is full of the promise of spring-time awakening. As a city ordinance requires flag or concrete sidewalks, the pedestrian is cared for, as well as the man in the coach or automobile. Another distinctive feature to which attention should be called, while on the subject of streets, is the absence of back alleys, which are usually unsightly and unsanitary nuisances. To tell of the beautiful natural parks, the rippling streams, the cool and placid lakes; especially along the famous and historic Wetumka and Buttermilk Falls would tax the most gifted pen and then the story would be incompletely told. Wandering through the wide streets of the city, lined on either side with palatial homes, nearly all of them surrounded with spacious grounds, where the robin, the red bird, the wren, build their nests unmolested, and squirrels are laying up their winter stores, it is difficult to believe that Broadway, is only 45 minutes away.

SPLENDID WATER SUPPLY.

Without the purest and most plentiful supply of water any community must naturally be greatly handicapped. It is one of the first things inquired after by the home-seeker and investor, and the better the supply the greater the asset. The water supply of Plainfield is most abundant in quantity and in quality it is of unrivaled purity. The company owning the plant is constantly making improvements and only recently purchased a large tract of land near Scotch Plains, in the vicinity of what is known as Little Jerusalem, and has erected a new pumping station at that point. A stand pipe twice the size of the one on North avenue is to be built, and this will overcome any difficulty that may exist in the lack of water pressure in any part of the city, although the water company has always delivered a pressure of 75 pounds at all fire mains. The water is drawn from subterranean springs and is pumped up through over 30 wells sunk 50 feet apart, for a distance of 1,000 feet just east of Netherwood. In boring these wells shale and clay were found for a depth of about 25 feet, and then a stratum of gravel was reached, which contained but little sand. Much of this gravel, of the size of walnuts and larger, had been worn round and smooth by currents of water moving through it. Investigation made indicated that the current at this point descends at least nine feet to the mile. Its progress through the coarse gravel must therefore be quite rapid. The water undoubtedly comes from springs in the mountains, but its exact source remains a matter of conjecture. The fact is certain, however, that the reservoir left by the glaciers of long ago is now filled with a practically inexhaustible supply of pure water which is safe from the possibility of pollution from sewerage or refuse, and which is unaffected either by drought or freshet. By means of the old and new towers a uniform pressure is maintained throughout the city at all times, no matter how heavy the draft of water may be. The ordinary pressure is sufficient to throw water over any building in the city, and water can be drawn from half a dozen hydrants in the house at the same time without materially affecting this pressure. The supply has been analyzed a number of times by eminent chemists, among them Allen Hazen, a leading hydraulic expert of New York, and pronounced by him to be water of "great organic purity." In a letter to a prominent resident of Plainfield, he adds, "You are to be congratulated upon having so good a supply and you may have no anxiety whatever about its wholesomeness." Herbert B. Baldwin, chemist in the department of health, of Newark, made an analysis on September 22, of samples of water taken from the mains in three different places in the city, and states: "Both chemical and bacteriological data on these samples show the water to be of an unusually good quality from a sanitary point of view." The water rates are reasonable and the service is of the best.

IDEAL HEALTH CONDITIONS.

Plainfield is one of the healthiest communities in the world all the year round. Located at the foot of the Watchung Mountains and protected by them from the cold blasts of winter, it is built on a loamy soil into which water easily disappears, and the absence of swamps and standing water, gives it a freedom from mosquitoes and malaria, enjoyed by but few cities. It has a comparatively new sewerage system, built along the most modern lines, extending for thirty miles under the main throughfares and North Plainfield and Dunellen are also about to install a system for which a bond issue was recently voted upon and carried. The city has an efficient and progressive Board of Health, which has been in existence since 1887.

INSPECTION OF FOOD AND MILK.

In connection with the dairy inspection instituted by the Board about nine years ago, a laboratory was established for the analysis of milk and water. In addition to a thorough supervision of the milk supply to which particular attention is paid and the analysis of milk at regular intervals, nearly all branches of preventive work within the jurisdiction of the Board has been taken up, such as nuisances, garbage disposal, contagious diseases, disinfections, house to house inspections, plumbing, barber shops, bakeries, ice, water, ice cream and other food supplies. Careful records of marriages, births and deaths are also kept and statistics compiled. Just how much time, thought and earnest work has been given by the various members and employes of the Board, to the improvement of the sanitary condition of Plainfield, can be measured only inadequately by the results obtained. By its prompt and thorough action the Board has several times prevented the spread of contagious diseases from becoming epidemic. Undoubtedly infant mortality has been much lowered because of the greater purity of the milk supply and the general health of the public prevented by better sanitation. The present members of the Board are: Dr. T. S. Davis, president; Dr. H. D. Corbusier, secretary; S. H. Voorhees, treasurer; E. T. Barrows and Hugh Reilly. The officers are: N. J. Randolph Chandler, health officer; Harriet O. Mattison, assistant health officer and registrar vital statistics; William Addis, Sr., inspector; Collis H. Case, inspector; Elizabeth Rosenson, stenographer; Mrs. Howard W. Boise, bacteriologist; Dr. John H. Carman, physician.

THE HIGH SCHOOL, NOW BEING ENLARGED

PLAINFIELDS FIRE FIGHTERS.

That Plainfield has one of the best fire departments of any city of its size in the country no one can doubt who is at all familiar with the subject. Its equipment is thoroughly modern, the business men of the city take the greatest interest in the department and the taxpayers are never backward in giving the municipal authorities their earnest support in the purchase of the latest improved apparatus. There are four engine houses located in various parts of the city. No. 1, Capt. George Feiring, on West Second street, has as its equipment a modern steamer and hose wagon; No. 2, Capt. Jas. H. Dailey (headquarters), an auto-combination chemical and hose wagon and a Hayes' truck with 65-foot extension aerial ladder; No. 3, Capt. George Mehl, West Fourth street, opposite Darrow avenue, a combination chemical and hose wagon, and No. 4, Capt. William F. Townley, South avenue, adjoining Netherwood station, a chemical horse-drawn truck and hose wagon. The entire city is equipped with the Gamewell Fire Alarm System with 86 fire alarm boxes. The department is a partly paid one consisting of 18 regulars, including officers and 30 "call" men. The excellent work done by the department has resulted in keeping the insurance rates on Plainfield property down and it has as reasonable rates as any city of its size in New Jersey. T. O. Doane has for many years been the efficient chief engineer and A. D. Jennings, assistant engineer, both veteran firemen with splendid records—both as volunteers and regulars. The city supplies the chief, who is also building inspector, with an automobile, housed at No. 2 building. The department has fully kept pace with the rapid growth of the city along the most modern lines and Plainfield has had, thanks to its efficienecy, but few disastrous fires. The municipality is just about to add to the equipment one of the latest combination auto engines ever built at a cost of from $8,000 to $10,000. Plainfield has always had a department of some kind, dating from 1827, when its equipment consisted of a quantity of tin buckets. When a fire occurred these buckets were passed from hand to hand from the water supply to the conflagration, the women and children carrying the buckets back to be refilled. During the same year a hand engine was purchased for $219, and the first engine house was a one-story structure on Front street. This company passed out of existence in 1832 and soon afterwards the Harmony Engine Company was organized with 12 members. Then came Gazelle Engine Company No. 1, which occupied a brick building on Park avenue. In the tower was a bell from an old ship, purchased in New York, which was the only alarm the city had for many years. During the war between the States most of the members went to the front and the organization declined, many being exempt. Two years later a new volunteer company, known as Plainfield Fire Engine Company No. 2, was formed and Plainfield's first steamer was purchased. In 1868 the city was threatened with its first disastrous fire and this resulted in the purchase by a number of property holders of a second steamer. The Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company No. 1 was organized in 1877, and two years later, Alert Hose Company No. 1. These were all volunteer companies and many of the most prominent citizens of the community were members. The Alert was known as "the millionaires company," being composed of many of the wealthiest men living in Plainfield. They possessed what is said to have been the finest parade carriage ever made; having formerly been the property of the Amity Hose Company of New York, who paid $10,000 for the machine. It is now stored in the Mono-Storage Warehouse. Gradually the volunteer department had been accumulating an indebtedness, and in 1887 the city took charge of it, assuming debts amounting to $8,000. A year later an entirely new department was formed, with T. O. Doane as its chief, six horses were purchased and from this time on the officers and drivers were paid. The department was controlled by a Board of Fire Commissioners, elected by the people and supported by a fire tax, levied upon property owners within a certain radius in Plainfield and North Plainfield. Eventually, however, this plan was abandoned, the city reorganized the department, placing the control in the hands of the Mayor and City Council and taking in the entire corporation. The people of Plainfield take particular pride in their splendid band of fire fighters and the "boys" reciprocate by giving the best that is in them.

MAGNIFICENT NEW HOME OF THE ELKS

HIGH GRADE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Plainfield has one of the best public school systems of any city in the country, and, with possibly one exception, it was the first township in New Jersey to recognize the fact that free education was one of the greatest assets any community could possess. Last year its expenditures for schools amounted to $213,590.51, exclusive of the laboratory and library disbursements, and at the beginning of the present school year there was an enrollment of 4,017 pupils, taught by 128 teachers. On the splendid addition to the High School, $270,000 is now being expended and, when completed, this will be the most modern and beautiful building used for public school purposes in the State. Today the school fits pupils regularly for any college or technical school, it affords four years course in history, and the languages three years in French and German, courses in manual training and domestic science and drill under an instructor in the gymnasium. There has been added a complete new department, that of commercial training, giving courses in typewriting, stenography and other work, fitting its pupils to enter commercial positions on graduation. In the work of the grades there has been similar advancement and improvement. Each primary has a kindergarten as a preparatory. Manual training is now given in all the grades, from the primary upward. Physical training, under a supervisor, has been introduced in grades five and eight. There has also been a radical change in the treatment of the various subjects, emphasis being laid on the doing of things rather than memorizing, the aim being to give practical power rather than simple memory knowledge. Sewing has been introduced in the fifth and sixth grades and cooking in the seventh and eight grades for the girls in the classes. All the grades have been supplied with a large amount of supplementary reading and all text books are now furnished free by the city. Summer schools have been established where those who fail of promotion through absence, illness, or other reasons, may do special work and so regain their ground and go on with their classes. Evening schools have been established for foreign-born people to teach them English and a knowledge of the laws and customs of their adopted country. A course of free public lectures for adults is provided in the winter evenings. Hygiene is given the attention in the public schools of Plainfield that it deserves and particular attention is now given to the physical welfare of the child.

A splendid place to live is North Plainfield.

NEW METHODS IN VOGUE.

Twenty years ago little thought was given to ventilation. It was for the most part atmospheric. Drinking water was obtained from a well in the yard, the toilets were outside, at no great distance from the well. The new buildings now have ample ventilation, air being forced into the rooms by fans driven by a motor. The drinking water all comes from the city mains and is provided by bubbling hygienic fountains. Toilets are all high-class, inside of the school buildings. The old double desks have been removed and all school rooms are now equipped with single desks, adjustable to the heighth of the pupil. Medical examiners test the eye-sight and hearing and examine the physical condition of every pupil each year, notifying the parents of any attention which they may require. Dental inspectors in similar manner inspect the teeth of every pupil each year, giving advice as to their care. The work of the medical and dental inspectors is followed up by a nurse, who visits the homes and shows the parents how to do things that can be done in the home. The work is supplemented by the Supervisor of Physical Training, who also examines each pupil and gives prescriptions for special exercises to meet individual needs. As a matter of protection against fire, the various buildings have been examined repeatedly by inspectors. The buildings that need them have been supplied with fire escapes, outside doors have been supplied with self-acting panic bolts to open them by simple pressure from inside, and the boilers have been shut in, by brick walls and iron doors, and other precautions taken to eliminate any danger from fire. The last building erected was of fireproof construction from cellar to roof, and so thoroughly has this work of improvement been done in the other buildings that the State inspector declares that, as far as danger to the children is concerned, it has been reduced to a minimum. The buildings are always kept in thorough repair; the old ones have been brought up to modern requirements in their fittings and equipment, and all are models in their convenience and adaptation to the work of the schools. Plainfield's educational system is constantly progressing along the best lines, the men at the head of it are men of ideas and there is no institution connected with the municipal life of the city in which the people take greater pride. "The use of the school buildings evenings," says Superintendent Henry M. Maxson in this connection, "is a field in which school systems will undoubtedly make a great advance in the next decade or so. The buildings are owned by the people, it is their money that has built them. It seems a pity that they should be used only five hours in a day, five days in the week. It is my conviction that in time we shall find more ways to use them for the profit and improvement and entertainment of the people of adult age than is now done. It seems as if the High School might provide opportunities for evening study along vocational lines for large numbers of young people who were not able to do high school work before beginning to earn their own living." As has been said, Plainfield, with possibly a single exception, was the first township in New Jersey to introduce public education and this leadership it has retained. Years before the State law was passed that made free education universal in this commonwealth Plainfield taxed itself to build a house in which the elements of an education should be furnished to all its children free of charge. Twenty years later, when there were no free schools in the State, except in one or two of the larger cities, Plainfield established a high school, in which its children might also get a higher education. No one can measure the effect of this enlightened policy in extending the fame of the city and in building up its prosperity. No other single feature has, perhaps, contributed so much to increase its population, rent its houses and create an enlightened public spirit; and each year adds to the number of families drawn here to make a home, by the fame of its schools.

THE PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS.

(By Thomas M. Muir.)

The Industrial edition of the Daily Press, as it is placed in the hands of the public today, not only carries conclusive evidence of the progressive methods in vogue under the present management, but marks another step in the upward flight of a newspaper that for more than twenty-five years has been persistently ascending the journalistic ladder. By adopting a policy of truthfully presenting the news of the day in a clean, unbiased manner and acting as a precentor in municipal matters for the common good of all, it has grown from an infantile publication of four undersized pages to a twentieth century daily, second to no contemporary in the State. It enjoys the absolute confidence of the people to whom it caters and if the success of the past can be taken as a criterion, its development in the future will be unprecedented. The Daily Press of 1913 in reality dates back to its progenitor, The Constitutionalist, founded in 1867, by the firm of Force Brothers; the owners were Albert L. and the late William L. Force, who had been conducting a printing business in Cherry street, since renamed Park avenue. The paper appeared once a week, chronicling the town events in the breezy personal style now obsolete. It carried the Jeffersonian banner of Democracy as its political standard, hurling editorial bombshells in the enemy's camp at the least provocation. Such influential men of the day as Hon. James E. Martine, the late Nathan Harper, the late Job Male and many other political authorities were frequent contributors to its columns. The original quarters soon became too cramped for the paper, necessitating increased facilities. In consequence, the late Andrew Vanderbeek erected the present Vanderbeek Building, at North and Park avenues, from plans suggested by the publishing firm to make an ideal home for a growing weekly. It answered the needs for more than two decades, changes being made at the expiration of that time. It is now the home of the concern which succeeded the original firm. The late James A. Demarest was editing The Constitutionalist in the middle 80's when he realized that the city needed a daily to further the work of the weekly. The first paper to be issued six days a week in Plainfield. The Daily Bulletin, had come and gone, the field being occupied exclusively by The Evening News, established in 1884 by the late Thomas W. Morrison. The latter was Republican in its politics. The Daily Press was accordingly started, at first in the nature of an experiment. The first issue appeared May 10, 1887, a modest little affair printed on pink paper. Just what it was, and to what extent the paper has grown in the intervening twenty-six years, may be seen by a perusal of the fac-simile number of the initial issue printed with the Industrial Edition. Before The Daily Press had reached its first anniversary mark, every adult citizen of Plainfield realized it had become a potent factor in political and municipal happenings. It was fearless in its defense of Democratic principles; built up the local party and never lost an opportunity to harpoon a vulnerable point in the opposition organ.

ALEX. GILBERT,
FORMER MAYOR OF PLAINFIELD
NEW YORK CLEARING HOUSE.

The stinging editorials from the forensic pen of James A. Demerest are remembered today by many beside those who invited the volley. It was he who first suggested Grover Cleveland's nomination for a second term in 1892, and when the late president re-entered the White House in 1893, after his defeat of Harrison, one of his first acts was to appoint the Plainfield editor United States Consul to Brockville, Ontario. But while presiding over the sanctum sanctorum of the Press, "Demmy" as he was known to his friends, directed his efforts to other things beside politics. It was he who urged the erection of a Young Men's Christian Association building that would be a credit to the city and his cry in type every day of "Oh, for a Y. M. C. A!" was directly responsible for the activity that ended when the present handsome structure at Front street and Watchung avenue was completed. At that time also the Daily Press led the progressive people who brought about changes in the fire department that culminated in the efficient corps of the present time. Both W. L. and A. L. Force were members of the old volunteer companies and anything tending to give the city better protection, had their undivided support. In accepting the consulate position, Demarest handed over the editorial reins to Walter Irving Clark, a young New Brunswicker, who had served under him as reporter. He was a born newspaperman and fulfilled every prediction of the wiseacres that he would continue to build up the Press. He introduced many new features, keenly appreciated by the readers; as indicated by increased circulation, and when he resigned in 1895, the little daily had doubled in size and influence. Mr. Clark is now night editor of the Omaha (Neb.) "BEE." His place in Plainfield was taken by William W. St. John, whose unfortunate and untimely death occurred at Bath, New York, last May. What he did for the Press and the city, is still fresh in the minds of thousands. He was in the local editorial chair for five years, originating and carrying out many newspaper enterprises that are still held as standards by the members of the Fourth Estate. He was succeeded by Charles Burdette Morse, now holding a responsible position with a New York printing concern, who had been on the reportorial staff for five years. He in turn gave way in 1903, to the present editorial incumbent, Ralph L. Morrow, now a member of the Plainfield Press Company. The latter came to Plainfield from Bristol, Pa., three years before as a "cub" reporter. Mr. Morrow had graduated from the University of Pennsylvania and had been admitted to practice law in Philadelphia, but he preferred newspaper work, and wanted to learn the business from the ground up. Shortly before becoming editor of the paper he established a news bureau and advertising agency, representing almost all the New York dailies as well as the Newark Evening News. At no time in the history of the Daily Press since the days of its infancy has it relaxed its vigilance in behalf of the people or failed to stimulate healthy agitation for community improvements. In this respect it brought about the removal of the unsightly old freight house and yards opposite the North Avenue Depot, and the erection of the present eastbound station; the present block system of house numbering, the splendid designation of public thoroughfares by the erection of signs at intersections; permanent pavements in the business section; improvements in street railway service and the company's rolling stock; concessions from the Jersey Central Railroad in station and train service during the Warren-Wentz regime, and many other betterments of a like nature. The Daily Press has also persistently and consistently urged a public system of garbage collection and disposal; improvements in street lighting and modern fire fighting apparatus to meet the rapid increase in business and residential building. It has never failed to extend the use of its columns in behalf of the hospital, the Children's Home and other public institutions; raised thousands of dollars for national and local relief funds and exploited scores of worthy charities. In short it has been in the strictest sense of the phrase "The people's paper, and a paper for the people." William L. Force, the senior member of the firm of Force Brothers, died in 1895. The business of the concern was taken over in its entirety by Albert L. Force, who maintained the enterprising business methods of the paper, but changed its political faith from the ranks of the Democrats to that of an independent. In 1911, after forty-four years of untiring regularity in business management, he decided to retire, an action prompted by the knowledge that younger blood and graduates of the modern school of journalism were needed to carry on the work he had fostered from juvenility to maturity. Competition of the keenest character demanded the revolutionizing of the mechanical equipment at almost prohibitive expense for an individual, and the fact that he was approaching the alloted three-score and ten of life were cardinal arguments in prompting his intention. Accordingly he withdrew in favor of the Plainfield Press Company, of which former Governor John Franklin Fort is president; Ralph L. Morrow, vice-president and secretary and Leslie R. Fort, treasurer and registered agent. Mr. Morrow and Leslie Fort are the managers of the publication, the former devoting his entire attention to the editorial desk, and the latter to the business department. Prior to coming to Plainfield Mr. Fort had represented various Metropolitan newspapers at different places in New Jersey, and had been the publisher of the Lakewood Times and Journal for seven years. He also served three years as secretary to the Governor of New Jersey. Since the new concern assumed control, it has been an absolutely new Daily Press that has been placed in the hands of the readers; to paraphrase a familiar saying, the only thing old is the name and the place of publication. A modern Duplex press of great capacity, additional linotype machines and a complete change of typographical dress were immediately added in the mechanical department, involving an outlay of many thousands of dollars. The reporting staff was strengthened to cover every district of the city, and borough, while the chain of suburban correspondents girdles the surrounding territory for twenty miles. Still determined to leave no loophole for the escape of news, the firm introduced the telegraphic ticker with a costly service, tapping the entire world for its latest happenings, an innovation that excited public comment and was quickly copied by rivals. The Press now furnishes its patrons with foreign, national, State and local events up to the hour of going to press, conducts a sporting page second to none in the State; direct legislative correspondence from Trenton and Washington; humorous cartoons and magazine supplements. The present occupant of the editor's chair has introduced the anti-spineless editorial, the contributed Saturday editorial, which permits influential citizens to express their opinions on civic matters; the "Votes for Women," Mothers' Association, Parent Teachers' Association and Anti-Suffrage columns, all of which have their editorial boards. It was the first paper in Plainfield to institute a circulation contest, which sent six young women to Europe for a two months' trip, a stroke of business enterprise of such magnitude that produced State-wide commendation. It gave away three high-grade automobiles in another contest and two pianos in a third, and the latest original feature is the present Industrial Edition of today. Continuing the resume of Daily Press originality and enterprise, it is in order to recount that it was the first to advocate the use of the public schools' auditoriums for educational and political meetings; introduced locally the idea of flashing the election returns by the use of a powerful searchlight, and of giving the results by stereopticon. It introduced locally the posting of big league baseball scores and other athletic results by wire service. The Plainfield fans know only too well that it was the Daily Press that first used the megaphone to report the progress of World's Series Baseball as the plays were wired from the field. On all five days of the 1913 struggle for supremacy between the Giants and Athletics, the crowd of delighted rooters numbered as high as 1,000 a game. Nine minutes after each final score, the paper appeared on the street with a box score and every move made by the players. This feat hung up a new record in the city's journalistic accomplishments, at the same time putting the Daily Press' high, excellent and authoritative sporting page in the limelight of superiority. With such energetic leadership as has always been paramount in the Daily Press departmental heads, it was only a natural course of events, that the editorial end should develop a coterie of splendid newspapermen. Many of its "cubs," as the reportorial novitiates are known in the vernacular of "the city room," have graduated to a front rank in the profession. Fully a score have been drafted to the staffs of metropolitan dailies, while others have become editors or writers in other fields. A retrospective view recalls beside those previously mentioned in the editorial list, Paul Ackerly, who left Plainfield for a Congressional secretaryship and afterward edited various New England papers; Walter Chamberlain, for many years a feature writer on the New York World; Harry Knowles, now on the editing board of the Newark Sunday Call; Allen E. Beals, until recently New Jersey editor on the New York Tribune; Francis K. Anderson, at present editing and publishing his own enterprise, the Five and Ten Cent Trade Magazine; Roland Williams, with the Hardware Journal; Archibald Hacquer, recently made night city editor of the El Paso, Texas, Times, and previously telegraph editor of the Philadelphia Bulletin; John J. McGowan, at present with the Newark Evening News; George E. Firstbrook, with the Newark Star; Richard M. Larned, with the Dramatic News; Alden E. Moore, now Canadian circulation manager of the Saturday Evening Post, and Ferdinand Titsworth, promoted within the last month to circulation manager of Scribner's magazine. This record shows for itself the calibre of the men employed by the management to gather and report the local news. In concluding this brief history of the Daily Press, it would be an unpardonable omission not to mention the names of employees in all departments, who have materially aided the executive in making the paper what it is. Long service has been the rule with more than fifty per cent. of those now on the pay roll. Corra Ryno, the present advertising manager, has been with the plant for thirty-one years. He entered the employ of Force Brothers as an office boy and by attention to business and aptness for the work, rose to his responsible position of today. Edward C. Searing, foreman of the composing room, is a close second to Mr. Ryno, having a record of thirty years. Walter C. Dobbins has been in the composing and editorial departments in turn for twenty-eight years, while Charles Hewitt has spent the same period of time in press room, as assistant pressman. Thomas Lynch has been foreman of the press room for twenty-seven years and Chauncy F. Colthar has been in various ends of the plant for twenty years, now being bookkeeper.

GEORGE L. BABCOCK.
PRESIDENT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Other "veterans" are Henry Dresselt, linotype operator, eighteen years; Robert Scott, assistant foreman of the composing room, sixteen years, and the writer, who has been with the paper in various capacities since 1890. Joseph S. Hurlbert, who recently resigned the foremanship of the job printing department to take up fruit farming in Colorado, completed forty years of service before leaving. Two former employees, Michael DeCourcey and Gilbert Martin, were in the composing room thirty-five and thirty years respectively, while Charles S. Cook, known to everyone in the city as "Cookie," at the time of his death in 1904, was completing his thirty-seventh year. At present the efficient staff producing the Daily Press, aside from the officers of the corporation are in the business office, Corra Ryno, advertising manager; Chauncey F. Colthar, bookkeeper; Robert E. McDonagh, circulation manager; Miss Ida M. Conover, clerk; H. B. Berse, collector; Joseph H. Mitchell, messenger. The reportorial staff consists of Walter C. Dobbins, James J. McNamee and William H. Schooley, while the composing room force is Edward C. Searing, foreman, Robert Scott and Thomas Heron, ad. compositor; Winferd C. Cram, machinist operator, Henry Dresselt and Frederick Meeker, linotype operators; Herbert Schinkel, "devil." In the press room Thomas J. Lynch and Charles Hewitt hold forth.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

GEORGE L. BABCOCK PRESIDENT.

There is no single civic institution that does so much toward advancing the growth of a city, by calling attention to its various advantages and aiding in the development of its resources, as a progressive commercial association made up of active business and professional men who are willing to give generously of their ability, time and means for the benefit of the entire community in which they live. Most cities have commercial associations of some kind, but comparatively few of them count as a great force, for there is much truth in the old adage, "What is everybody's business is nobody's business." Thousands have failed of inertia or have become mere social clubs for this reason. Plainfield, fortunately, is not in this class, and is a distinct exception. The Chamber of Commerce, as it now exists, is composed of many of the leading business and professional men of Plainfield and its neighbor North Plainfield, strong virile personalities, who have willingly put their shoulder to the wheel and are doing their full duty toward making the city a bigger and a better place along every line of endeavor. The organization consists of 160 members, belonging to every walk of life, from the millionaire manufacturer and banker to the modest retailer who has just started on his way. It serves no individual or selfish purpose, all its efforts being centered toward the good of the whole community, the members recognizing that what benefits one benefits all. Its headquarters, located in the Boice-Runyon Building, are comfortble and commodious, and from there literature setting forth the attractions of Plainfield, is sent broadcast to all parts of the country, and there regular and special meetings are held. The Chamber of Commerce of Plainfield, is not an old organization and has all the vigor that belong to youth. It was organized at a joint meeting of the Merchants' Association and Board of Trade held on November 21, 1910. The object was to combine the two organizations to promote the general welfare of the citizens of Plainfield, North Plainfield and vicinity, particularly to adopt ways and means for the commercial, industrial and municipal advancement of the city, by affording a field for the exercise of concerted thought and activity. On the anniversary of Lincoln's birth the Chamber held its first annual banquet, which was attended by most of the prominent business men of the city and at which a number of men of national reputation were present and made addresses. Since its formation a number of lectures have been given before the members on various topics of municipal interest and various requirements of civic life have been discussed and acted upon. It has considered questions appertaining to the consolidation of the city with the Borough of North Plainfield, has been the means of establishing an auxiliary to the Chamber, composed of local merchants for the purpose of establishing a better credit system, has identified itself with the passage of a commission form of government law, the better equalization of taxes, better street lighting, the bringing of high class factories here to provide work for the young men and women of the city at good wages, and in fact has been connected with every movement inaugurated for the progress of Plainfield. Connected with the organization are ward auxiliaries, composed of merchants living in each of the city's wards, who suggest measures for the benefit of their particular sections. Probably the greatest and most far-reaching work that has been done, however, has been in advertising the city's many advantages by means of handsome illustrated booklets, circulars and letters. Three prizes of $100, $50 and $25 were offered this spring for the best plan of advertising the city, and a number of valuable suggestions resulted. These are only a few of the many things the members of this healthy "live wire" organization have accomplished in less than three years.

HON. PERCY H. STEWART.

MAYOR OF PLAINFIELD.

There is no asset of greater value to a city than a clean, progressive government, conducted along modern lines by men who have the best interests of the entire community at heart. Without such a government no municipality can hope to grow and the fact that Plainfield is fortunate in this respect has had much to do with its remarkable progress along every line of endeavor. The Mayor, as the head of the city government, has much to do with bringing about this state of affairs, and a great deal depends upon the character and calibre of the man who occupies this position. It is an office that is too often handed over by political managers in many cities to some incompetent as a reward for political services rendered. Such incumbents rarely take an intelligent interest in the performance of their duties, they do absolutely nothing for the progress of the city and indeed, more often, by their mistakes and lack of ability retard its development. Plainfield, for years, has elected to the position some of her most substantial and progressive business and professional men and at the election last November kept the record clean by electing Mayor Percy H. Stewart, by a handsome majority. Politics played but little part in the election, for Mayor Stewart is a Democrat and the city is normally Republican. Before his election Mayor Stewart had never before held, or aspired, to public office. He had always, like every other good citizen, taken an interest in the public affairs of the city, but never an active part in politics and his nomination came in the nature of a surprise to many. But though he had no political experience in public affairs he has measured up to the mark and to the high standard set by his predecessors. Mayor Stewart is by profession a lawyer with an office in New York, going into the city every morning and returning in the afternoon, unless his official duties require his presence in Plainfield. He is a man of liberal education and wide culture, which has been broadened by extended travel both at home and abroad. After attending John Leals School For Boys on Front street, he entered Yale, graduating in the class of '90. He afterward attended the Law School of Columbia University and upon his admission to the bar began practice in New York. Mr. Stewart has always taken a great interest in athletics, especially baseball, and as a student gained considerable reputation as a pitcher. He has always retained an interest in out-of-door sports and horses. At the last Horse Show given in Plainfield, he was a member of the committee, and is a member of the Country Club. Mayor Stewart is married, Mrs. Stewart having been Miss Eleanor Cochran of Yonkers and lives in one of the handsomest residents in the city, located at 563 West Eighth street, to which a large addition has recently been made. Mrs. Stewart goes much into society and is also interested in social work. She takes especial interest in the work that is being done by the Young Woman's Christian Association of this city. Mayor Stewart also takes great interest in public institutions and is vice-president of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital. He is public spirited and optimistic, and has the greatest confidence in the future of the city of which he is the progressive chief executive.

PLAINFIELD'S MANY CHURCHES.

Plainfield has always been noted for the number and beauty of its churches, many of them comparing favorably with the great edifices of New York and other large cities. It is distinctly a city of church goers and on the Sabbath there are few vacant places to be found in any of the buildings. There are nine Baptist, four Methodist Episcopal, two Protestant Episcopal, three Episcopal, five Presbyterian, three Reformed, a Congregational, a Friends' Meeting House, two Roman Catholic, a Unitarian, three Lutheran, a Hebrew Synagogue, Seventh Day Adventists, First Church of Christ, Scientists, and a number of missions.

REV. E. VICARS STEVENSON

RECTOR GRACE P. E. CHURCH

In all there is a total of 48 buildings devoted to religious worship, besides the Young Men's Christian Association, Young Women's Christian Association, Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Young Men's Hebrew Association, the Salvation Army and the Rescue Mission. All of these are well supported and are doing a fine work along the best and most advanced lines. Plainfield is, and has a right to be, proud of its churches, and there is nothing that does more to add to its charm and attractiveness.

THE BOARD OF TRADE.

WILLIAM JEFFERY, PRESIDENT.

What a young, aggressive business organization, with modern ideals and methods can do for a city is being demonstrated in Plainfield by the Board of Trade, which was organized here in April of this year. Although the city has had a Board of Trade for a quarter of a century the present organization is practically an entirely new one, having been brought into existence as the result of a call of over 100 business men last spring. As yet, but five regular meetings have been held, the membership has been doubled, however, and is now over 200, is growing rapidly and the business men who have already joined expect it to reach 500 in a year. The campaign to accomplish this laudible object is on and the prospects are most encouraging. The rooms of the Board are at Firemen's Hall, 109 Park avenue, and are conveniently arranged. The officers of the organization are: President, William Jeffery; first vice-president, Herman Schwed, second vice-president, Louis K. Hyde; third vice-president, William L. Saunders; fourth vice-president, A. Stehman Herr; treasurer, Eugene M. Laing; secretary, Lamar Van Sycke]. There is also a board of trustees consisting of Messrs. Herman Schwed, Arthur E. Force, A. S. Herr, Edmund Rushmore and J. V. E. Vanderhoef, of which President Jeffery is chairman ex officio, as he is of all the other committees. About the best idea of the objects of this live wire organization can be derived from an editorial written by President Jeffery and published in the "Daily Press" of August 4, in part: "A Board of Trade," he wrote, "made out of old planks would be on a par with the old wooden bridges which up-to-date freeholders are discarding for new structures of steel and concrete. The Plainfield Board of Trade is a concrete organization brought into existence by the irony of fate; it has a membership of two hundred men. Our officers are men of experience in civic work and, most important of all, they do their work with the wholesome impulse, light, and courage of 'true civic spirit'—and they are 'on the job.' The least I can do is to thank them, publicly, for their active interest, thoroughness and loyalty to the organization. It is through the efforts and support of such men only that the Board of Trade or any other civic organization can be made a success." Here are some of the new features in the program of this organization which will not be found in many others, if indeed in any. The purpose of the Board is stated by President Jeffery to be: "To give to the public pointed and accurate information as to 'what is doing' touching their interests in city affairs; to formulate public opinion on subjects and problems that are sorely trying to the city and borough officials; to provide our Mayors and Councils with a public support upon which they can confidently base needed improvements without having to fear, immoderately, the wolf cry, 'Look out for the taxes'; to give officials such support in the proper execution of their work that they may be actually relieved from the fear of silent, mischievous, punitive, political influence and intrigue.; last, but not least, it will, thorough publicity, secure to every fair official who is doing his duty, freedom from molestation, and eradicate the convincing influences. That much of this is rampant at present is not to be denied—it will be cut out through fear of exposure." There are many other things the new Board intends to do. Among these is a public park about Tier's Pond, better sidewalks of concrete, the improvement of the streets about the railway stations and reducing the cost of living by encouraging the farmers to bring their produce to the city.

THE VITAPHONE CO.

MANUFACTURERS OF TALKING MACHINES AND RECORDS.

One of the flourishing industries of Plainfield, and one that promises to play a most important part in its development is the Vitaphone Company, makers of talking machines and records. Its factory here is already one of the largest units in the industrial life of the city and the business is rapidly growing. One of Plainfield's comparatively new enterprises, having only been established here in the latter part of June, 1912. The plant where the Vitaphone is manufactured is located within a stone's throw of the Netherwood Station of the New Jersey Central and is splendidly equipped for making all parts of the wonderful machine, which has been pronounced by hundreds of music lovers to be superior to any talking machine ever placed on the market. Although the talking machine during the past 20 years has been more or less familiar in the musical world, the main attraction was the supreme novelty of hearing the human voice issue from an inanimate combination of wood and metal. However, intensely interesting, because of this seeming reversal of natural laws, the strident nasal twang and various weird voices imposed upon the sweet strains of the songster and instrument alike, have rendered the reproduction so lacking in true harmony and so distressing to the sensitive ear that no talking machine ever attained its proper place as the one musical instrument, combining every form of music, until the introduction of the Vitaphone. In this machine many important problems have been solved and a perfection has been reached attained by no other instrument. It renders with marvellous fidelity the soft vibrations of the violin, the sweet cadence of the 'cello, the full string melody of the orchestra and every voice modulation of the great artists in the realm of music. No other instrument unites such a pleasing variety of entertainment. The Vitaphone reproduces the original tone in purity, strength and detail and no metallic parts hamper, diminish or partly destroy the skill of the artist. When the company established itself in Plainfield, less than 18 months ago, it was upon a comparatively modest scale, the original plant being only 36x150 feet, but the merits of its product was immediately recognized and since then a new addition, 40x175 feet, has been erected, providing much greater facilities. The demand is such that other buildings will in the near future have to be erected for which there is ample space, the company owning a large plat of land, 207x560 feet, adjoining its plant. The officers of the Vitaphone Company are all men of wide experience in talking machine production. Mr. C. B. Repp, president of the company, and inventor of the Vitaphone has for the past 18 years been one of the leading figures in talking machine circles in the world and has, during that time, invented many improvements. He was for a number of years connected with the Columbia Graphophone Company, and is an acknowledged authority. Unlike most inventors, Mr. Repp is also a successful business man. He is a native of Maryland. Mr. Archie H. London, the vice-president, is president of the Elmira Foundry Co. and has long been one of the leading men in his field of endeavor in the United States. Mr. J. H. Greene, Jr., the treasurer, is a resident of Plainfield, where he has lived for 20 years, and is a business man of New York, where he has large financial interests. Mr. I. L. Cochrane, the assistant treasurer, has charge of the export business and advertising and recently returned from Europe where he went in the interest of the company. Mr. H. N. McMenimen, the secretary and general manager, is a pioneer in the disc talking machine business, having been connected with it for the last 20 years and there are few men more familiar with its every detail. He began when almost a boy, first with the Graphophone Company and then with the Victor, being connected with the latter company a number of years, occupying a responsible positions. About five years ago he began the manufacture of horns, cabinets and accessories in Philadelphia, continuing the business successfully until February, 1912, when he came to Plainfield to take the active management of the Vitaphone Co. Since making his home here Mr. McMenimen has been actively identified with the business life of the city. His confidence in the future of Plainfield is unbounded and he belongs to that type of citizen who believes in doing his individual share to bring about a practical realization of his confidence. Mr. McMinamen is a director of the Chamber of Commerce and secretary of the Civic Organizations of Plainfield. The officers of the Vitaphone Company are all progressive and public spirited men who have shown their faith in the city's future in the most substantial way by making investments here.

THE BOY SCOUT AND HIS RELATION TO HIS CITY.

BY ALLEN E. BEALS, BOY SCOUT COMMISSIONER.

There was a resounding crash, followed by a half-suppressed moan in the rear of the Widow Blank's house before dawn one morning recently. The startled woman jumped up quickly and looked out upon the slowly rising form of her fourteen-year-old son, John, painfully extricating himself from a broken gutter leader. "What in the world are you up to now?" she screamed in a half frenzy, recalling sub-consciously the numerous scrapes her boy had been in since his father died. "You come right in here, d'y'hear?" John came. Shamefacedly he stood before his perplexed parent, whose patience during a hard struggle for a livelihood for herself and four children, of whom John was the oldest, was about strained to the breaking point. When John began to show signs of incorrigibility the heroic little woman's heart was made heavier than usual. Stories of how he used to hide behind bushes and spatter mud over the freshly washed clothes of Mrs. Jones, as they hung on the line to dry were still fresh in her memory. Had her boy taken to night mauraudingunbeknown to her? She proposed to find out. The year that had passed since her boy had joined the Scouts singularly free from worry. She had rejoiced, and it had made her burden far lighter, in the knowledge that John had reformed. Was it all a cruel deception? John was at first inclined to be secretive. His mother recalled the time when he was studying to pass his Tenderfoot examination that she had reviewed his recitation of his Scout law. "John," she said, changing her tone from one of anger to one of persuasiveness, and looking him right in the eye, "a scout is truthful and he is also trustworthy. Are you a good enough scout to come out in a manly way and tell me what you were doing with all your clothes on at 4 o'clock in the morning when I thought you were safely in bed?" "I was on my way to help Mrs. Jones. Mother, I'm not only a good enough scout to tell the truth, but I'm man enough to take my medicine if I have done wrong. I was only trying to do my good turn that I am expected to do every day. Mrs. Jones may tell you whether I am speaking the truth. I'm sorry if I deceived you. I did not intend to. I did not want you or anybody else to know what I was doing. The other people would not have understood because of the trouble I had gotten into before and I would have been kidded to death. I didn't want to be mollycoddled, just because I tried to square myself with Mrs. Jones." The rest of the confession was lost in tears. What Mrs. Blank learned from Mrs. Jones was not only a revelation to her, but it meant more to her than a golden fortune. It was as a shaft of sunshine let into a darkened place. It made her proud of her boy and a strange inward happiness was borne of that pride. Briefly, this is what Mrs. Blank learned: Mrs. Jones' children had all been ill. Her weekly work of doing family washing was her only source of income. Four sick children, the youngest, a baby born after her husband had deserted her, required much attention, but the washing had to be done in order that body and soul of her family be kept together. Her neighbors were as poor as herself. Pride prevented her from calling upon them for help. One morning the boy who had been the bane of her already hard life appeared at her door a little after dawn, with an armful of wood all cut for range use. He said he wanted to square past accounts. Could he help by making her fire. He had dressed his own little brother and thought he could dress one or two of the oldest children. He thought he could cook some cereal, because he had to cook to pass his second class exams as a Scout, and he might as well practice if she'd let him. He was sure he could heat water for the day's washing and he'd build a trough so that the hot water could run from the kettle on the stove so she would not have to carry it to the tubs just outside the kitchen door in the yard. He knew where he could find some kindling, too. And when he got through school in the afternoon he would take the biggest boy out in his wood wagon to give her a chance to do her washing undisturbed. "And do you know," said the grateful Mrs. Jones to the surprised Mrs. Blank, "he's kept it up for two weeks now. This was to be his last day because the children are all well now. I thought you knew about it." There are more than a hundred boys in this city between the ages of twelve and eighteen years who are trained to this sense of helpfulness. Gettysburg demonstrated the Scout spirit for a whole world, but the good turns that every Scout does secretly every day tells even a greater story for better citizenship. The Great Master said that even though a good deed is done to the least of His children, it is nevertheless done to Him. The Boy Scout knows no caste in doing his good turn. Neither does he take any reward. A Scout does not take tips. A Scout's honor is his stock in trade. He will not allow it to be sullied. It is not honorable for him to swear. It is not honorable for him to gamble on baseball results nor on any other kind of a contest. It is not honorable for him to smoke unless he has first obtained his father's consent. He is brave enough to do the right thing even though his companions chide him. A fellow who is brave enough to stand unafraid for that which is good is brave enough to be a hero under any circumstances. A Scout cannot be a moral coward. If he errs he is honorable enough to take his medicine; not to shift the blame on innocent shoulders. He is loyal, hence he will not countenance coarse expressions that reflect upon his parentage, his church or his God. Scoutcraft is a very practical application of the theory brotherly love. Once a Scout, always a Scout. There are 300,000 in America. In the world there are more than a million. The Scout badge is a passport to the fellowship of any Scout troop in the world. The stranger who bears the badge of a Scout is never without friends in time of need anywhere and the National Headquarters in New York, is a clearing house through which the standing of any visiting Scout can at once be determined. It is a citizen-builder for every town in the country. Its application to Plainfield is found in that Scout law which bespeaks loyalty. Every Plainfield Scout is a booster for Plainfield. His constant effort is so to live that he, for one, will be a credit to his city. By the very oath that he subscribes to before he can become a Scout, he promises to "do my duty to God, my country and to obey the Scout law." He also promises to keep himself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight, three pledges that alone will make, not only for a better citizen, but for a better community because there is strength in numbers and there are more than a hundred Scouts in Plainfield. The Boy Scout is an unofficial policeman, a non-commissioned fireman, a guide to the stranger, a help to the meek. If he sees corruption he is in honor bound to take the proper action to check it. In case of fire he has been instructed in advance to know just what is the right thing to do at the right time. In the time of emergency the Scout will not be found among those who grope and wonder what to do when precious moments are fleeting. He is trained in civic pride. He is taught to stand for what he believes to be right regardless of what the crowd does. The full exercise of this prerogative in every Scout is what makes him as brave to dare to do right as other instructions help him to be physically brave in the emergency. Recognizing the tremendous influence for good that a Boy Scout can exercise over a community of boys the State Fish and Game Commission has recently designated picked Boy Scouts to act as members of a fish and game patrol, one for each community and district in the State and the Department at Trenton has issued to such boys as the Commissioner in each city designates, official badges, the holders of which have power to bring about the apprehension of offenders against the fish and game laws of New Jersey. The Boy Scout Movement does not represent merely a good time for its members. True, they have hikes and bully good times, but there is a serious side to Scoutcraft, and that serious side might be summed up in the keynote of this edition: "Do it for Plainfield."

STONE & LUCKEY.

PHOTOGRAPHERS.

Photography has fairly earned its right to be classed with the fine arts, for the successful photographer of today must have the artistic sense highly developed, or he cannot keep pace with the tremendous progress that has been made of recent years. The art has reached a perfection not dreamed of by the genius Deguire, its inventor, and every year shows greater progress. The leading photographers of Plainfield is the firm of Stone & Luckey, whose studio is located at 125 East Front street. Its equipment is thoroughly modern in every particular, there is nothing old or out-of-date about the place, and it has been pronounced by people in a position to know, the best appointed gallery in New Jersey. This, and the fact that its proprietors thoroughly understand every detail of their art, produces results in every department of photography, of the highest class. Besides the fine portraits produced at the studio which are as good as any made in New York, the firm has built up a large business in out-of-door and commercial photography, and the excellent pictures in this special historical and trade edition of THE DAILY PRESS are good examples of its work along this line. Stone & Luckey's establishment occupies two floors, covering 2,400 square feet of the building 125 East Front street, the first being given up to amateur work, the developing work and framing, while on the floor above is the well-lighted and handsomely equipped studio and general reception room. Nothing has been forgotten or left undone to make the establishment a model home of modern photography of the highest class, and that the efforts of the young gentlemen who comprise the firm are appreciated, is shown by the fact that its business is constantly increasing among the discriminating people of Plainfield and all this section. A specialty is made of children's portraits, of which the accompaning portrait is an example. The partners are Messrs. P. F. Stone and H. L. Luckey, both of whom are thoroughly practical men who give their personal attention to all work entrusted to them. Mr. Stone, who was born near Boston, came to Plainfield about 16 years ago from Newark, and established himself in business. His fine work soon attracted attention, and in a short time he had a clientele of lovers of good pictures composed of many of the most prominent people of this part of Jersey. Mr. Stone is a thorough photographic artist of the modern type. Mr. Luckey, the junior member, is also an expert in his calling, and was formerly in business for himself higher up the street. He is a native of the State, having been born in New Market. He early heard, and heeded the call of the West, however, and for five years lived on his grandfather's ranch in North Dakota. He also resided for a time in Wisconsin. Mr. Luckey is especially skilled in out-door work, and his pictures have attracted much attention. He is a son of Dr. Luckey, the well-known dentist of this city. Both the members of the firm are progressive citizens who are actively identified with the business life of the city and are always ready and willing to do their share toward its advancement.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF.

INSURANCE AND REAL ESTATE.

There could be no better guarantee of reliability and straightforward dealing than the fact that a concern has successfully carried on business in the same city for over 40 years, retaining its old patrons and constantly adding new ones. It is a record few business men possess, and those who do have a right to be proud of it. One of the few in Plainfield is Mr. William A. Woodruff, one of the leading real estate and insurance men of this section, whose office is located at the corner of Park avenue and Front street. Mr. Woodruff began business in Plainfield in 1872 when the place was little more than a typical Jersey country town. Few of its inhabitants had the remotest idea that it would become the beautiful and prosperous city it is today. Mr. Woodruff was one of the few, and his confidence was not misplaced. He has been identified with the growth of Plainfield ever since he came here from Rahway, his birth place, and no one has been more active in assisting in the growth of the city during this long period. Plainfield owes much to its real estate men for bringing its attractions and advantages to the attention of the outside world and to none more than Mr. Woodruff, who has always given generously of his time and means to accomplish results. He has been connected with some of the largest and most important real estate transactions in this city and numbers among his patrons some of its largest property owners. Mr. Woodruff does a general real estate business in all its branches, buying, selling and leasing city, suburban and country property, managing estates, collecting rents, negotiating loans on bonds and mortgages. He also carries on one of the largest insurance agencies in Plainfield, writing all kinds of policies in the best and safest companies. He represents here such standard insurance companies as the Atlas, American, Commercial Union, Providence, Washington, Springfield, the West Chester, Fidelity and Deposit, the Metropolitan Casualty Co., the American Casualty Co., and the Ocean. These companies, with assets amounting to hundreds of millions, stand at the very head of the list. Mr. Woodruff was born in Rahway, but has lived here nearly all his life and is assisted in the conduct of his business by his son, Mr. F. E. Woodruff. They are public spirited and progressive citizens who are always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to any cause that is for the welfare of old Plainfield. They are among the progressive and public spirited citizens of Plainfield and are ever ready to do anything in their power for its advancement.

C. THORP.

ANTIQUE FURNITURE OF THE VERY BEST KIND.

There is no dimunition in the demand for genuine antique furniture and for years it has been far greater than the supply, so much so, in fact, that the market has been flooded with clever imitations, that would deceive any one but an expert. In purchasing antiques the man or woman who is not an expert, and few of us are, the only safety lies in dealing with an acknowledged authority on antiques, one who has made the subject a study for years and also one who has made a reputation for square and straightforward dealing. Such a dealer is Mr. Christopher Thorp, whose attractive and splendidly stocked warerooms are located at 321 West Front street. Mr. Thorp has by far the finest stock of antique furniture, pictures and bric-a-brac in this city and section, and his place has long been headquarters for collectors. His trade is by no means confined to Plainfield, many of his customers coming here from distant points to select fine pieces from his stock, knowing by experience that bargains are always to be found at his establishment. Mr. Thorp is now 82 years old, a remarkably well preserved man, and could readily pass for 60.

NURSES' HOME.

He is a native of England, but came to this country as a young man. For 18 years he lived in Philadelphia before coming to Plainfield with the business life of which he has been identified for the past 42 years. For many years Mr. Thorp was the leading builder of this section, and scores of the most substantial structures in the city are monuments to his skill. He is also the owner of the Thorp Disinfectant Manufacturing Co., manufacturers of Thorp's Instantaneous Disinfectant and Deodorizer, a standard article that has been on the market for forty years, and has a wide sale. Mr. Thorp went into the antique business about 16 years ago, and his success is largely due to the fact that he is himself a lover of antiques and has always been a student and collector of them. He is the last remaining member of the Orthodox Society of Friends in Plainfield, who at one time were numerous here and worshiped on Front street near Washington, where the meeting house, now converted into a residence, still stands in a fine state of preservation. Mr. Thorp is one of the best known citizens of Plainfield and has been active in every movement that has been inaugurated for its advancement.

HON. JAMES EDGAR MARTINE.

UNITED STATES SENATOR FROM NEW JERSEY.

Plainfield is the home of United States Senator James Edgar Martine and there are few men, women and children in the city who do not know him either personally or when they meet him on the street. He is a likable man, a true Democrat, both in his principles and his manner of life. Senatorial dignity sits lightly on his shoulders at least when he is in his home city and his progress down Front street or Park avenue is in the nature of an ovation, for he speaks to almost everyone he meets and never seems to forget a name. Small instances sometimes give an inkling to a man's character that big ones rarely do. In the Senatorial Office Building at Washington every Senator has a room and on the door is his name plate. On that of Senator Martine is the sign "Walk Right In." This goes to show what manner of man he is. He recognizes the fact that he is sent to Washington to represent the people and he wants them to tell him what they want, without having to fight a doorkeeper or await the pleasure of a private secretary. Senator Martine is a farmer and lives at 1100 Watchung avenue on the outskirts of the city. He has always been a Democrat and never made any concealment of the fact that he always wanted to go to the United States Senate. He is a fighting Democrat, has always been active during the campaigns and no matter how dark the prospects were for the party his faith never wavered and he always saw ultimate success, when even the most optimistic leaders lost hope. His success in getting what he wanted by hard work and dogged perseverance should be an inspiration to every young man in the country. Senator Martine has made an excellent representative at Washington as everybody knew he would. He is a working Senator and gives all of his time to the performance of his duties, so his old friends in Plainfield do not see him as much as they would like, but they never fail to call upon him when they go to the Capital, and he is always glad to see them. Senator Martine is a native of New York city, where he was born in August, 1850, and has therefore just passed his sixty-third year. He was educated at the public schools, but owing to the death of his father, was compelled to leave when he was thirteen years old. He came to Plainfield as a young man and is one of its most successful citizens. At the primary election for the choice for the United States Senate, he received 48,458 votes. Senator Martine's term expires in March 3, 1917, but he may always be depended upon to be in the thick of the fight for Democratic principles whether he is returned to the Senate or not.

FRIENDS' MEETING HOUSE.

ERECTED 1787-8.

The one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the Religious Society of Friends were recently celebrated in their quaint old meeting-house on Watchung avenue. R. D. Williams, chairman for the day, read the Scriptures, followed by an address by Mayor Stewart. Margaret F. Vail read the historical sketch. From the annals of their meetings and the public records of old Essex and Middlesex counties, the names of the following Quaker families are shown among those who, over a hundred years ago, bought land in this vicinity, cleared the forest, built homes and peopled the country with men and women who lived here, and wrought and died and left worthy descendants to transmit their names to posterity. These are the family names of the founders of the Plainfield Society of Friends: Shotwells, Moores, Laings, Thorns, Wilsons, Fitz-Randolphs, Kinseys, Vails, Fields, Smiths, Marshes, Websters, Pounds, Robinsons and others.

MEETING HOUSE OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS—ERECTED 1788.

PLAINFIELD'S NEWSPAPERS.

The press of Plainfield is clean, up-to-date and enterprizing and is doing its full share toward bringing to the attention of the investor and home-seeker the attractions and advantages of this city and section. There are two daily afternoon papers, The Press and the Courier-News, a weekly, the North Plainfield Review, edited by David J. Carney, known to his intimates as "Uncle Dave," the New Jersey farmer, the Royal Craftsman, the Sabbath Recorder and the Plainfield Business Collegian.

F. C. LANGHORNE.

PHOTOGRAPHER.

For the last thirty-six years Mr. F. C. Langhorne has been taking the pictures of the people of Plainfield and this section of New Jersey, and that his work has been most satisfactory is shown by the fact that he has retained his old customers and is constantly adding new ones. In no other field has there been greater changes during this time than in photography, and he has kept pace with them all. His studio at 105-107 East Front street is fitted up with all the latest appliances, and his customers are among the most discriminating in this section. Mr. Langhorne has nearly 40,000 negatives in his collection, by far the most complete of any photographer in the United States. He also copies and enlarges old pictures and does crayons, water colors and oil work. A specialty is made of instantaneous pictures of children. Mr. Langhorne is a native of New York City, but has been identified with the business and social life of Plainfield for many years. He is the only survivor of the Original Jolly Corks, from which the Elks sprung, and his picture was among those placed in the corner stone of the beautiful Elks Hall, recently completed in this city. Mr. Langhorne is one of the progressive and substantial citizens of Plainfield, and has always done his share towards its advancement along the best lines.

STANDARD AUTOMOBILE & TIRE CO., INC.

BUICK AND FORD MOTOR CARS.

Every season an immense advance is made in the manufacture of automobiles, and the general use of the machine for both business and pleasure is rapidly becoming an accomplished fact. The history of the bicycle is being repeated on a larger scale, and prices are rapidly becoming more reasonable, as manufacturing problems are solved and new inventions made. The leader in bringing about a reduction in price for high-class cars is the Ford Motor Company, represented in Plainfield by the Standard Automobile & Tire Company, whose garage, salesrooms and repair shops are located at 42, 44 and 46 Somerset street. This is by far the handsomest garage and also one of the best equipped in this section. Most garages are gloomy, ill-lighted and badly ventilated, but that of the Standard Automobile & Tire Company is a distinct exception, being bright, attractive and inviting. Especial attention has been given to sanitary conditions, the building and appointments are thoroughly modern, and every comfort and convenience has been provided for the automobilist. Fronting 50 feet on Somerset street the garage extends back a distance of 72 feet, providing a floor space of 3,600 feet. In an L, 30x20, the splendidly equipped repair shops are located, the fine vulcanizing plant has commodious quarters in the basement and the stock room for tires and all kinds of accessories and requisites is on the second floor of the handsome building, which was erected expressly for the purpose for which it is used, along new and original lines. The Standard Automobile & Tire Company are distributors of both Buick and Ford cars, neither of which need any introduction to the automobile world, for they are standards and particular favorites in this section. The Standard Automobile & Tire Company was incorported last year, the officers being Messrs. J. J. Slevin, president; H. P. Voseller, vice-president and treasurer, and John Pedeflows, secretary. Mr. Slevin does not take any active part in the business having other interests that claim his attention, but Messrs. Voseller and Pedeflows are both experienced automobile men, and devote their entire time to building up this flourishing concern. The officers are among the most substantial and progressive men of Plainfield and there is no movement for its advancement but what has their earnest and generous support.

HUGH REILLY.

PRACTICAL PLUMBER.

Sanitary plumbing has probably made a greater advance during the last decade than almost any other line of the building trades, although the progress of all of them has been remarkable. The house today not equipped with sanitary plumbing is rare indeed and it would be exceedingly difficult for the owner to find a tenant. The same thing may be said of heating. The day of the open fireplace long since passed, that of the heating stove is rapidly passing and no modern house is now considered complete unless furnaces, steam or hot air heating has been installed. These systems have, though the first cost is considerable, been found much more economical in the end. One of the leading plumbers and heating experts in Plainfield is Mr. Hugh Reilly, whose establishment is located at 148 East Fifth street. Although he has been in business on his own account but a comparatively short time, having been started about five years ago, Mr. Reilly has succeeded by industry and enterprise in getting as patrons some of the most prominent property holders, builders and contractors in this section. There has never been keener competition than there is at the present time in the plumbing, heating and tinning business, and success means the hardest kind of work. Mr. Reilly is a thoroughly practical man, he understands every detail of his business and gives all work entrusted to his care his personal attention. There is no job too large or too small that he is not prepared to do it in the most workman-like manner. Mr. Reilly is a public spirited and progressive gentleman, who is always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to any cause that is for Plainfield's benefit. He is a member of the Board of Health.

PROCTOR'S AND THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE.

It is a peculiar and significant fact that strangers visiting a city for the first time frequently gauge the moral, social and industrial standards of the community by its theatres and the class of entertainment they provide. A population of intelligent, independent and law-abiding people will neither tolerate or patronize inferior and suggestive amusements, insisting upon nothing else but wholesome and educating diversions for themselves and children. A glance about a playhouse suffices to show what sort of people constitute the backbone of the town. If any visitors have been judging Plainfield through this medium, it is safe to say the city has benefited by it. It has been particularly fortunate in possessing theatres second to none in the State, furnishing only the leading, legitimate plays, the pick of vaudeville acts and photo plays passed upon by the American Board of Censors. Nothing cheap or tawdry is offered with the result that all classes meet daily on the common ground of moral recreation. Much of the credit for the elevated tone of Plainfield's theatre is due Harry S. Sanderson, of the firm of Proctor and Sanderson, lessees of the two local playhouses, the Plainfield and Proctor's. Mr. Sanderson came here five years ago, a short period of time in itself but long enough for him to demonstrate that he is a theatrical man in every respect. For thirty-five years he personally conducted Tony Pastor's theatre on 14th street, New York, the best known vaudeville house in America, previous to which he acquainted himself with every phase of the theatrical game. He makes his home in Cranford, and being such a close neighbor was able, to study conditions locally. He believed that Plainfield wanted good entertainment at nominal cost and accordingly on December 2nd, 1908, re-opened the former Stillman Music Hall, which had been closed for seven years. Under the new name of "Proctor's," personally managed by Mr. Sanderson, and presenting vaudeville and moving pictures, it quickly became an important factor in the city's amusements. Less than a year later—or to be exact, on August 15th, 1909, Proctor and Sanderson took over the Plainfield Theatre, then owned and conducted by William J. Counihan, on a five year lease. The same policy of the best that could be secured being none too good, practiced in managing the Proctor house was continued although the class of attractions was purely the legitimate. Mr. Sanderson has remained in constant personal attendance, studying the wants of the local amusement lovers and supplying them to the best of his ability. Today the two houses are enjoying a successful career and are regarded by other cities as the acme of playhouse perfection.

STRAUSMAN-KRAUTHAMER CO.

MANUFACTURERS OF CHILDREN'S AND MISSES' CLOAKS.

Industrially Plainfield is probably growing faster as a centre for the manufacture of women's, misses' and children's garments than in any other direction, and of recent years a number of factories have been started here giving employment to hundreds of men and women, who make good wages, are industrious and intelligent. One of the most successful of these concerns is the Strausman-Krauthamer Co., manufacturers of children's and misses' cloaks at 400-402 Watchung avenue. The factory, located on the third floor of the new Marshall Laundry Building, is unusually bright, well-lighted and sanitary and every comfort and convenience is supplied to the employes, who average about 35 at all seasons. The room fronts 50 feet on Watchung avenue, extending along Fourth street 110 feet, providing a large floor space which is equipped with the latest improved machinery. About 25 machines are in constant service and the product, medium and fine cloaks, is sold for the most part through the well-known house of Ritter Bros., of New York, and at the present time they are giving the public the benefit of their wholesale prices at retail. Especial attention is called to the unusually good sanitary surroundings, under which Strausman-Krauthamer clothing is made, no sweat shop methods are in vogue in this factory and every garment that leaves it will bear the closest inspection both as to workmanship and sanitation. Like nearly all successful concerns the Strausman-Krauthamer Co. was started on a modest scale and has won recognition by the fine quality of its output, its reliability and fair dealing. Established on East Front street, about four years ago, only half-a-dozen people were at first employed. The superiority of the work, however, soon attracted attention and the demand increased so rapidly that larger quarters were required. The firm is composed of S. Strausman and S. Krauthamer, both of whom are thoroughly practical men and give their entire time to the business.

SMITH & HAFF.

LEADING FLORISTS.

Plainfield is a city of flower lovers, and there is scarcely a home, whether a palatial residence or the most modest cottage, but what has its flower beds and beautifully laid out grounds. Nothing has done more to give the city the title of "Beautiful Plainfield" and each resident seems to have entered into a friendly rivalry with his or her neighbor to make the city still more attractive. In this splendid work the firm of Smith & Haff, whose greenhouses and nurseries are at 356 Somerset street, have, since they located six years ago, taken a most active part. These experienced florists have one of the largest and best stocked establishments in this section of New Jersey, and have as their patrons many of the most prominent people in this city and section. They are both thoroughly practical men, who have all their lives lived and worked among flowers and plants, and are past masters in their art. Their greenhouses and nurseries are headquarters for flower lovers, and every year the patronage they receive is greater, showing that their efforts to give Plainfield a high-class establishment is generously appreciated. There are six greenhouses, each about 22x100, and containing a total of more than 12,000 feet of glass. The grounds are about 350x500 feet, and the location, just at the foot of the Watchung Mountains, is ideal. Everything is flowers. Trees and shrubs can be supplied by this firm promptly and at reasonable prices, and those who have not visited their place have yet a pleasure in store for them. The business was founded many years ago, and was conducted for 20 years by Frank Miles, who was succeeded by the present firm, which consists of Messrs. James Smith and T. D. Haff. Mr. Smith is a native of Scotland, the home of so many famous gardeners, while Mr. Haff comes from Long Island. They are both thoroughly practical men, progressive and energetic, and it is a pleasure to chronicle their success—reflecting credit as it does both on them and their patrons.

JOSEPH T. VAIL.

REAL ESTATE, FIRE AND LIFE INSURANCE.

There is no class of citizens that do more for the growth and advancement of a community than those engaged in the real estate business. They are one of its most valuable assets, constantly at work presenting its attractions and advantages to home-seekers and investors, and playing an active part in its development. Plainfield owes much to its real estate men, who are among its most progressive people and no one has taken a more active part in promoting its growth than has Mr. Joseph T. Vail, the dean of the profession; for in point of service he out-ranks them all. Mr. Vail, whose office is at 173 North avenue, began business in Plainfield in 1873, fifty years ago, when the now flourishing city was scarcely more than a country village of a few thousand souls. His office was a small one-story frame structure, just opposite where the railroad station now stands, and stood on the same site his present office is located, he having bought the property years ago and built the building, part of which he now occupies. Mr. Vail early in life concluded that Plainfield had a bright future and invested extensively in real estate. But he is not one of that class who buys property and waits for others to improve, so that he can derive the benefit. He has always been active in developing his property and his example was followed by many others. Mr. Vail does a general real estate business, buying and selling, managing estates, collecting rents and negotiating loans. He also carries on an extensive insurance department, writing all kinds of insurance—fire, life, accident, health, liability, automobile, boiler, plate glass, and all forms of policies in reliable companies with assets amounting to millions. Associated with him is his son, Mr. E. Frank Vail, who has built a large number of the handsomest and most modern residences in the city and suburbs, and has been instrumental in locating many home-seekers in Plainfield. The senior Mr. Vail came here from Brooklyn while his son is a native. They are among the progressive men of the city and are always among the first to aid in any movement that is for its welfare.

KENSINGTON RIDING ACADEMY AND BOARDING STABLE.

Riding and driving continues to be a favorite amusement with the people of Plainfield and this section of Jersey,

THE KENSINGTON RIDING ACADEMY

notwithstanding the popularity of the automobile. The excellent streets of the city and the fine highways that stretch away into the beautiful surrounding country, the bridle paths in the Watchung Mountains and the many handsome suburban places, make a constant appeal to the horseman and horsewoman that is not to be resisted. As a health-giving, brain-resting and altogether delightful recreation there is nothing to compare with a gallop across country or a leasurely canter along a country road. Located here in Plainfield, at number 775 Kensington avenue, is the Kensington Riding Academy and Boarding Stable of which Mr. Josef Grandl is the popular proprietor. Mr. Grandl is one of the most accomplished horsemen and expert riding masters in the country and under his experienced and capable management the academy has had the most successful years of its history. It was established by Dr. Knott, 10 years ago, who conducted it for several years being succeeded by Mr. Goring. About four years ago Mr. Grandl purchased the business, made extensive improvements, introduced the latest methods of teaching and during his administration the popularity of horseback riding has had a great revival. The Academy is supplied with every facility for teaching ladies, gentlemen and children to ride safely and gracefully. There is always an experienced riding master and lady instructor in attendance, the horses used in teaching are well-broken and perfectly safe and some of the best horsemen and women, not only in Plainfield, but in New York and other cities, have learned at the Kensington. Mr. Grandl also conducts a boarding stable where the best accommodations can be had at reasonable rates and also keeps for hire a number of excellent saddle horses. He has made a host of friends since coming to Plainfield and is one of its most popular citizens.

EDWARD C. HARDINGHAM.

REAL ESTATE AND INSURANCE.

No class of business men have done more for the growth and progress of Plainfield than have those engaged in the real estate business. They were among the first to note its attractions as a residential city and then its advantages for certain lines of industrial endeavor and it has been largely through their untiring efforts that the country town has blossomed into a beautiful, modern city. Among the leading real estate and insurance men of Plainfield, who have for years played a prominent part in its advancement is Mr. Edward C. Hardingham, whose office is located at 152 North avenue, adjoining the railroad station. Since beginning business here years ago Mr. Hardingham has been engaged in many important transactions, and his knowledge of property values in this city has made him a recognized authority. Mr. Hardingham thoroughly covers the entire real estate field, buying and selling property, managing estates, collecting rents and negotiating loans on mortgages. He has also built up one of the largest insurance agencies in Plainfield, representing companies with millions of assets and the highest stand. All classes of policies are written by Mr. Hardingham—fire, life, accident, health, liability, automobile, boiler, plate glass and burglary. Among his companies are the Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance Co., London and Lancashire Guarantee and Accident Co., Rhode Island, The Insurance Company of State of Pennsylvania, Rochester German Underwriters, Stuyvesant and Pennsylvania Fire Insurance Company. Mr. Hardingham has every facility for handling both real estate and insurance and numbers among his patrons some of the most discriminating property holders of this city and section. He is one of the progressive citizens of Plainfield and is doing his full share toward its growth and prosperity.

TAPSCOTT BROTHERS.

REAL ESTATE AND INSURANCE.

There is a vast difference between the really progressive real estate men of today, the product of modern conditions, and those of a couple of decades ago, most of whom sat in their generally dingy offices, from morning to night, waiting for business to come to them. The up-to-date real estate man goes after it and gets it too, while the old type has nearly or quite retired from the field. One of the most enterprising real estate firms located in Plainfield is that of Tapscott Brothers, whose office is located on the second floor of the Courier-News Building, 220 Park avenue. This firm was established about 12 years ago and since that time have been connected with a number of important transactions. It does not confine its operations entirely to Plainfield, though; it has an extensive business here, but goes all over New Jersey and adjoining States. The firm does a considerable brokerage business and also thoroughly covers the real estate field in all its branches. Among its other connections it represents the United States Realty Corporation of New Jersey. The firm is composed of H. B. and C. S. Tapscott, both of whom are well and favorably known in real estate and business circles in this and other cities. They are among the progressive and public spirited citizens of Plainfield and are taking an active part in its development.

COLUMBUS HALL.

JOS. W. GAVETT.

FINE CHINA, CUT GLASS AND LAMPS, GAS AND ELECTRIC FIXTURES.

Among the attractive stores of every city those devoted to the sale of china, glassware, lamps, gas and electric fixtures stands in the front rank. The advance that has been made during the last few decades in the manufacture of this class of goods has been really wonderful, some of the greatest designers of the world have devoted their talents to this field of endeavor and as a consequence the family of moderate means can today afford the same artistic furnishings that a few years ago were within the reach only of the wealthy. Plainfield supports in the beautifully furnished and splendidly stocked store of Joseph W. Gavett, 318 West Front street, one of the largest establishments devoted exclusively to this class of goods in New Jersey, and it would be a distinct credit to any city many times its size. Fronting 25 feet on the main thoroughfare in the shopping district it extends back a distance of 85 feet and as both the basement of the building and also that of the one adjoining is occupied, a floor space of over 6,000 square feet is provided to accommodate the immense stock carried, by far the largest and most select ever assembled in Plainfield. Artistically arranged, as it is, the display is a most beautiful one and every lover of both pretty and useful things in glass, china, porcelain, bronze and metal will be delighted upon visiting this store. A specialty is made of fine china and cut glass and the latest designs in lamps, gas and electric fixtures. The supply is enormous and the wants of every purse and taste have not been studied by Mr. Gavett, for he handles all qualities. The display of Dorflinger and other cut glass is alone worthy a visit. The business is one of the oldest in Plainfield, having been established in 1862 on Park avenue by Mr. William L. Gavett, father of the present proprietor. About a dozen years ago it was removed to the present commodious quarters, for the purpose of securing more room. This store has for over half a century been one of the established institutions of Plainfield, having all the prestige that only years of straightforward dealing can confer and at the same time thoroughly modern in its methods of merchandising. Mr. Gavett is one of the substantial business men of the community, a progressive citizen who is always ready to do all in his power for its growth and prosperity.

TIMBO COMPANY RESTAURANT.

A GOOD PLACE TO DINE.

Few places are more attractive to the lover of good things of life than is a new restaurant, conducted by men who thoroughly understand their business and take a genuine delight in pleasing their patrons by giving them the very best the market affords, cooked in the best style, served well and at reasonable prices. That there was ample room for just such a place is shown by the welcome given the enterprise of The Timbo Co., which in the latter part of September, opened a modern, up-to-date restaurant at 119 North avenue a few doors above the Press Office and near the railroad station. Nearly everyone in Plainfield knows and likes Mr. Timbo, manager of the new company. He has lived in the city nearly all his life, having come from his native country of Italy and settled here as a boy. By industry and straight forward dealing, he built up a large business at his former restaurant on North avenue and his host of friends are giving him a genuine welcome back into active service. Mr. Timbo is serving the best of meals a la carte at the new place, the business men's lunch at 25 cents is a tremendous hit and, as they keep open until 2 o'clock, theatre parties will find this an ideal place to get refreshments after the play. It is a pleasure to chronicle the return of Mr. Timbo to the restaurant business for he knows by experience what the people of Plainfield want and he is prepared in every particular to give it to them in his old-time style. Mr. Thomas Burke, who is associated with Mr. Timbo in his new venture, is a native of Plainfield, and is a machinist by trade. Before joining the present firm he was in the employ of Mr. Timbo, higher up North avenue. The firm is noted for their honest dealing, true public spirit and the very best of service.

COLLEGE OF MOUNT SAINT MARY.

As an educational centre Plainfield has natural advantages possessed by but few places, and located here are some of the best schools in the country. Notable among them is the College of Mount Saint Mary, situated half-way up one of the beautiful Watchung Mountains, a section of New Jersey long known as the "Picture Lands," about 20 miles from New York. The main building is a noble and inspiring mass of unusual grace and dignity. In design it is a free handling of the classic style, the dominant character being expressed in the disposition of the masses and the refinement of the proportions. The classic details are in harmony with the Ionic portico which marks the main entrance. The exterior is of handsome buff-tinted New Jersey stone, with columns, quoins and trimmings of buff Indiana limestone. The tower is of copper, the roof of slate. The warm color effect is rich but subdued, and is charming in its setting against the back ground of verdure and the primeval forest which flanks on the sides. The interior is finished in marble and hardwoods in soft, harmonious tints. The construction is of superior quality and finish, absolutely fire-proof. The campus is a clearing surrounded by a luxuriant forest of sixty acres. Indeed the bracing air, the high altitude and perfect sanitation makes the College a delightful health resort, as well as school; it is near enough to the busy city of New York to catch the inspiration of its life and energy and to avail itself of the advantages which this city affords as the centre of social life as a city pre-eminently rich in educational influence. This fortunate proximity to the metropolis secures for the College, in addition to its own resident faculty the services of professors of high intellectual attainments. The College of Mount Saint Mary was founded in 1908 by the Sisters of Mercy for the Academic and Collegiate education of young women. The College has for its aim the training of young women for higher efficiency in intellectual and social work. Its spirit is Catholic and American. Its chief care is naturally the development of character awarding to the ideal of true Catholic womanhood. Every effort will be made to so arrange and adopt the training that the graduates will be fitted to enter, and to adorn any sphere of life. Special courses in Domestic Economy will prepare young women to become wise and efficient mistresses of homes. Training in education, music, arts, and sciences will prepare them to enter vocational fields adapted to their special talents. Association with the Sisters will train them in the social graces and courtesies so essential to the leading women of all times. The buildings comprise the Academy and the College proper, the latter, Gabriel Hall, built recently at a cost of nearly $120,000. It is similar in style and structure to the main building, is absolutely fireproof, is heated by steam and lighted with gas and electricity. The students rooms are comfortable and cosy. The sanitary conditions of these rooms are perfect in every respect. All the baths have tiled floors, and marble walls. The gymnasium is supplied with shower and needle baths and has adequate equipment for necessary physical training and for indoor games. The college has a good collection of general literature and works of reference, to which the students have access at all times. Besides this the Plainfield Public Library is open daily for readers, and for obtaining books. Magazines, reviews and quarterlies upon literature, science and religion, are provided for the students. The college possesses ample laboratory facilities for work in chemistry, physics and biology and domestic science. The laboratories are provided with slate covered tables, electric current, gas, steam, hot and cold water. Additions are being constantly made to the apparatus equipments. The officers and faculty consist of His Lordship, the Right Reverend James Augustine McFaul, D.D., LL.D., president ex-officio; the Sisters of Mercy, Rev. William H. Miller, A. M.; Rev. John A. Baldwin, A. M.; Louis Emery Tucker, A. M.; John Alfred Brewster, A. B.; Moriz Stoehr, A. M.; Agnes C. Allen, A. B.; J. J. Savitz, Ph. D., and Sergt. Henry Barker. It is the aim of the College as a distinctly Catholic institution to offer to its students every opportunity to obtain a thorough knowledge of Catholic doctrine and practice. Hence the courses in religion form an organic part of the College curriculum. They are conducted with a view to solid religious formation; therefore, the work is so arranged that students who remain four years, the full time for degrees, will have studied a systematic exposition of fundamental truths. Difference in religion will not, however, be regarded in the admission of pupils who are willing to conform to the general regulations of the school.

MAIN BUILDING AND ARCADE, MT. ST. MARY'S COLLEGE.

H. P. GREENWOOD.

SUCCESSORS TO GREER & GREENWOOD, HATTERS AND MEN'S FURNISHERS.

Every really well-dressed man pays particular attention to the details of his wardrobe—to his shirts, his underwear, collars, cuffs and neckwear and above all to his hats. These seemingly little things make a big difference in a man's appearance and are of quite as much importance as his clothing. This is the reason why the best dressed men always buy from hatters and haberdashers, men who make a specialty of gentlemen's furnishings and hats and of nothing else. For a dozen years or more the establishment of Greer & Greenwood, 135 East Front street, was headquarters for a large percentage of the best and most stylishly dressed men of Plainfield and this vicinity and it has continued to be since Mr. H. P. Greenwood, on June 23 last, took charge and has since continued the business. Mr. Greenwood has had many years experience, he is thoroughly familiar with the needs of his patrons and the immense stock carried by him is kept fully up to the times and comes only from the most reliable manufacturers, both at home and abroad. All that is latest and most seasonable in gentlemen's underwear, neckwear, collars, cuffs, shirts, hosiery, gloves and notions, hats and caps can be found at his attractive store, and, notwithstanding the high character of the goods he invariably handles, his prices will be found most reasonable. In addition to his gentlemen's furnishing goods business Mr. Greenwood represents here the old-established and reliable merchant tailoring firm of Browning-King, of New York, one of the first high-class concerns to establish representatives all over the country to take orders for their high-class clothing, made to order. There is no firm in the country with a better reputation, and Mr. Greenwood has built up a large and rapidly increasing trade in custom clothing. Mr. Greenwood is a native of New York, but has been a resident of Plainfield since nearly 20 years ago, with the exception of some years spent in Savannah, Georgia. He is one of the city's progressive merchants and is always ready to do all in his power for its advancement and prosperity.

PLAINFIELD NICKEL PLATING WORKS.

SILVER, BRASS AND COPPER PLATING.

Many people do not realize the wonderful improvement that could be made in the attractiveness of their homes by having the metal work of the furniture and fittings refinished, plated or lacquered. They can be made like new at a reasonable cost and will stand the wear and tear of years if the work is done by men who thoroughly understand modern methods and have proved their ability to do the highest class of work. That the Plainfield Nickel Plating Works do this can be proven by thousands of patrons among the housekeepers of this city and section as well as by many of the leading manufacturers. The plating works, of which Mr. Herman A. Weber is the enterprising proprietor, are located at 508 West Second street, and are equipped with the very latest improved apparatus for silver, brass and copper plating. Chandeliers, brass bedsteads and metal furniture of every kind, bath room and other fixtures, bric-a-brac, in fact, any metal article can be refinished, replated or lacquered and made to look as new and bright as when it left the hands of the maker. The change is simply wonderful and the cost trifling when the class of work done by the Plainfield Nickel Plating Works is considered. Mr. Weber has among his patrons some of the most prominent families of Plainfield and has built up a business which extends throughout a radius of many miles about the city. He also does a great deal of work for manufacturers, including the press works of Potter, Scott and Hall, the Manganese Safe Co. and other important local enterprises. No work is too difficult for his equipment and facilities and articles shipped to him by freight or express receive the same careful attention he gives to all work done at his establishment. Mr. Weber is a native of Plainfield and is one of that type of optimistic men who always look on the bright side of things and are doing their full share in the development of the place along the best lines.

PLUMBING, HEATING AND TINNING.

Not many years have elapsed since sanitary plumbing and the heating of houses by steam and furnaces were regarded as luxuries to be enjoyed only by the wealthy, but fortunately this time has passed and in this day the house without these conveniences is the exception rather than the rule, as was once the case. The advance has been rapid and the modern plumber must have a more than ordinarily wide-awake man to keep in touch with the many improvements that are constantly being made. Among the plumbers and metal workers of Plainfield, who can be placed in this catagory, is Mr. P. A. McVoy, whose shop is in the rear of his residence, 266 East Front street. Mr. McVoy is one of the best known plumbers, steamfitters and tinners of this city, where he was born, learned his trade and has always lived. He learned his trade with his father, Mr. I. L. McVoy, with whom he was afterwards associated in business under the name of I. L. McVoy & Sons, but about 15 years ago decided to start in business on his own account, in which he has been very successful. There is nothing in the line of plumbing, steam, hot water and hot air heating, furnace work and tinning that Mr. McVoy is not prepared to do at short notice, and in the most workman-like manner. He uses only the best of material, employs the most skilled and experienced workmen, and satisfaction is guaranteed. Mr. McVoy gives his personal and particular attention to all work entrusted to his care, large or small, and he has succeeded by his ability and straight forward dealing in building up a large and growing business among the leading property owners, builders and contractors of this city and section.

JOHN J. VARLEY

RESIDENCE, 1150 MARTINE AVE., OWNED BY P. A. McVOY.

JOHN J. VARLEY.

"THE PARIS."

LADIES' FURNISHINGS, MILLINERY, CHILDREN'S AND INFANT'S WEAR.

Few cities the size of Plainfield can boast of an establishment as attractive, commodious and well stocked as that carried by Mr. John J. Varley at "The Paris," 142-144 West Front street, in the centre of the shopping district. Mr. Varley deals exclusively in ladies' furnishings, millinery, children's and infants' wear, and he has, within the comparatively short space of two years, made his store the headquarters of the best dressed and most discriminating ladies of Plainfield and this section. They were not long in learning that quite as good, and often better bargains can be had at J. J. Varley's as in New York, and many of Mr. Varley's customers, who formerly did much of their shoping in his line in the metropolis, buy all of their supplies from him. The first impression one has upon entering his place of business is the air of freshness everywhere apparent. The goods all seem to be just from the factory, and they are what they seem, for Mr. Varley is not one of those merchants who carry goods over from season to season until they are sold. His stock must be of the latest and from the best makers, and at the beginning of a season the store is practically a new one, so far as its contents are concerned. The shopper enters from Front street, between a long row of plate glass windows artistically dressed with the latest in ladies' furnishings, millinery, children's and infants' wear, both imported and domestic and of every grade, but each grade is of the best. The store room, splendidly furnished, with the latest in fixtures, extends back 200 feet, is 45 feet in width, thus giving an immense floor space for display. It is one of the best lighted stores to be found anywhere and every comfort and convenience has been provided for the shopper. Mr. John J. Varley, the proprietor of this section of the "Paris" store came here eight years ago from Scranton, Pa., and before going in business on his own account was connected with the firm of A. E. Force & Co. From the time he made his home in Plainfield he has taken the greatest interest in everything that concerns the place, in the future, of which he has the greatest confidence. Mr. Varley is a prominent member of the Chamber of Commerce, of which he is assistant secretary, and during the absence of the secretary, who now lives in New York, the duties of the office, to a great extent, fall upon him. He has an infinite capacity for work, however, is public spirited and progressive, and always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to any cause that is for the welfare of this city and section.

BUILDING MATERIALS PLENTIFUL.

The heart of this mountain range is an excellent trap rock easily quarried and ready to use in building, so finely and regularly has nature shaped it into longitudinal blocks. Mechanical appliances for crushing it are in use in a number of local quarries, and the superb streets of Plainfield, and the fine country roads extending out of it, in all directions, have made this part of New Jersey, with this city as a centre, the paradise of the automobilist and wheelman, the farmers delight and the livery man's golden opportunity. The supply of this road making stone is practically inexhaustible, notwithstanding the fact that the quarries have been worked for more than half a century, and the authorities are taking every advantage of what a bountiful Nature has provided. About a hundred miles of roads and streets, having trap rock from the Watchung Mountains as a basis, have already been built, and more are being constantly added. Fine building stone is also found in the mountains and many of the handsome business houses, residences and public buildings are examples of its beauty and durability; notably the college of Mt. St. Mary, the Babcock Building, in which the post office is located, St. Joseph's and other churches.

ST. MARY'S ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

THE PLAINFIELD TRUST COMPANY

SAFE and CONSERVATIVE

O. T. WARING, President

BEGAN BUSINESS JUNE 4, 1902

Probably no one thing is so essential and necessary to the progress and prosperity of a community as safe and sound financial institutions conducted along liberal, yet at the same time, strictly business lines, and no city can hope to see its advantages properly developed unless it possesses them. They are one of its most valuable assets, an asset that is constantly paying dividends in one way or another. This city has such an asset in the Plainfield Trust Company, and during the eleven years that have elapsed since it was chartered by the State of New Jersey its growth has been remarkable. On June 4, 1902, the company began business with deposits of $124,636, surplus and profits of $10,000 and a capital stock of $100,000. On June 4 of the present year the deposits amounted to $4,819,453.99, surplus and undivided profits $291,018.71. The capital stock has never been increased and the total assets by the last official statement issued amounted to $5,244,-155.22. Railroad and other bonds, $794,216.70; bonds and mortgages, $1,-099,471.60; demand loans, time loans, and bills purchased, $2,458,817.62; banking house, $85,000.00; overdrafts, 73.29 cents accrued interest, $15,666.95, and cash and reserve, $790,909.06. It has, during its career, exercised a potent influence in the growth of Plainfield. When the company was organized the total deposits in the banks of the city only amounted to about $2,500,000, while today they are in the neighborhood of $12,000,-000. That the Plainfield Trust Company has had much to do with this splendid increase no one can deny who has studied its history. Managed by some of the foremost business men of the country, who make their homes here, it is a splendid example of what virile force can do when properly applied. The officers and board of directors have from the first given their personal attention to every detail of the management. The institution has never been one of those controlled by one or two men, and there is no doubt but what its success is largely due to the fact that there has always been the greatest harmony and co-operation. This has engendered a feeling of confidence in the stockholders and depositors absolutely necessary in successful banking. The institution is a bank as well as a trust company and is governed by stringent laws especially designed to safeguard the interests of its customers. In the banking department accounts are subject to check, 3 per cent. interest being paid when a balance of $500 or more is maintained. This interest is figured on daily balances and is credited quarterly. No exchange is charged on items deposited and on accounts maintaining a substantial balance, a New York checking privilege is granted, when desired, whereby customers' checks are payable in New York, thus making an account with this institution equivalent to a New York account. Accounts in the special department are not subject to check, but draw interest at the rate of 4 per cent., credited semi-annually, January 1 and July 1, on all accounts that have remained on deposit for three months or longer, prior to these dates. The safe deposit and storage vaults in the splendid banking house at Second and Park avenue, erected in 1905, are of the latest and most improved fire and burglar proof pattern, affording unsurpassed protection to all valuables. Boxes may be rented from $5 to $150 a year according to size. The storage vault, also fire and burglar proof, is fitted with trunk racks and partitions which make it possible to keep trunks and packages in perfect order so that access may be had to them at a moment's notice. The charges are based on the space occupied and the value of contents. Under its charter the Plainfield Trust Company is authorized to act as executor, administrator, guardian, trustee, receiver, assignee, registrar or transfer agent, and as agent for the care of property, the collection of rents, interest, etc. It also acts as custodian, holding in trust stocks, bonds and other securities, or in any capacity of a fiduciary nature. A banking by mail department is also conducted on an extensive scale and the company issues, at current rates, travellers cheques, letters of credit and drafts on foreign countries. Every possible facility is afforded its customers and their convenience is constantly studied with the result that every year shows a healthy increase in business. The officers of the company are: O. T. Waring, president; A. V. Heely, vice-president; Henry A. McGee, vice-president; J. Herbert Case, vice-president; De Witt Hubbell, secretary and treasurer; F. Irving Walsh, asst. secretary-treasurer; A. H. Kirby, asst. treas., and the members of the Board of Directors are J. Herbert Case, Plainfield, N. J., vice-president, The Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., New York; Frederick Geller, New York, attorney and counsellor-at-law, New York; Augustus V. Heely, Plainfield, N. J., vice-president The Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., New York; James W. Jackson, Plainfield, N. J., executor of the Jesse Hoyt Estate, New York; Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Plainfield, N. J., Ladd and Wood, bankers, New York; Charles W. McCutchen, Plainfield, N. J., Holt & Co., commission merchants, New York; Henry A. McGee, Plainfield, N. J., Standard Oil Company, New York; Harry H. Pond, Plainfield, N. J., vice-president Mechanics and Metals National Bank, New York; Charles A. Reed, Plainfield, N. J., attorney and counsellor-at-law; Isaac W. Rushmore, Plainfield, N. J., dairy products, New York; Frank H. Smith, Plainfield, N. J., Register Union County, Elizabeth, N. J.; Samuel Townsend, Plainfield, N. J., President Peoples National Bank, Westfield, N. J.; Cornelius B. Tyler, Plainfield, N. J., Tyler & Tyler, Attorneys, New York; Lewis E. Waring, Plainfield, N. J.; Edward Sweet & Co., bankers, New York; Orville T. Waring, Plainfield, N. J., Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, N. Y. Much of the company's success is due to this exceptionally strong board of directors, whose names and connections have given it prestige in its home city and throughout the State. These directors, all of whom, as may be seen from the above list, are representative men in the community, take an active personal interest in the Company's affairs and stand ready at all times to give its customers the benefit of their judgment and wide business experience.

FRED ENDRESS.

CITY COUNCILMAN AND SELF MADE MAN.

One of the greatest obstacles to clean and progressive municipal government is the reluctance of business men to take an active part in public affairs. This, at least, is the difficulty in many cities, especially in those where machine rule dominates. Plainfield, however, is fortunate in this respect, and has been for many years, a large number of its most prominent business and professional men having held positions, in most cases at a sacrifice. The city is one of the best governed in the country, and without doubt this is due to the business man in politics. One of the most active men in municipal affairs is Mr. Fred. Endress, of 941 West Sixth street, a member of the Common Council, who has made an enviable record during his first term in office, bringing to his duties his long experience and training, as one of the successful business men of Plainfield. Mr. Endress is a self-made man in all that this sometimes abused term implies. He is a native of the Kingdom of Bavaria, emigrating to this country as a young man in 1889. Upon coming to Plainfield he worked hard, and engaging in the meat and provision business on a modest scale, and by industry, perseverance and straightforward methods succeeded in becoming one of the leading merchants of the city, at one time being at the head of three flourishing establishments. He was the founder of the business since transferred to the Endress Company, retiring from the concern about five years ago, for the purpose of devoting himself to other interests and also to regain his health. He is a large property holder, owning the handsome building apartment house and big store occupied by J. A. Smith and Brother, the grocers on Front street, the fine new Endress Building on Madison avenue, and other important structures. Mr. Endress has for years been actively identified with the business life of the city and has shown his confidence in its future progress and prosperity by investing heavily here. Before making his home in this city, Mr. Endress lived for a time in the South, where he was connected with the Magnolia Springs Hotel, near Jacksonville, Florida, also with the Plant System of Hotels, and was for a while connected with the magnificent estate of George Vanderbilt, known as "Biltmore," near Ashville, N. C. Since retiring from active business life, Mr. Endress has given much of his attention to municipal affairs and as chairman of the Committee on Fire and Buildings of the Common Council, has made his mark. He was a promoter, and is a member of the Board of Directors of the Crystal Ice and Coal Company, one of the largest concerns in the city. Mr. Endress is an enthusiastic automobilist and is the owner of a fine machine. He is one of the progressive men of Plainfield and is always ready to do everything in his power for its growth and prosperity.

J. C. POPE & CO.

GENERAL INSURANCE AND REAL ESTATE AGENTS—FIRST NATIONAL BANK BUILDING.

Every intelligent person cannot help but recognize the great value of insurance in all its various forms, and nearly everyone carries it to a certain extent. Many property owners are not, however, insured extensively as they should be, they do not seem to realize the fact that it is the very best investment they could possibly make, and it has always been a mystery to the well-insured man, content in the knowledge that his loved ones and property are safe, why this should be so. Having decided to insure, the next step is the selection of a company, almost as important a question to be decided as that of insuring. For many years the firm of J. C. Pope & Co., which was recently reorganized, has been patronized by a large number of the most discriminating people of Plainfield in this section. Mr. Pope, the founder of the business and treasurer of the Plainfield Savings Bank, built up a large clientele, representing as he did some of the best companies in the world with assets of millions. In addition to carrying on a general fire, life, health, accident, automobile, plate glass and liability insurance agency, the firm has added a real estate department. It covers the entire field, by selling, leasing and renting city, suburban and country property; managing estates, collecting rents and negotiating loans on bond and mortgage, and although the competition in this field is unusually keen, they have been most successful. Mr. William H. Demler, the general manager of the firm, is an experienced appraiser of real property and has had long experience in the business. The companies represented by the concern are: German American Ins. Co., of New York; Home Ins. Co., of New York; Aetna Ins. Co., of Harford, Conn.; Fire Association, of Philadelphia; Pennsylvania Fire Ins. Co., of Philadelphia; New York Underwriters Agency; Williamsburgh City Fire Ins. Co., Camden Fire Ins. Association, of Camden, N. J.; New Jersey Fire Ins. Co., of Newark, N. J.; New York Plate Glass Ins. Co., of New York. The new firm under the old name starts on its career under the most favorable auspices. Pope & Co. are wide awake, public spirited and progressive citizens, who are always ready and willing to lend a helping hand for Plainfield's welfare.

INSURANCE OFFICE OF J. C. POPE & COMPANY.

S. BERKOWITZ.

LADIES' TAILOR, HABIT MAKER AND FURRIER.

Every season tailor-made clothing for ladies is becoming more the vogue, for despite hobbles and slit skirts, it more than holds its own. There is nothing in ladies wear more stylish than a tailor-made suit, designed by an artist who thoroughly knows his business and keeps in constant touch with the world of fashion in Paris, London, Berlin and New York. It is not at all necessary for the well-dressed ladies of Plainfield to go to New York for their tailor-made gowns, as many of the most discriminating have long ago learned, for in S. Berkowitz, the city has one of the best ladies' tailors, habit makers and furriers to be found anywhere. Mr. Berkowitz has recently moved into his new parlors on Fifth street, from his old stand, 423 West Front street, where for the last 12 years he has been successfully engaged in business, having as his patrons many of the most stylishly dressed ladies of this section. He has fitted up his reception and dressing rooms most attractively and every comfort and convenience has been provided for his customers. Mr. Berkowitz has built his success on the fact that he has demonstrated to the ladies of Plainfield that he can make their gowns just as well and as stylishly as they can be made in New York, at a much lower price. His expenses are comparatively small, while theirs are simply enormous, and this difference he shares with his patrons. Some of the most stylishly dressed women of this city have long ago learned that this is true and have for years patronized Mr. Berkowitz, who has kept his old customers and is constantly adding new ones. He has the prestige that only years of fair dealing can give and confidently refers to his hundreds of satisfied customers. Mr. Berkowitz began business here a dozen years ago on a modest scale and the large trade he enjoys is the result of his skill and the fact that he makes the best clothes for the least money. He is one of the most progressive and enterprising merchants of the city.

MISS MINNIE BERKOWITZ.

QUEEN CITY HOTEL.

PLAINFIELD LEADING HOSTELRY.

There is no doubt of the fact that a city is judged to a great extent by the character of the hotels it supports, and in deciding upon the progressiveness and prosperity of a community one cannot go very far wrong in giving its hostelries the consideration they deserve. This being so, the traveler who has ever been so fortunate as to be a guest of the Queen City Hotel, can have only pleasant memories of this beautiful city at the foot of the hills. Although the Queen City is one of the oldest hostelries within a radius of many miles, no one would ever guess the fact, for it has been pronounced by many who have stopped there to be the most modern and most comfortable, as well as artistically furnished hotel in New Jersey. But little remains of the old hotel save the walls, for when it passed into the hands of Mr. Peter Floersch, about two years ago, it was entirely renovated and extensive improvements made by the owner of the property, Mr. John H. Staats. At that time it was known as the Hotel Iroquois, under which name it had been conducted for about 10 years. Before that time it was called the City Hotel and was at various times, for some years, managed by Mr. Staats, Abram Rozelle, J. E. Bearbower, William Kelley and John Miller. Jerome Leary was the last proprietor while the hotel was called The Iroquois and he was succeeded by Mr. Floersch, who has made it one of the leading and best known hotels in Jersey. There are, of course, others much larger, but there are none that can surpass, and few that can equal, it in the acommodations it offers or in the excellence of its cuisine. Nearly $35,000 was spent in practically rebuilding the old hostelry which has for three-quarters of a century been the favorite stopping place of visitors to Plainfield. The first floor was lowered to the street level, the second was rebuilt, and the entire building refurnished throughout. The rooms are unusually large, with high ceilings, such as were in vogue 50 years ago, and it is a real pleasure to sleep at the Queen City after enduring the cramped quarters supplied by most hotels recently built. The dining rooms are on the first floor and are most attractively furnished and artistically decorated, while guests are supplied with the very best the markets afford at reasonable prices. Many travellers having business in New York, who know the comforts of the Queen City run out by rail or automobile, expressly for the purpose of spending the night at this delightful stopping place. Before Mr. Floersch opened his doors for the reception of guests an addition of 17 feet was built on the Second street side, in which the splendidly oppointed cafe, with its choice stock of liquors and cigars is located. Over this are wide, shady verandas, which are the favorite resort of the guests. A large addition will be built to the Queen City at an early day, something that is much needed, for a night rarely passes without every room being taken. Mr. Floersch is a veteran hotel man, a native of Germany, and has been in the hotel business since leaving school. For eleven years before making his home in this city he conducted the Packer House at Perth Amboy, and was before that the proprietor of a hotel at Tottenville, Staten Island. His son, Mr. Wm. M. Floersch, also an experienced hotel man, is the popular and efficient manager. They are actively identified with the business life of the city and are among its most substantial citizens.

JERSEY SILK MILLS.

One of the principal industries of Plainfield, and one that is steadily growing in importance, is the manufacture of silk. This gives employment to a number of people at lucrative wages and is doing its full share toward the industrial development of the city. The Jersey Silk Mills, which employs in the neighborhood of 140 people, the majority being men, is the largest enterprise of the kind in the place, and although an addition was made two years ago, should its growth continue, as there is every prospect, another will soon have to be added. The company makes broad silks exclusively, for which there is a wide and increasing demand. The output is sold through the New York connection of the company and finds a ready market on account of its superior quality. There are 165 looms installed in the mills and the machinery is of the latest improved pattern. Founded originally as the Watchung Silk Co., the mills were built in 1905. The original building, which is still part of the plant, is 60x100, fronting on Chatham street and running along Pearl. The enterprise was continued under their name for several years when there was a reorganization, the new concern being the Mitchell-Watchung Silk Co. In 1913 the industry passed into the hands of the present company and has since been known as the Jersey Silk Mills (Inc.). This company decided to enlarge the plant and operate on a larger scale and in furtherance of this plan built an addition in the rear 100x130. This gave a total floor space of 25,000 square feet. The mills are of brick, well lighted and ventilated, and the land surrounding them belonging to the company gives plenty of room for

HERBART HALL—Institute for Atypical Children

FOUNDED APRIL 1, 1900

BY MAXIMILIAN P. E. GROSZMANN

Plainfield is known far and wide both in this country and abroad as the home of Herbart Hall, the famous Institute for Atypical Children founded in 1900 by Dr. Maximilian P. E. Groszmann, and conducted by him under the name of the Grozmann School for Nervous and Atypical Children.

PROF. M. P. E. GROSZMANN, FOUNDER.

This change of name in 1911 was proposed by Dr. Groszmann himself for the purpose of emphasizing to the public that since his donation of the institute to the National Association for the Study and Education of Exceptional Children it is no longer a private enterprise. His suggestion was adopted to counteract any popular misconception that might arise from continuing the old name. The general impression, even in Plainfield is that Herbart Hall is an asylum or school for feeble-minded children, but nothing would be further from the facts. No feeble-minded children are received. As everyone is aware there are many thousands of children who are practically normal, but suffer largely from slight mental or physical defects, varying from the average human type only to a small extent. There are even exceptional bright children who have latent powers of excellence hidden under various conditions of handicap or are the victims of an unstable nervous equilibrium. This is the class treated at this institution. Until it was founded by Dr. Groszmann little had been done for them. Usually they are allowed to drag on through ordinary schools, public or private, or outside of them, without receiving the expert individual attention which they so imperatively need. In only too many instances they are loosely classed with defective and abnormal children, and placed in institutions ill-suited for their particular conditions. Sometimes, in the homes of the wealthy, such children are placed under private tutorship, which, however, is rarely competent, since the study and better understanding of these cases is a matter of profound scientific experience. Besides, the method of private tutoring deprives the children of the benefit and stimulus of companionship and wholesome competition. Children of parents in moderate or poor circumstances are simply neglected, although many of them might be developed into most useful citizens. The home of Herbart Hall comprises over 25 acres of land, affording ample opportunities for school gardening and out-door sports. The main building alone has excellent accommodations for pupils and teachers, and besides there are several attractive cottages. The cottage system will be developed gradually as the growth of the institution warrants. The rooms in all the buildings are commodious and light and beautiful views are afforded from all windows and from the broad piazzas. The houses are lighted by electricity and the purest of spring water from the mountain top is used for drinking and cooking, being forced into the main building and cottages by an electric pump. The property is located on the crest of Watchung Mountain, a spur of the Blue Ridge, 500 feet above the sea level, and about two miles from the city. The trolley line extending along Somerset street terminates at the foot of the mountain and 15 minutes' walk along celebrated Johnston's Drive, abounding in beautiful scenery and fine views, brings one to the institution. Looking south and east the spectator sees spread before him a magnificent panorama, unsurpassed in this section. In the immediate foreground lies the beautiful city of Plainfield, beyond are Netherwood Heights, Elizabeth, Newark, Jersey City and Staten Island; while further yet, on clear days, can be seen the imperial city of New York. The Navesink Highlands Light points out the path along which returning steamers wind their way homeward through the Narrows. In the opposite direction lies the romantic Washington Valley, with its historic associations, being numbered among the battle fields of the Revolution. The bluff near the main building overlooks the "Notch," through which Stony Brook passes on its way to the picturesque Wetumpka Falls. As educational director of the National Association for the Study and Education of Exceptional Children, which maintains Herbart Hall, Dr. Maximilian P. E. Groszmann has the general supervision of its work. Mr. Waldemar H. Groszmann, a son of the founder, is the principal, and is assisted by an unusually large faculty of specially trained assistants, including teachers, caretakers, graduate nurses and matron. Only a few pupils are assigned to a teacher at a time so that the groups are small and the number of teachers is proportionately very large, and there is frequent re-grouping within the groups so that much individualization is secured. Herbart Hall is also used as a model school in connection with the courses for the training of special

CIVIL AND CONSULTING ENGINEER.

There is no profession requiring special qualifications of a higher order than those necessary to the successful civil and consulting engineer, who has won, or aspired to win, a place in the front rank. These qualifications are possessed by but few men, and even these have to work for years before winning more than average recognition. Among the civil engineers of the State, not many are better or more favorably known than Mr. F. A. Dunham, for a number of years city and county engineer, whose offices are located at 109 Park avenue. While he held these important offices, many of the great improvements were made on the streets and sewers that have made Plainfield one of the most beautiful and healthful cities of the country and he has been actively identified with public works here for years, besides having a large private business. His energies have not, by any means, been confined to this section, however, for his services have been demanded as far West as Michigan and South to Mexico. He has also done a great deal of work in this State and in New York. Mr. Dunham's map of Plainfield and North Plainfield, published several years ago, has been pronounced one of the most accurately executed pieces of work ever done, and is the standard. He has also published maps of Fanwood and Dunellen and many of the suburban developments about the city were platted by him. He also makes plans and specifications for all kinds of pavements, sewers and roads, and his clientele extends throughout this and adjoining states. Mr. Dunham is a native of this section, his ancestors having been among the oldest settlers, and was educated at Alfred University. He is one of the best known citizens of Plainfield and has had much to do with its development along the best lines.

B. A. PAROUBEK.

FOLDO PATENTED FINGER BANDAGE AND WRIST BANDS.

Few people, even old residents of the city, fully realize the extent of its manufacturing interests. Many have become so accustomed to look upon it purely as a home town, a beautiful residence place, that they have not given much attention to its industrial growth, which, after all, is the back-bone of every community. An industry that is doing its share toward helping the progress of the city in this direction, and making its name known throughout the world, is that conducted by Mr. B. A. Paroubek, manufacturer of "Foldo" patented finger bandages and wrist bands, at 23 Watchung avenue. Mr. Paroubek is the inventor and patentee as well as the sole manufacturer of these valuable appliances which are sold by druggists all over the world. They are an admirable protection for sore and injured fingers, and in many of the large factories a supply is kept constantly on hand for emergency use. They are also kept in homes and offices, and many workingmen carry them all the time. The stall or bandage is made of kid in assorted sizes, while the wrist band is of cow hide. They can be used either together or separately. Mr. Paroubek established his business on a modest scale in 1899, and during the fourteen years that have elapsed since that time it has grown steadily until today he is shipping the product to nearly every country on the globe. His business is conducted almost entirely through the mails, and those who cannot procure the "Foldo" finger bandages and wrist bands from druggists or physicians will be supplied direct. The factory is a model one, well-lighted and ventilated and was erected by Mr. Paroubek after plans that conformed to his own ideas. It is equipped with special machinery for making his invention, and has a capacity of 4,000 finger stalls and 1,000 wrist bands daily. Seventeen people are employed. Mr. Paroubek is a native of Bohemia, but came to this country a number of years ago and is actively identified with the business life of the city. He is progressive and public spirited and his confidence in the future of Plainfield has been shown in a substantial way by his investments here.

FRANK J. HUBBARD.

CIVIL ENGINEER AND SURVEYOR.

There are few professions requiring special qualifications of a higher order than those demanded of the modern civil engineer and surveyor. As in almost every other avocation the field for his activities has greatly enlarged during the last decade or two, the demand for good roads, the great suburban developments that are being made, the vast changes in methods of construction, and the introduction of new and improved machinery have all affected his work, and to be successful he must be a constant student. One of the most prominent civil engineers and surveyors in this part of New Jersey is Mr. Frank J. Hubbard, whose offices are located in the Marsh Building, at 203 Park avenue. Mr. Hubbard, although a comparatively young man, has already won his spurs. Union county is famous for its fine highways, which are among the best, in a State that is noted for its good roads, and many of them are monuments to his skill as a road builder, he having formerly been engineer of Union county, having supervision of all public works of this character. Mr. Hubbard is unusually well equipped, both by experience and education, to take charge of all kinds of engineering work, and his services are greatly in demand. As a young man he was a student of the Massachusetts School of Technology, and upon leaving there entered upon a long apprenticeship in field and office work before going into business on his own account. Mr. Hubbard is chairman of the Building Committee of Muhlenberg Hospital, to which a new addition, costing over $100,000, is now being made, and exercises a general supervision over the work. Mr. Hubbard is a public spirited gentleman, who is always ready and willing to help any cause that is for the welfare of old Plainfield. Also secretary of Committee on Revision of Taxes.

CIVIL ENGINEER AND SURVEYOR.

One of the most important positions under any city or county government is that of engineer and surveyor, and if the authorities have the good of the section at heart they select the most competent man that is available. Just at this time when North Plainfield is about to build a new sewerage system it is particularly important that the engineer in charge of its public improvements should be thoroughly competent to supervise the great work, which means much to the people of that Borough, and upon which thousands of dollars are to be expended. They are indeed fortunate in having a man like Mr. H. C. Van Emburgh in the position, for he has proved his capacity and his standing as an engineer is of the best. Mr. Van Emburgh was formerly engineer of only the Eastern section of the Borough, and served several terms, but when the two divisions were consolidated he was elected for the entire Borough. He is also engineer of Bound Brook, South Bound Brook and Fanwood, having charge of all the public works in those thriving localities. In addition to his public duties Mr. Van Emburgh carries on a large private civil engineering and surveying business and employs several assistants. He does all kinds of sewerage, pavement and railroad work, and some of the most attractive suburbs of Plainfield and other cities are examples of his skill and ability. Mr. Van Emburgh has offices in the City Building, but spends most of his time in his field work. He is known far and wide as a man of public spirit and one of Plainfield progressive men.

DEN. J. GALBRAITH.

HIGH-GRADE PLUMBING, HEATING and VENTILATING.

There has been during the last decade or two an immense advance in almost every line of human endeavor, but probably that in the field of sanitary plumbing and high grade heating and ventilating has been greater than in any other. Time was, and not very long ago, when sanitary plumbing and scientific heating by steam, hot water or hot air was considered by many as a luxury to be enjoyed only by the wealthy. Today in most modern and progressive cities the best plumbing is required by law to be installed in every house, and people are fast beginning to realize that steam or furnace heating is far better and healthier than stoves, also more economical. Among the leading men engaged in the business here in Plainfield and indeed in New Jersey, is Mr. Den. J. Galbraith, whose office, salesroom and shop is located at 193-195 North avenue. Mr. Galbraith began on a modest scale as a young man in 1892, and has succeeded by his skill and strict attention to business in building up an immense business, which is by no means confined to Plainfield, but extends throughout this section of the State. He has proved himself to be a man of originality and initiative, and while he has always been one of the first to adopt every new improvement in his craft, he has not been content to be a mere follower, but has ideas of his own. Mr. Galbraith has patented several of his inventions, which are having a wide sale throughout this country and Canada, improvements that have been recognized as being of value by the best plumbers who have used them. Among these inventions are the "Galbraith wash tray supply connections," "Galbraith's adjustible roof flashing for vent pipes," and "Galbraith's convertible basin faucets." The demand for all of these improvements is constantly increasing as their merits become more widely known. There is no department of his business that Mr. Galbraith does not thoroughly cover. He does high grade plumbing, heating and ventilating, installs underfeed and top feed furnaces and boilers, warm air, steam and hot water heating, vacuum cleaning apparatus, installs pneumatic water supply systems, laundry clothes dryers, galvanized iron duct work, metal ceilings, cornices, skylights and sheet metal work and gravity and mechanical furnace and steam plants for schools and public buildings. There is no contract too large for Mr. Galbraith to undertake and carry to a successful conclusion, and examples of his work may be seen in some of the most important buildings in this section, including the new Elks' Home, now nearing completion, the Plainfield High School, the Grant High School, at Cranford; the McKinley Primary School, at Westfield; the Washington School, at Bound Brook; four schools for the Board of Education of Piscataway; two at Raritan, and one each at Newton and Woodbridge; the Lincoln and Irving school of this city, the North Plainfield, Somerset School; the railway passenger stations at Westfield and Bound Brook, the stores of Woodhull and Martin, Schwed Brothers and A. C. Force & Co., and numbers of the most beautiful and costly residences in this part of the State. These are only a few of the many important jobs Mr. Galbraith has done, but enough has been mentioned to demonstrate his ability to do the most important kind of work demanded of the modern plumber and metal worker. Mr. Galbraith is a native of Plainfield, and has been identified with the business life of the city for many years. Mr. Galbraith has made a study of real estate, is an expert appraiser, having formulated a rule for valuing typical lots and lots more or less than a typical lot in width or depth for suburban cities, similar to the Hoffman and Davies' Rule used in New York city in condemnation proceedings. He has gathered about him a staff of the most skillful and experienced workmen, is himself an engineer, and a thoroughly practical man, and gives his personal attention to all work entrusted to his care.

THADDEUS O. DOANE.

CHIEF OF THE PLAINFIELD FIRE DEPARTMENT.

It has been truthfully said that firemen are born, not made, and no one will gainsay this statement who has ever been intimately in touch with the men whose business it is to fight fires. The man who has not a life for this kind of work can never make good, it must be inbred and shows when he is a boy with an uncontrolable ambition to run to fires. This love for the work has given Plainfield, in the person of Chief Thaddeus O. Doane, head of the local fire department, one of the best chief engineers in the country, and one who has earned for himself a reputation that extends far beyond the limits of his home city. Chief Doane is a natural born fire fighter, and has been identified with the Plainfield Department since 1865. A native of Nova Scotia, he was brought by his parents, when a boy, to Brooklyn, N. Y. In 1857 the family removed to Union county, in which this city is located, and young Doane began to learn the trade of a carpenter under his father, who was one of the leading builders and contractors of this section. When the War Between the States began in 1861 he attempted to enlist, but was refused as being too young. The following year, however, he again applied with success, although only 17 years old and was enrolled as a member of Company B, Eleventh New Jersey Volunteers, the regiment that "robbed the cradle and the grave," and went to the front. He was at the battles of Chancellorsville and Fredericksburg, passing through those great engagements without a scratch, but at Gettysburg, his next great fight, he was seriously wounded in the head and was for five months in the hospital at Baltimore. After the close of the war Chief Doane removed to Plainfield and continued to work at his trade. He also joined the volunteer fire department in 1865 and since that time has been actively identified with it, going up through the various grades, until he was made chief in 1876. He served in the same capacity in 1877 and 1879. When the city took control and made it a partly paid department, he was, in 1888, made its chief, a position he has since filled most efficiently. Chief Done has always fully kept pace with the many improvements that have been made in fire fighting methods and apparatus. He is a strict disciplinarian, though popular with his men, and the department under his chieftainship has made splendid progress, being recognized as one of the best in New Jersey. In addition to his other duties Chief Doane is building inspector, a position for which his practical experience as a contractor and builder, particularly fits him. Under his supervision nearly a million dollars in building operations goes on in Plainfield every year. One of the oldest active citizens of the community he is also one of the most progressive and public spirited.

CONCRETE BLOCKS, PAVING ORNAMENTS, ETC.

Concrete is fast taking the place that rightfully belongs to it, as the best and most economical building and paving material in existence. More durable even than granite; it is more inexpensive, and far more so, in most localities than brick and lumber. The demand for the latter material is ripidly decreasing on account of its enormously increased cost, and concrete is

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in ALL BUILDERS' MATERIALS

Nothing better indicates the progress of a city than the business done by its lumber and building supply dealers. They are true barometers of its prosperity. If the mills are kept busy turning out materials for the contractors and builders, and there is a good demand for material, it is a sure sign that the city is growing, for people do not build in times of depression. Judging from the scenes of activity about the mills and yards of the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Co., this city is experiencing a building boom such as it has rarely had before, and this is saying a great deal, for its progress during the past 10 years has been nothing short of phenomenal. In this great up-building the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Co. has played an active part, indeed the growth of the concern has been far greater than that of Plainfield. Less than 15 years ago Mr. J. D. Loizeaux started in business with one wagon. Today the concern owns two of the largest lumber yards in this city, a modern planing mill, where all kinds of mill work, such as sash, doors, blinds, flooring, mouldings and special work, is turned out, and has three sawmills in the woods of the province of New Brunswick, Canada. It has not only built up an immense local trade, but makes shipments by the car load lot in various sections of the State, and every season shows a substantial and steady growth. This is the result of a well-defined policy, initiated on the first day the business was started, December 12, 1898, to handle only the very best quality of goods at fair prices and meet all competition. There is no order too large or too small for it to fill for its patrons, whether it is a door frame for a cottage or the material for the new High School, the contract for which, by the way, the company received. The East End yards of the company are at 620 North avenue, and occupy the entire block, about 700x400, extending along the railroad tracks. These are managed by Mr. C. E. Loizeaux, a son of the founder. The West End yards at Rock avenue, near Front street, near the mills, are managed by Mr. F. D. Loizeaux, another son, while the mills at Rock avenue and South Second street, are managed by Mr. F. P. Loizeaux, a nephew. They are splendidly equipped with the latest improved machinery and about 20 men are employed. Mr. J. D. Loizeaux, the founder of this growing industry, has always been the general manager, while his sons have grown up in the business. The company deals both wholesale and retail in rough and dressed lumber and also in building supplies, such as plate and leaded glass, Roman tapestry and fireplace brick, Canadian Spruce, mason lath, Ruberoid and other roofings, Portland cement, King's wall plaster, plaster boards, plaster paris, common, finishing and hydrated lime, flue lining, sewer pipe, chimney tops, face brick, hair, fibre, stucco, drain tile, fencing and everything in this line needed by the builder of the most pretentious mansion or the most modest cottage. Nothing has been forgotten or neglected to make the three plants of this enterprising company complete in every particular, and Mr. Loizeaux and his sons have given the city a model establishment. They are among Plainfield's most public-spirited and progressive citizens and are doing their full share towards its advancement along the best lines.

taking its place. One of the leading concrete block and brick manufacturers and paving contractors in this section is Mr. William W. Wilson, whose plant is located at 816, 818 and 820 West Third street. Mr. Wilson started his business on a modest scale, about seven years ago, and has by his energy and the fact that he supplies his patrons with the highest class of goods, it grew rapidly. No material is so easily adulterated as concrete and so difficult to detect except by experts, until time and the elements have tested it. In the case of the work done by Mr. Wilson, this test has been fairly made and the concrete blocks, bricks, pavements, ornamental and building work made by him when he first entered business are as good today as they ever were—and that means the highest grade that can be made. Only the best cement, Trap rock and sand is used by him. His plant is equipped with the latest improved machinery, all material is carefully inspected before being used, and rejected if it is not up to the standard; and only the most capable and experienced concrete workers are employed. A fine example of the kind of work done by Mr. Wilson can be seen at the Columbus Club, on Front street, which has just been completed. He also furnished the blocks for the handsome fire engine house at South Plainfield, the Red Cross Drug Store, the new Tepper Garage, now building, and scores of other modern structures, not only in Plainfield, but throughout this section. Some of his best work is to be seen in Rahway, where he furnished the material for a number of handsome buildings. Mr. Wilson is also extensively engaged in the grocery business, and has been for the past 25 years at 816, 818 and 820 West Third street, with a branch on Clinton avenue. Mr. Wilson is rated as a public spirited and progressive gentleman, who is always willing to help in any cause that is for the city's welfare. He is a member of the City Council, with which body he has been connected with credit and distinction for the past five years.—See picture of plant on page 13.

SCHREINER BROTHERS.

PHARMACISTS.

In no field of human endeavor has a greater advance been made during the last decade or two than in that occupied by the pharmacist, until today the modern drug store has become the most attractive establishment in every progressive city. The day of the old fashioned apothecary shop, with its dusty shelves, rarely washed bottles and the usual crowd of loungers has passed, being succeeded by the sanitary pharmacy of the present with its clean, dust proof cases, its cut glass jars, artistic furnishings and above all else, its stock of pure drugs and medicines, compounded by registered pharmacists. One of the best examples of what a high-class, modern drug store should be, is that of Schreiner Brothers, which is most conveniently located at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, in the business section of the city, just opposite the Plainfield Trust Company's Building. Every effort has been made by the enterprising proprietors of Schreiner's Pharmacy to make it a model, and that they have been successful is demonstrated by the large and constantly increasing patronage given the enterprise by an appreciative public. The appointments of the store are unusually attractive, almost all goods are kept under glass, free from all danger of contamination, the establishment being provided with the McLean slope front cases of the latest design. The floor is artistically laid in tile, the place is the acme of cleanliness and every comfort and convenience has been provided for the use of patrons. Lovers of the purest and most delicious sodas, mineral waters, ice cream and all kinds of temperance drinks are supplied from what has been pronounced by many the handsomest fountain in the city. It is the most modern and sanitary apparatus built, made of marble, onyx, leaded glass with silver and german silver trimmings; the temperature of the soda is always the same. The fountain is twenty-one feet in length; manufactured by Robert M. Green & Son Co., of Philadelphia. Only the purest ingredients are used in the mixing of drinks and the Schreiner fountain is deservedly popular. A large stock of Whitman's celebrated confections is kept in stock, fresh supplies being received direct from the factory at frequent intervals. Everything usually found in a high class, modern drug store of the best type is kept at Schreiner's, such as toilet artciles, rubber goods, trusses, surgical appliances, perfumes, brushes, safety razors, cigars and scores of other useful novelties. A free delivery covers the entire city and suburbs. Particular attention is paid to the prescription department, one of the best equipped in the city and patronized by the most discriminating people of this section. Only the purest and freshest of drugs from the best manufacturing laboratories are used in the compounding of medicines and this department receives the personal attention of the proprietors, both of whom are registered pharmacists of long experience. Schreiner's Pharmacy has been conducted at the site of Park avenue and Second street a period of fifteen years by Mr. Berthold J. Schreiner, the senior member of the present firm. About five years ago he formed a co-partnership with his younger brother, Mr. Robert Schreiner, and under their joint proprietorship the business has continued to prosper and grow rapidly. They are among the most progressive and public spirited citizens of Plainfield, always ready and willing to do everything in their power for its advancement.

HOTEL KENSINGTON.

JOHN H. KITCHEN, PROP.
W. J. KITCHEN, MGR.

There is no better criterion of the progressiveness and prosperity of a city than is the kind and character of the hotels it supports. The business and social life of the place are, to a great extent, reflected in its hostelries in miniature and the visitor naturally forms his ideas of its activities, in some degree, from the accommodations that are provided for him at the hotel where he chances to be a guest. This being true it must be admitted that good hotels are one of the most valuable assets a city can possess. Among the most deservedly popular stopping places in Plainfield is the Hotel Kensington, of which Mr. John H. Kitchen is the proprietor and his son, Mr. W. J. Kitchen, the manager. The Kensington has been pronounced by experienced travelers to be the best $2-a-day hotel in New Jersey, a reputation it has held for many years under various managements. Notwithstanding the high cost of living, the Messrs. Kitchen have demonstrated to the satisfaction of their patrons that a high-class hotel can be conducted along the best lines at reasonable prices, giving its guests the best the market affords, comfortable rooms, and the most sanitary appointments. Because of high prices charged for food stuffs many of the best two-dollar-a-day houses in the country have been compelled to increase rates, but the Kensington has continued along the even tenor of its way, and the fact that many of its patrons have continued to write their names on its register every time they visit Plainfield is the best evidence that its service has been most satisfactory. The Hotel Kensington was erected in 1876, the year of the Centennial, but it does not impress anyone as being that old, for it is up to the standard in every way, and has been kept in excellent condition. The site is an admirable one, the hotel being on North avenue near Park, within a short distance of the railway station, and in the centre of the business section of the city. It is of brick, four stories in height and contains 40 sleeping rooms, unusually large, well-ventilated and well-furnished. It is provided with all modern conveniences, such as baths, steam heat and electric lights and nothing has been left undone or neglected that would in any way add to the comfort of its guests. The dining room on the first floor is bright and attractive, particular attention is given to the cuisine and the service is excellent. There is an atmosphere of solid home comfort prevading the Kensington that is found in few hotels, and it is not to be wondered at that many commercial travelers, covering this territory, strive to reach Plainfield on Saturday night so as to have a good day of rest at this modern hostelry. Mr. John H. Kitchen, the owner of the Hotel Kensington, is a native of this section, and for many years has been one of its best known citizens. He is quite a property owner and has done his full share towards the growth of Plainfield and has built a number of the most attractive residences here. Mr. W. J. Kitchen, the manager and son of the proprietor, was formerly a commercial traveler and the experience he gained while on the road has been most valuable to him since he assumed the management of the hotel about two years ago. He knows hundreds of the knights of the grip and is regarded by all of them as a royal good fellow. Both gentlemen are known in Plainfield, are public spirited and progressive citizens who are always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to any cause that is for the welfare of old Plainfield, their home and the little city in which they have cast their fortunes.

THE WELL KNOWN HOTEL KENSINGTON.

C. H. LANE.

PAINTER AND DECORATOR.

No matter how talented the architect and how conscientiously the contractor has followed his plans and specifications, the appearance of a building must seriously suffer unless the painter and decorator does his work artistically, uses the best materials and thoroughly understands his business. Painting and decorating done by an unskilled hand mars the appearance of a building, just as the beauty of a woman can be detracted from by an ill-fitting gown. The discriminating people of Plainfield have long since realized this fact, and for this reason the painting and decorating business conducted by Mr. C. H. Lane, at 411 Sycamore street, has grown steadily and he is recognized as a leader in his line throughout this section of New Jersey. For the past nine years he has conducted business on his own account here, and during that time has numbered among his patrons many of the best-known property owners, contractors and builders, not only of this city, but of the surrounding country. Some of the finest work to be seen in this part of the State is the product of his brush, and those of his staff of skillful and experienced employes. At the present time he is just putting the finishing touches to the handsome Manning Building on Park avenue, one of the most imposing structures recently erected in Plainfield, and is also doing the work on several handsome residences being built by Mr. Manning on Watchung avenue. His work can also be seen on the handsome houses recently erected by Mr. William H. Abbott, on Hillside avenue, and on scores of other buildings. Besides contracting for all kinds of house painting, Mr. Lane does wall-papering and decorating, and also deals in ready-mixed paints. Among standard paints handled by him are "Satin-ite," "Summit" and the product of the celebrated Berry Brothers' factory. Mr. Lane came here from Somerville, where he was in business and was formerly a member of the firm of Hoffman & Lane. He is among the substantial and progressive citizens of the community, and is always ready to do his full share in its up-building.

STORE OF C. H. LANE.

NAT. LEVY & CO.

MANUFACTURERS OF LADIES' UNDERGARMENTS.

Plainfield, as a manufacturing centre is fast pushing its way to the front and even many of its inhabitants do not realize its importance industrially. The class of factories located here is of the most desirable character, giving employment to intelligent men and women and there is a marked absence of the undesirable element of employes that make a residence in the average manufacturing city anything but pleasant. The city occupies at once the unique position of being an industrial centre and one of the most beautiful residential cities in the country. One of the leading industries of Plainfield is the great ladies' undergarment factory of Nat. Levy & Co., which occupies the immense building on Watchung avenue once used as a skating rink and which has the distinction of having the largest floor space of any building in New Jersey. It has a frontage of 150 feet and extends to the rear a distance of 362 feet, there is a second floor, 33x185, and the total floor space is nearly 60,000 square feet. The room is very high pitched, well-ventilated and a flood of light is furnished from the great windows in the roof. There is probably not a finer work room in the world, clean, sanitary and bright and is in striking contrast with some of the places where clothing is made. The firm makes every grade of medium and fine undergarments for women and its leading brand, the "Princess Slip,"

Good clothes constitute an asset that cannot be overestimated and without them a man labors under a handicap in achieving success that is difficult to overcome. First impressions mean much to most people and good clothes help to make a favorable one; they are an introduction silently proclaiming the status of the wearer and the well-dressed man, other things being anywhere near equal, has an advantage over the one who is not that can hardly be estimated. So that purely as an investment they pay the biggest kind of dividends.

There is really no valid reason why every man should not be well and stylishly dressed and no matter how small his income may be he can, with a little economy and self-denial, be as well dressed as others who do not have to count the cost. Improvements in manufacture and modern methods of merchandise have wrought wonders in the clothing and men's furnishing goods business during the past few years, and nowhere can the changes that have taken place be seen to better advantage than at Rothberg's, Plainfield's most modern clothing store, which has within a short time won for itself a high place among the leaders as headquarters for the best dressed men of this city and section.

Many residents who formerly bought all their clothing in New York now patronize Rothberg's, having learned by experience that his stock is quite up to the standard of the most widely known dealers there, while his prices are generally lower on account of the difference in expenses, a difference that Mr. Rothberg shares with his patrons. This establishment, which has been so successful in so short a time, is conducted along the most modern lines, every offer of goods carries an honest profit to the seller and a consequent honest value to the buyer; there are no false or sharp merchandising tricks to shatter confidence, that is not the Rothberg way. Success has come strictly as the result of fair and square dealing.

Here is Mr. Rothberg's creed, succinctly set forth and it is lived up to the letter: My Creed:—To Sell for Cash Only; To Sell at a Moderate Profit; to Warrant Absolute Satisfaction; To Be Courteous to Every Customer; To Show the New Good Things First; To Sell Only Dependable Merchandise. Besides carrying out this creed Mr. Rothberg gives a guarantee with every article he sells that it is just as represented and if the purchase does not prove entirely satisfactory in every way he will return the price or supply other merchandise in its place. His business methods are as clean cut as a cameo and that they are appreciated has been amply proven by his success.

Rothberg's is located at 214 West Front street in the centre of Plainfield's shopping district and next to Proctor's Theatre. The store fronts on the main thoroughfare of the city 20 feet and extends to the rear 90 feet, is furnished with modern fixtures including cases for clothing, with glass fronts, built along the sides. The principal lines of ready-to-wear clothing kept in stock are Stein-Bloch, the Alfred Benjamin Washington Company and the "Elk" brand, the latter manufactured expressly for young men. Indeed, Rothberg's is often called the "Young Men's Store," on account of its popularity with them, although clothing suitable for men of all ages is carried.

Mr. Rothberg also represents the "Royal Tailors," one of the best made-to-order houses in the country, and carries a full line of woolens. This department of his business is very popular with those of his customers who prefer custom-made clothes. A complete line of gentlemen's furnishing goods, including Arrow Shirts and Collars, Onyx Hosiery and "Mallory," Cravenette and "Rothberg Special" hats are also carried. Mr. Rothberg opened his doors for business on March 30 of last year, and the success with which his enterprise has met has been most gratifying to him. He is a firm believer in the efficiency of printers' ink, especially in the newspapers and his unique and well-written advertisements in local papers always attract a great deal of attention, for their virile force and originality of conception. Had he not been a success as a merchant he would have made a name for himself as an advertising writer. Born in New York Mr. Samuel Rothberg has lived in Plainfield since the year of his birth. He was educated at the public schools, but went to work before graduating at the High School and has been hard at it ever since. A type of the young business man who is doing so much for the upbuilding of Plainfield, Mr. Rothberg is one of its most enthusiastic boosters and an active member of the Board of Trade. He is a public spirited and progressive citizen who is always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to any cause that is for the welfare of a new and greater Plainfield.

is known everywhere, among ladies who delight in dainty lingerie. The equipment is of the best, all the machinery being of the most improved pattern and the output of the firm of Nat. Levy & Co. amounts to about $1,000,000 a year. The firm also has factories in Elizabeth and Newark, the general offices being located at 170 Fifth avenue, New York. Its goods, on account of their superiority and high standing in the market have a wide sale which extends from one end of the country to the other and every year shows an increased output. The Plainfield factory was established about 12 years ago and has been conducted by the present firm for the past eight years. This consists of Messrs. Nat. Levy and Max Herzig, both of whom have been in the business for years, having held responsible positions with the original firm. Mr. Robert Heyman is the capable and experienced superintendent in charge of the plant and has been associated with the business for a long time, being familiar with its every detail. Although the members of the firm of Nat. Levy & Co. do not live in Plainfield, they are frequent visitors here and have the greatest confidence in its future industrial development.

McCULLOUGH & RHODIER.

BUILDING CONTRACTORS.

There is no class of men in the community who have more to do with the growth and progress of the city than have its contractors and builders, if they are men of experience and ability. They have the indelible mark of their skill, or lack of it, impressed on the architecture of the city where they operate and whether its buildings are substantial and attractive, or the reverse, rests to a great extent with them. Although the firm of McCullough & Rhodier has only been in existence since last February, it has already won for itself a leading place among the contractors and builders of Plainfield by the high character of its work and its rigid adherance to the specifications of architects and the wishes of owners. The old adage to the effect that a new broom sweeps clean is certainly true so far as this firm is concerned and its the determination of its members to always remain new in this respect. Competition in the building trades is probably as keen in Plainfield as it is anywhere, and the fact that McCullough & Rhodier are getting their full share of the work, and are kept busy, is the best proof that could be produced that their work has proved satisfactory. The firm recently completed a handsome residence for Mr. M. E. Watson on Grant avenue, and are preparing to build another for the same gentleman. They also built the handsome addition to St. Joseph's Church. The firm are specialists at repairing and remodeling, and are doing a great deal of work of this kind for the property owners of this city and section. Estimates are cheerfully furnished and the highest class of workmanship is guaranteed. The firm of McCullough & Rhodier consists of Mr. J. H. McCullough and A. J. Rhodier, both of whom are well known in this section. Mr. McCullough is from North Plainfield and is a young business man of the type that is doing so much for the development of the city. Mr. Rhodier is a skilled carpenter, who has worked in this section for the past 20 years on some of the finest structures that have been erected during that time. The office of the concern is at 197 North avenue. Anyone contemplating building or making repairs of any kind will make no mistake in consulting McCullough & Rhodier.

CHARLES KURTZMAN.

PLAINFIELD FUR STORE. HIGH CLASS, FANCY FURS, SCARFS, MUFFS, JACKETS, COATS, ETC.

There is no line of endeavor in which special skill and qualifications are more necessary than in the business of manufacturing, repairing and altering of furs. Most furs are valuable, many of them have been given the owners as presents and are valued on this account and too much care cannot be exercised in entrusting them to men of known experience and skill. An irresponsible and inexperienced workman may entirely ruin furs worth hundreds of dollars and there is no chance of recovery, so it behooves the fur owner to patronize dealers who are responsible and have established a sound reputation for doing high class work. Such a man is Mr. Charles Kurtzman, whose establishment is located at 178 East Front street. Mr. Kurtzman is a thoroughly skilled and experienced workman. He learned his business in Russia, where most of the finest furs come from and there is no detail of the business with which he is not familiar. Every commission entrusted to his care has his personal and particular attention and by strict attention to business and straightforward dealing, he has succeeded in building up a large and constantly increasing trade among the most prominent owners of furs in the State of New Jersey. He manufactures to order after his own designs, and those of others, high class furs, scarfs, muffs, jackets, coats, caps, gloves and everything for personal use made from fur. He also has constantly on hand a large stock, valued at thousands of dollars, of ready-to-wear furs. His display of fine furs comes as a surprise in a city the size of Plainfield, especially as it is in such close proximity to New York, but Mr. Kurtzman has fully demonstrated the wisdom of locating here by successfully competing with the great furriers of the metropolis. The fact that his expenses are much lower than theirs and the additional fact that he gives his own personal attention to the business, eliminating high-priced salesmen, enables him to sell the same goods as his competitors at much more reasonable prices. Every article that leaves his salesrooms carries with it his personal guarantee of quality, a guarantee that is backed by reputation and capital. A specialty is made of alterations, his shop being equipped with the best fur machines. Mr. Kurtzman conducts the only exclusively fur store in Plainfield, where he has been located for the past five years, coming here from Trenton. He is one of the most progressive young business men of the city and merits the success with which he is meeting.

LADIES' TAILOR AND FURRIER.

Every women looks well in a tailor-made suit, no matter how she may look in any other, and that this is fully appreciated is proven by the fact that every really well dressed woman has at least one suit, if not more, in her wardrobe made by a high-class tailor. There is something chic, something fetching about a stylish, well-tailored gown that is possessed by no other garment. The discriminating ladies of Plainfield and this vicinity are rapidly beginning to realize that they can have their suits made in this city much better and more reasonable than they can in New York, and the man who has brought this about to a greater extent probably than any other, is Mr. S. Weintrob, the ladies' tailor and furrier, of 208 East Fifth street. Mr. Weintrob has practically demonstrated to many of them that he can make their suits just as well, and as stylishly as they can be made in New York, after the latest mode and by the best workmen at least 25 per cent. cheaper. He worked for years in the metropolis as well as abroad as a fitter; he is thoroughly conversant with every detail of the business, and he knows exactly how it can be done and what is more to the point, he has proved it conclusively. For the last seven years he has been in business here in Plainfield, and during that time has had as his patrons some of the most stylishly dressed and particular ladies of this section, many of whom formerly bought all their gowns in New York. He has made suits for them, they have compared them with those from the New York tailors, and have become his regular customers, a fact that requires no comment. Mr. Weintrob keeps in constant touch with the fashion centres of Paris, Berlin, London and Vienna, he has had a wide experience and is thoroughly practical. His establishment at 208 East Fifth street, is handsomely and attractively furnished, every comfort and convenience is provided for his patrons and every garment that leaves his shop has his personal guarantee of perfection. Mr. Weintrob has been 36 years in business, twenty-two of which were spent abroad with some of the leading ladies' tailors of the world, such as Jay's, of London, which work for most of the crowned heads of Europe. He came to this country 14 years ago, and was for seven years with Stern & Blaine and other prominent tailors before coming to Plainfield, where he has by his skill and straight-forward dealing built up a large and growing business.

SCHILLER BROS.

MANUFACTURERS OF "PATRICIA" AND "ESTELLA" LADIES' MUSLIN UNDERWEAR.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 119-125 W. TWENTY-FOURTH STREET.

As a centre for the manufacture of fine and medium ladies' muslin underwear, Plainfield has for a long time held a leading place. It is an industry that has done its full share in the development and growth of the city and every year shows a decided increase in the output. One of the leading firms engaged in the industry here is that of Schiller Brothers, whose factory is located at 318-20-22-24 West Front street, occupying the entire third floor of these buildings. Well lighted and ventilated and supplied with every convenience for the safety and comfort of the more than 100 employes working there, the factory is exceptionally bright and the sanitary arrangements are perfect. This firm has always looked out carefully for the interests of its employes, many of its operatives having been with them for 20 years, a record that speaks well for both employer and employee. Schiller Brothers are exclusively manufacturers of muslin underwear, and their "Patricia" and "Estella" brands are well and favorably known to particular dressers everywhere they have been introduced. For more than a quarter of a century "Patricia Undermuslins" have been the standard of elegance, style and value and the wearer of this brand can rest secure in the knowledge that she has the best that can be had. The "Estella" has been more recently placed on the market, it is in the nature of a combination garment and immediately caught the fancy of up-to-date dressers. Both of these brands, made in various grades, are manufactured from the best muslins and the workmanship is perfect. Both brands are registered in the Patent Office at Washington and are made only by Schiller Bros. The firm has been in business for the past 27 years and "Schiller Quality" means much in trade circles. The Plainfield factory was established about ten years ago, this and another in Brooklyn, being branches of the New York City plant, which was the first established. The local factory is in charge of Mr. H. Katz, who has proved himself a capable and efficient superintendent. Both Mr. Max and Mr. Harry Schiller, the two brothers who compose the firm, live in New York, where they have an office at 119-125 West Twenty-fourth street. They have, however, always taken an active interest in the progress and growth of Plainfield in the future of which they have the greatest confidence.

VICTOR L. DRELLICH & CO.

MANUFACTURER OF BOYS' WASH SUITS FOR THE WHOLESALE TRADE.

Plainfield as a manufacturing centre is growing much more rapidly than even the majority of its own inhabitants are aware, and every year shows a substantial increase in the number of its industries. These are of the most desirable character and are what the people want. They give employment to skillful and intelligent people, and not to the rough element that is of benefit to no community, especially to those of a city as beautiful as Plainfield. One of the latest industries to locate here, and one that has received a hearty welcome, is that established by Victor L. Drellich & Co., manufacturers of fine wash suits for the wholesale trade. The factory of this enterprising concern is located in the building 318 to 324 West Front street, and although the firm started in business only about six months ago it now employs seventy people, and the number is being rapidly increased. This increase has been so great that the space occupied has recently been doubled and now extends on Front street 100 feet, nearly 10,000 feet of floor space being occupied. The factory is unusually bright, well-ventilated and roomy, and the sanitary arrangements are of the best. This is one of the constantly growing number of progressive concerns which pays particular attention to the comfort and welfare of its employes and has to an extent introduced co-operative methods in its business. Every employe is guaranteed a certain wage, paid on Saturday of each week. Everything the operator makes over this wage is paid for extra. An incentive is thus given to employes to do more and better work, they take an interest in the success of the business, for its success is also their own. The system has worked most admirably and the firm has succeeded, in a comparatively short time, in assembling a staff of loyal employes who appreciate that they are part of the business. The product of the Victor L. Drellich & Co. consists exclusively of fine wash suits for boys, from three to 18 years old, and the superiority of the workmanship has already placed this firm among the leading manufacturers of the country. WADLEY AND GOODENOUGH

INCORPORATED JANUARY 1910

Dealers in THE BEST COAL, WOOD and ICE

Yard: 208 MADISON AVENUE

TELEPHONE 887

Competition in the coal, wood and ice business is unusually keen in Plainfield and the fact that in a comparatively few years a new concern has made a place for itself in the front rank is the best evidence in the world that its dealings have been most satisfactory. It also shows that there is always room for men of energy and initiative and the Press is glad to chronicle the success with which Wadley & Goodenough, dealers in coal, wood and ice, have met. The yards of the concern, immediately adjacent to the railroad tracks, are most conveniently arranged for handling the large trade that has been built up, and which every year grows larger. Fronting about 100 feet on the avenue they extend back a distance of about 300, providing a large space, all of which is utilized. The coal supplied its customers by Wadley & Goodenough comes direct from the best mines of this country, it is of the highest grade and is stored in sheds having a capacity of about 3,500 tons. Many people do not realize that the quality of coal from different mines varies greatly, that the percentage of heat thrown out differs in degree, and that some is much freer from slate and dust than others. But such is the fact and the dealer having the interest of his patrons, as well as his own to consider, investigates, before he makes his contracts, and gets the best. It is only by doing this that he gets his trade and keeps it and getting the best has been the secret of the success of Wadley & Goodenough. Another element that has played a prominent part is prompt and courteous service. When a promise of delivery is made by this concern the coal will be there. It is this attention to detail that has had much to do with building up the trade. The yards occupied by Wadley & Goodenough are probably the oldest in Plainfield, having for many years been known as the Holmes Coal Yard. About five years ago Mr. A. C. Wadley purchased the business and, for a time, conducted it alone, being joined about four years ago by Mr. A. T. Goodenough, the firm becoming Wadley & Goodenough. In January, 1910, the business was incorporated, Mr. A. C. Wadley becoming president, his father, Mr. Albert Wadley, vice-president, and Mr. Goodenough secretary and treasurer. All of the officers originally came from New Rochelle, but since coming to Plainfield have been thoroughly identified with the interests of this city. Besides its large coal business the concern has also built up an extensive ice business and the same attention to detail has brought success to this department. Before going into this branch of business a thorough investigation of conditions was made with the result that it was decided to handle nothing but natural ice. This conclusion was reached after reading Bulletin No. 35, issued by the United States Government, giving the result of analyses of specimens of artificial and natural ice made by experts, who found that the latter was purer than the former and more healthful in every way when taken from an uncontaminated body of water. The concern then proceeded to search for the best that could be had and found it in the Pocano Mountain ice from the lake there. The concern proposes to go still further and intends to equip its wagons with tanks holding about 40 gallons of water so that every piece of ice can be thoroughly cleansed before being placed in the refrigerators or coolers of its patrons. It is by attending to every little detail that Wadley & Goodenough, have, and are building up their business and the success with which they have met proves how the public appreciate their efforts. The company also conducts large coal and wood yards at Stamford, Conn., where Mr. Wadley resides, although making frequent visits to Plainfield. The officers of the company are among the most successful and progressive merchants of Plainfield, a success that has been well merited by strict attention to the needs of patrons.

BERFELDEN MILLS.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY.
TELEPHONE, PLAINFIELD 1046.
120 WASHINGTON AVENUE.

Plainfield is especially fortunate in having as its principal industries those of a class requiring unusual skill and paying remunerative wages. As a consequence its population of working people are men and women of a high grade of intelligence. One of its industries that has done much toward giving employment to this class of working people is the Berfelden Mills, manufacturers of silks at 120 Washington street. These mills, located in one of the best sections of the city, furnish a model for others. Clean, well ventilated and sanitary, they are in striking contrast to many others and the owners take pride in furnishing their employes with an attractive place in which to work. Fronting 40 feet on Washington avenue, the building extends back a distance of 80 feet, is of brick and three stories in height, containing nearly 10,000 feet of floor space. Electricity is used for power so that there is no dirt or smoke and the goods that leave the Berfelden Mills are as clean and sanitary as the best of surroundings could possibly make them. Purchasers of silk, when they see the Berfelden label can rest assured that they are getting the best. Crepe goods are made exclusively. There are 60 looms in the plant and 53 employes, two-thirds of whom are young ladies and one-third men, all expert workers. The Berfelden Mills take its name from the little village in Germany from which the father of Mr. S. M. Rosenthal, the president and treasurer, comes. He has lived in this country all his life, being born here, but remembering the home of his father's boyhood with pleasure, as nearly all of us do. Mr. Eugene Renz, the superintendent and one of the directors is a native of Switzerland and a practical silk manufacturer of many years experience. Mr. Renz has lived in this country for 30 years, most of that time in this section. Messrs. Rosenthal and Renz came to Plainfield in 1909 and have been most successful in building up one of the city's most flourishing enterprises. They are among its most substantial and progressive citizens and have proven their confidence in its future by making a large investment here.

KORNFIELD'S.

THE SANITARY STEAM BAKERY.

Good bread, as everyone knows, is the best and most wholesome of foods, and stands far ahead of any other diet in nutriment, that has been placed on earth to sustain the life of the human family. The same thing can be said of pastry and cake, when properly cooked, but as every lover of the good things of life is aware, the high-class bread and pastry cook is the exception rather than the rule. Home-made bread cannot be as good as that made at a modern, sanitary bakery like Kornfield's, it would be impossible to have an equipment in the home like he possesses, without the expenditure of thousands of dollars and the employment of many men. It is impossible to make bread at home that is sanitary, for it has constantly to be handled by the cook from the time the flour is taken from the barrel until the bread or pastry is placed in the oven, while Kornfield's bread, cakes and pastry are made entirely by machinery in a bakery that is kept as clean as can be and frequently inspected by the health authorities who have never had any cause of complaint. Kornfield Bread is one of the institutions of Plainfield and this section, it has gained its splendid reputation and large sale on its merits, and the fact that Mr. Kornfield has kept these merits constantly before the public by advertising, for he is a firm believer in printer's ink. His systematically organized delivery service extends throughout the city, a specially constructed automobile being used for quick delivery. Orders will be called for and delivered without extra charge and when given at the store, 127 West Front street, or through telephone No. 620, will receive prompt and most careful attention. A large trade is done along the various lines of railroad entering the city and a branch store is maintained at 127 West Front street, where a stock of the most delicious cakes and pastries, bread, rolls, biscuits and doughnuts, fresh from the oven is kept constantly on hand. The store is presided over by Mrs. Kornfield, who has had much to do with the success of the business and has proved herself to be an excellent business woman. The bakery is operated by steam and extends back 200 feet, the largest in Plainfield, and the best equipped. There are three modern high-class ovens of the best pattern, two being used for bread and the other for pastry. Last year a new oven of the latest design was installed as the business of the bakery had outgrown its equipment and will soon do so again at the rapid rate of increase. The bakery is a model of cleanliness and sanitation, not a speck of dirt can be seen anywhere and only the most experienced bakers are employed and the best materials used. Mr. Kornfield stands for all that is best in bread making and that his efforts to give the people of this city and section only the best are appreciated is amply proving by his growing business. So rapid has this increase been that the present quarters are being rapidly outgrown and negotiations are now on for the erection of a new building, in the suburbs, which it is proposed to make the finest and best equipped baking plant in New Jersey. Kornfield's is not only the largest bakery in Plainfield, but it is by far the oldest, probably the oldest in the State. It was established far beyond the memory of the oldest inhabitant and supplied the people of Plainfield with bread when it was a village of only a few hundred inhabitants. It grew with the city, however, every modern appliance has been added to the equipment and modern methods used in distribution. Mr. L. Kornfield, the proprietor, came to Plainfield about 9 years ago and for several years ran a bread wagon, buying his goods from the bakery of which he is now the owner. Three years ago he purchased the plant and under his enterprising and skillful management, it has grown phenomenally. Mr. Kornfield is a native of Odessa, Russia, a thoroughly practical man, and since making his home here has been actively identified with the business life of the city.

THE IVAMY COMPANY.

HIGH-CLASS MEAT MARKET AND ALL VARIETIES OF SEA FOOD.

Few places are so attractive to every lover of good things to eat as a high-class establishment, devoted to handling the best and choicest of meats, fresh sea food of every kind, game in season, and fine poultry. The modern store of this kind is very different from that of only a few years ago and as an example of the immense progress that has been made the establishment of the Ivamy Co., at 126 West Second street, is a splendid illustration. Nothing has been neglected or forgotten that would go toward making this a model, meat, sea food, game and poultry store, and that the efforts of its owners have been appreciated is proven by the fact that it numbers among its patrons the people who want, and will have, only the best that is to be had. The equipment of the store is modern in every particular and the sanitary arrangements are perfect. One of the most difficult problems that confronts the dealer in fish, oysters and sea food generally is that of cleanliness. Such products must be kept separated from all others. It is necessary that they be handled quickly, for no kind of food deteriorates more rapidly than that taken from the water. This problem has been solved by the Ivamy Co. most successfully and its plant would be a credit to any city, no matter what its size. The establishment is equipped with refrigerators of the latest pattern, porcelain and glass lined and every precaution is taken to prevent the slightest contamination, by the use of sanitary receptacles. The automobile service maintained by the company assures the promptest delivery and covers every section of the city and suburbs completely. The officers of the Ivamy Co. are Adam J. Heim, president, and Fred Ivamy, secretary-treasurer and general manager, both of whom are thoroughly practical men of long experience who have for years been identified with the business life of the city. They are among its most progressive merchants and take pride in giving their home city an establishment of the highest class.

IVAMY'S WELL-KNOWN MARKET.

MATHUSHEK & SON PIANO CO.

MAKERS OF GRAND, UPRIGHT AND PLAYER PIANOS.

A. E. WILLARD, MANAGER.

No other musical instrument can compare in popularity with the piano. Time was, and not very long ago, when only the rich or well-to-do could afford a high-class piano in their homes, but this condition maintains no longer, because of improved machinery, a larger output and modern methods of merchandising. Every music lover can now possess a fine instrument with the exercise of a little self-denial and economy, no matter how moderate their income may be. And every genuine music lover wants the best, the catch-penny methods of a certain class of dealers do not appeal to them, and they deal only with reliable dealers. For years the Mathushek Piano has stood in the front rank, as it does today, it is par excellence the piano of the artist, and the name stands for all that is best in piano making. The Mathushek & Son Piano Co., the manufacturers of this superb instrument, have for the last ten years maintained a branch in Plainfield, at 310 West Front street, of which Mr. A. E. Willard is the manager, and during this time it has been the headquarters of the music lovers of this city and section. A fine stock of grand, upright and player pianos is kept in stock, both new and used, and there are always bargains to be found at the Mathushek warerooms. The company is prepared to do all kinds of tuning and repairing in the most workmanlike manner at reasonable prices and has among its patrons a large percentage of the discriminating music lovers in Plainfield. Besides the Mathushek, the concern also handles the Opera, Jacobs Bros. and other pianos, now made at its factories, which are located in New York and New Haven, Conn. The history of the Mathushek & Son Piano Company, extending back over many years, occupies a most important place in the history of piano building in this country. No piano enjoys a higher reputation than does the Mathushek & Son, and this has been gained by a conscientious adherence to the rules and methods laid down, in the inception of the business by Frederick Mathushek, the founder, who is regarded as the most historic character in the piano world, and certainly the father of more important inventions than any man ever engaged in the manufacture of pianofortes. He was succeeded by his son, V. Hugo Mathushek, the present president of the company, who has also invented many improvements, including the persistency of the family in its efforts to produce a faultless piano. Space will not permit a technical description of the many valuable patents owned by the concern. We will just briefly mention our Duplex or Double Sounding Board. It differs from all other sounding boards in that it is a combination of two boards cross-banded and glued together. By it we obviate the necessity of strips of wood or ribs found on all other sounding boards, and which so often become loose, causing the rattle and buzz so annoying to musicians. By it we obtain a perfect, free and natural vibration, resulting in a longer, purer and sweeter singing tone. Pianos are sold and rented on the easy payment plan and the company is also the agent here of the Victor Talking Machine. A large stock of the latest machines and all the new records is kept on hand. Mr. Willard, the manager, has been in charge of the branch ever since it was established, coming here from New York when it was first opened, and has since been actively identified with the business life of the city.

ARCHITECT.

Much of the beauty and attractiveness of every city, as well as the substantial character of its buildnigs, is due to the architect employed by its property owners, builders and contractors. There is a class of citizens who, from a mistaken idea of what economy really means, conclude that the services of an architect are unnecessary and the result of this is that a large number of architectural monstrosities have been perpetrated on the public that are not only offensive to the taste, but a loss to the owner. With the same material and labor an architect would have produced far different results. Plainfield is a city of beautiful homes and handsome business houses, and no one has had more to do with bringing this result about than Mr. W. H. Clum, the oldest architect of the city. Since he first opened an office here in 1871, Mr. Clum has drawn the plans for over 5,600 buildings of various kinds that have been erected in Plainfield and the surrounding country, a wonderful record, considering the high character of the work. After spending about three years in Plainfield on his first visit Mr. Clum returned to his home in Elizabeth, where he remained until 1884 when he again opened an office in Plainfield, and has since been identified intimately with the business

The STATE TRUST COMPANY

"AT THE SIGN OF THE CLOCK"

CAPITAL STOCK, $100,000

One of the most thoroughly equipped financial institutions in the country, and one that has several branches of service that many have not, is the State Trust Co., located at 201 Park avenue, at the southeast corner of Second street. The fact that this company has built up its deposits to over $500,000 in less than three years, is excellent evidence of the kind of service it is rendering its patrons. The company formerly did an exclusive banking business and in 1910 it took over the business of the Borough National Bank. It had deposits of $138,541.95, and these have been increased to over half a million. The business of the State Trust Co. is divided into six departments. Banking, special, trust, safe deposit and storage, and real estate, in each of which it is prepared to serve its patrons along the most modern lines. In the banking department 3 per cent. interest is paid on checking accounts for the actual time funds are on deposit, provided a balance of $500 or more is maintained. Smaller amounts than this, however, are welcome. Items at points throughout the United States and Canada are credited at par and the privilege of making one's checks payable in New York will be extended to depositors if a satisfactory balance is maintained. This gives them all the facilities of a New York account plus 3 per cent. interest, but minus collection charges. In the special department accounts may be opened with $5 or more, on which 4 per cent. interest will be paid. Here deposits made before the fourth day of any month will draw interest from the first of the month, which interest will be credited January 1 and July 1 on all sums that have remained on deposit for three months or longer, prior to those dates. The company is empowered by law to execute trusts of every description. It acts as executor, administrator, guardian, trustee, etc., the charges for such service being the same as allowed an individual. The State Trust Company is prepared to render service as agent for the sale, rental or exchange of real estate of every description for the usual commission, also to act as agent for the care of investiment property, collect rents, pay taxes, make repairs and attend to insurance. The advantage of listing property with an institution like the State Trust Company are many. The company is in touch with investors; it has money to loan on bonds and mortgages, and property listed benefits by a liberal advertising expenditure made both in Plainfield and New York. The safe deposit department is equipped with a round door manganese steel vault, absolutely fire and burglar proof. Boxes are rented from $5 to $100 a year. Valuables can also be stored at reasonable charges. The company also does a mail banking business and its facilities in every department are of the most up-to-date character. It has a capital stock of $100,000, a surplus of $50,000, and deposits of more than $500,000. Its officers are among the best known and most substantial business men in this city and section. They are: R. Henry Depew, president; Edward F. Feickert, vice-president; M. C. Van Arsdale, vice-president, and H. C. Nash, secretary-treasurer. The board of directors is made up of Frank C. Ard, Plainfield, N. J., physician; George L. Babcock, Plainfield, N. J., treasurer, Spicer Manufacturing Company; Samuel Bingaman, Plainfield, N. J., treasurer Communipaw Steel Co., New York; George S. Clay, Plainfield, N. J., Dillon, Thompson & Clay, New York City; J. H. Cooley, Plainfield, N. J., physician; R. Henry Depew, Plainfield, N. Progressive and public spirited, the officers and directors of the State Trust Company are doing a splendid work in helping develop the resources and make known the attractions and advantages of Plainfield as a delightful home city and also as a location for industrial enterprises.

WINN AND HIGGINS.

PLUMBING, HEATING AND TINNING.

Modern sanitary plumbing and steam and hot water heating have long been recognized as a necessity in every modern home, factory, store and public building, and in no city of its size is there a greater demand for high-class plumbers than here in Plainfield. That this is true is shown by the success with which the new firm of Winn & Higgins has met since it started in business. Although this firm has only been in existence since April 1st of the present year, and has unusually keen competition, it has received a most generous share of the public patronage and numbers among its customers some of the most discriminating and particular property owners, builders and contractors of this city and section. The firm has an excellently equipped shop and salesroom at 130 Watchung avenue, and its facilities for doing all kinds of plumbing in the most workman-like manner and installing heating plants are exceptionally good. The same careful attention is given to repairs as is paid to new work. The firm is also prepared to do all kinds of tinning, roofing and spouting promptly and at short notice, and its terms will be found to be most reasonable. Estimates will be furnished cheerfully upon application. The firm is composed of Mr. F. J. Winn and H. K. Higgins. Mr. Winn is a thoroughly practical man with a wide experience in all branches of his trade and is well and favorably known among the builders, contractors, architects and property owners of Plainfield and this vicinity. Mr. Higgins has also had an experience of some years principally in the supply department and in estimating. They are practical and progressive men who have confidence in the future growth of Plainfield, and are always ready to do all in their power toward its development along the best lines.

OLIVE OIL AND TABLE LUXURIES.

To many lovers of the good things of life, the table delicacies for which Italy has been famous for centuries make a strong appeal. But like many other things they have been so much imitated that it is difficult to get the genuine article, unless they are purchased by dealers direct from the importer. This method has been forced upon high class dealers, who have so often been imposed upon, and have in turn, innocently imposed upon their customers. There is no longer any danger of this in Plainfield and section, however, for, located on the Terrell road, Plainfield, is Mr. E. M. Brancati, importer of pure olive oils, etc. Mr. Brancati's main establishment is located in New York city, but from the local branch may be obtained all the good articles he deals in. Among other things, Mr. Brancati is a notary public and an Italian by birth.

WILLIAM C. SMITH.

BUILDER AND CONTRACTOR.

Plainfield owes much of its attractiveness to the fact that it has among its contractors and builders some of the most skillful and experienced men in the business, men who take pride in their work and are ambitious to have their home town keep the place it has won in the front rank of American cities of its size. These men are among the greatest assets that the city can possess and too much credit cannot be given them for the work they have done and are doing. No one takes a greater interest or a more active part in the development of Plainfield and this entire section of New Jersey than does Mr. William C. Smith; probably the oldest mason and builder in Plainfield. For over 40 years he has been actively engaged in the work of development and is today more active than many men but half his age. He is now engaged in the construction of the handsome new Roth Building on East Front street, giving his personal attention to superintending the large force of men in his employ. There is hardly a district in Plainfield that has not been improved or more houses built by Mr. Smith; and he has also operated extensively in the surrounding country. Some of the best examples of his work is to be seen on the Fire Headquarters Building, the Hanson Store, the Tobin Building, Thorn's Apartment House, the County Clerk's Office at New Brunswick, the North Plainfield High School, the Watchung School, the residence of former Mayor Gilbert, and hundreds of other handsome and substantial homes, stores and factories. Mr. Smith gives his personal attention to all work entrusted to him and has built for himself a reputation for high-class workmanship of which he may well be proud. He is a native of this section, and when scarcely more than a boy, enlisted in the Union Army and served for three years in the Army of the Southwest, participating in a number of battles in Tennessee, Kentucky and Arkansas, when Grant was winning his spurs in that section, and was slightly wounded. Returning to his old home, he engaged actively in his work and has kept at it continously ever since. Mr. Smith resides at 48 Grandview avenue, North Plainfield, where he has a beautiful home. Among other things Mr. Smith is chairman of the Board of Trade, and one of our wide awake, progressive citizens.

HENRY M. MAXSON.

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS.

There is no public position upon the incumbent of which greater responsibility rest than that of Superintendent of Schools. To him is entrusted, to a large extent the education and training of the men and women of the future—the children of today—whose welfare is so near and dear to the heart of every good citizen. In some communities this position is too often conferred as a reward for political services rendered the dominant party, upon men who have absolutely no ability as teachers, but this fortunately cannot be said of Plainfield where for the last twenty-one years Mr. Henry M. Maxson has been Superintendent of Schools. A position he has filled most satisfactorily. Teaching has been the life work of Mr. Maxson. It has always been his profession and he loves it. For many years it was a custom with the average teacher in the public schools to use teaching simply as a stepping stone to some other employment. It was regarded by the great majority as a means to prepare for one of the other learned professions in which the financial rewards were great and the pages of history are filled with the names of illustrious men who began their careers as school masters. Surely there could be no nobler work than that of teaching and this is the view of every successful teacher who has spent his life preparing children to be useful men and women. To them life means more than the mere amassing of money. Mr. Maxson is a native of Westerly, R. I., and after graduating from Amherst, in the class of '77, he taught district school for about a year in his native place. From there he went to New York state, teaching at the academy at Whitney's Point, near Binghamton for a time. For four years he taught in the High School at North Attleboro, Mass., when he was made superintendent, a position he held for six years. He was also superintendent of schools at Pawtucket for three years. For the last twenty-one years Mr. Maxson has been at the head of the Plainfield schools and he has done his full share toward giving the city, what is considered by many, the best system of public schools in New Jersey.

J. HERVEY DOANE.

JEWELER AND GRADUATE OPTICIAN.

When an enterprise has been conducted successfully for over a quarter of a century by its founder, no better proof could be produced, if any were required, that his dealings with his patrons have been of the most satisfactory character. Time confers a prestige that nothing else can give, for the public does not continue year after year to patronize a man who does not deal with it fairly and squarely. Mr. J. Hervey Doane is one of the pioneer business men of Plainfield, though still in his prime, and he has, since 1886, conducted at 115 Park avenue one of the leading jewelry, watchmaking and optical establishments of this city and section, numbering among his customers people in all the walks of life, who have learned by long experience that he is thoroughly dependable, sells only the best goods at reasonable prices and carries on a high-class business. Mr. Doane keeps on hand a splendid stock of precious stones, in rings, brooches, etc., jewelry, watches, clocks and bric-a-brac and his repairing and engraving department is in charge of expert workmen. He has what many consider the best equipped optical parlor in this section, supplied with all the latest apparatus for examining eyes and the stock of lenses carried is the largest in this section. For years Doane's has been headquarters for the wearers of glasses in this part of New Jersey. Mr. Doane is a graduate of the South Bend College of Optics and also of the New York Spencer Optical School, and is one of the few graduate opticians in Plainfield. Another department of the business that has proved popular is that devoted to photography, a large stock of cameras and supplies being carried. All of the Eastman Company's products are kept on hand, including a full line of Kodak's and a specialty is made of printing and developing; high-class work being done at reasonable prices. Mr. Doane has given the people one of the most complete establishments in town and that his efforts have been appreciated is proven by the generous patronage that has been given him by the public. A feature of the business to which attention should have been called before is the safe deposit vaults, which are thoroughly fire and burglar-proof. Lock boxes may be rented for from $3 to $5 a year. Mr. Doane is a native of Plainfield, and has lived here all his life. Although he has always been a busy man, he has never been too busy to loose an interest in public affairs, and like all good citizens, has taken an active part in giving the city and county good government without which there can be no real progress. For the last six years he has been a member of the Board of Freeholders, making an excellent record, and was again renominated at the September primaries. Progressive and public spirited, he is always ready to aid in any movement that is for the welfare of Plainfield.

EDWIN A. CRAIG.

ELECTRICAL CONTRACTOR.

Probably in no line of endeavor has such tremendous progress been made during the last few years as in that of electricity. It has revolutionized the business life of the country to a great extent, but still experts maintain that it is yet in its infancy, and that eventually it will supersede all other means for power, lighting and heating. Some of the brightest minds of the country are constantly at work on electrical inventions, and hardly a day passes but that some new appliance is patented and placed on the market. Electricians must keep fully abreast of the times, and as a class, they are among the most progressive citizens in every community. A leading electrical contractor of Plainfield is Mr. Edwin A. Craig, whose office is at 169 North avenue. Mr. Craig has been in business in the city since 1904, and during that time has installed all kinds of appliances in a large number of residences, stores, factories and public buildings of this city and section. There is absolutely no kind of electrical work that he is not prepared to do promptly and as reasonably as is consistent with the best workmanship and the use of the best materials. He installs motors of every description, does wiring, equips homes and business places with private telephone lines, burglar alarms, bells and lighting, and keeps constantly in touch with everything that is new in the electrical world. Among his patrons are the most discriminating people of this city and section; many of whom have been his customers since he first started in business—the best evidence that his work has been most satisfactory. Mr. Craig is a native of Plainfield, where he was born, reared and has lived all his life. Besides conducting his large and growing electrical business, Mr. Craig is president of the Service Motor Car Co., one of the largest dealers in automobiles and supplies in New Jersey. He is one of the most progressive business men of Plainfield and is always ready to do his full share in the city's advancement.

REAL ESTATE AND INSURANCE.

No class of business men in a community do more for the development of its resources and the growth of its prosperity than those engaged in the buying and selling of real estate. If they are wide awake and progressive, as the majority of them are, they never let an opportunity pass to place its attractions cleverly before home seekers and investors, and many a town has become a large city to a great extent through their agency. Plainfield owes much to its real estate men, they are among its most valuable citizens and no body of men deserve more credit for its growth and prosperity. Among those who have more recently embarked in the business is Mr. James H. Carson, who has an office at 211 North avenue, at the corner of Watchung avenue. Although he began only three years ago Mr. Carson has by his energy and enterprise built up a rapidly growing business and is doing his full share toward putting Plainfield more conspicuously on the map. He covers all branches of real estate, buys and sells city and country property, manages estates, collects rents, negotiates loans on mortgages and also writes fire, life, health, accident, plate glass and automobile insurance. He has a fine list of city and country property for sale, lease and rent and anyone contemplating coming to Plainfield, either to make their home or looking for investments can make no mistake in calling on him. They will find a man thoroughly posted on property values and one who can be relied upon on every particular. Mr. Carson is by birth a native of Ireland, having been born in Langford, but he has lived in this country since early manhood. He learned the trade of a machinist and was for over 16 years connected with the printing press manufacturing firm of Walter Scott & Co. and was also seven years

LEO SLONIM.

THE JEWELER.

It will be difficult to find in any city the size of Plainfield such an attractive jewelry store as that which has been conducted for the last twelve years, at 230 West Front street, by Mr. Leo Slonim. When he started in business it was with the determination of giving the people of this city a thoroughly high-class establishment, where they could get identically the same character of goods and identically the same service in the watch-making, engraving, gem-setting and optical departments as they could obtain in the best stores of New York. That he has succeeded in his ambition is evident from the splendid business he has built up, his patrons being among the most discriminating and particular people of the city and its environs. They were not long in discovering that Mr. Slonim dealt only in the best class of goods, that his prices were more reasonable than those of New York competitors, on account of lower expenses, and that his guarantee was worth its face value. The business, which is now located at 230 West Front street, grew rapidly from the day the store opened its doors, showing that his efforts were appreciated, it has outgrown its old quarters and on or about November 15 Mr. Slonim will be in his new store, 222 and 224 West Front street, which he owns, and which is now being prepared for the reception of the largest, most complete and select stock of diamonds, and precious stones, watches, jewelry, silverware, cut glass and bric-a-brac ever assembled in this part of New Jersey. The optical department, in charge of an expert optician, will be greatly enlarged, as indeed will all of the departments, and nothing will be neglected that will go toward making the new store the handsomest and best stocked within a radius of many miles. Mr. Slonim has well-defined ideas of his own about how a high-class jewelry store should be arranged and he is carrying them out in the fitting up of his new store, which will have a frontage of 21 feet on Front street and extends back a distance of 106 feet, providing about 2,500 feet of floor space. In the meantime, however, the business at the old stand is being conducted along the old lines, and there is not the slightest interruption in the routine of the establishment. Since making his home in Plainfield a dozen years ago, Mr. Slonim has been actively identified with the business life of the city, and is one of its most progressive and substantial citizens.

NEW JERSEY PIANO CO.

HARRY C. HADLEY, PROPRIETOR.

No home of culture and refinement can be complete without a piano, and there are few families that have not at least one member with musical talent, who can supply the others, as well as friends and visitors, with many hours of pleasure. The piano is by far the most popular of all instruments, and on account of the many improvements in factory equipment made of recent years and the consequent economy of manufacture, prices have been so greatly reduced that music lovers with the most moderate incomes can, with a little good management and self-denial purchase a high class instrument. The piano-player has also greatly extended the field and the demand for instruments at the present time is greater than ever before in the history of the trade. For the past eighteen years one of the leading dealers in pianos and organs in this city and section has been Mr. Harry C. Hadley, proprietor of the New Jersey Piano Co., located at 311-313 West Front street. Mr. Hadley started in business here on a modest scale and has, by his energy and intuitive succeeded in building up a flourishing enterprise, with a trade extending throughout a radius of many miles of the city. Three years ago he established a branch at Elizabeth and two months ago another at Red Bank, both of which have been most successful. The warerooms of the New Jersey Piano Co. in this city are splendidly stocked with one of the largest collections of fine instruments ever assembled in Plainfield and are headquarters for the music lovers of this entire section. The company makes a specialty of the Needham Piano and piano player, instruments that stand in the front rank, but it also deals in other high class pianos, both new and second hand. Mr. Hadley has in stock at prices ranging from $50 to $300, pianos that cost many times this amount and some wonderful bargains can always be found in his salesrooms, both here and in Elizabeth and Red Bank. All of them are guaranteed to be just as represented, a guarantee that means something, for this company has made its success upon the firm foundation of fair dealing. Mr. Hadley came to Plainfield from New York when a young man of 21, and has since been actively identified with the business life of the city. He is progressive and public spirited and has an abiding faith in the future growth and prosperity of the city.

THE ASTOR THEATRE.

WHERE ONLY THE FINEST PICTURES ARE SHOWN.

B. NYBERG, PROPRIETOR.

Plainfield's new moving picture theatre, The Astor, representing an expenditure of $50,000, is without doubt the finest playhouse devoted exclusively to moving pictures in this part of New Jersey, and so far as its appointments are concerned, there is none finer in the country. Others are, of course, larger, although the Astor has a seating capacity of 800, but as regards construction of the building, its furnishings and the character of the service given its patrons, the Astor could not be improved upon. Absolutely no expense has been spared in making this a model theatre in every particular. It is not an old house remodeled, but is entirely new throughout, and is thoroughly fire proof. The walls are of brick and terra cotta, tile, the floors of cement, the ceilings of steel, the doors of metal and there was not a splinter of wood used in the construction of The Astor with the exception of the front and rear entrances, and very little is used there, most of the ornamental work being of galvanized iron., copper and steel. Fronting 47 feet on Second street, near Madison avenue, the playhouse proper extends back toward Front street, a distance of 200 feet. At the end there is an entrance and exit to Front street, extending through a beautifully decorated foyer 100 feet in length, providing a delightful promenade. There is also a ladies' retiring room, open to the public, until the house closes. The furnishings are in the latest style, the decorations are unusually handsome and artistic, and Mr. B. Nyberg, the experienced and enterprising proprietor, has given Plainfield what it has long needed, a strictly high-class moving-picture theatre. That his efforts have been appreciated is shown by the very generous patronage that has been accorded The Astor by the discriminating public. Only the best productions of such master moving-picture makers as Pathe, Essanay, Melie, Lubin, Cines, Selig, are given, together with the Vitagraph and the Biograph. Mr. Nyberg is the owner of four theatres in New York, has been in the moving picture business for 20 years, and The Astor, constructed under his personal supervision, is the result of his long experience and study.

CITY NATIONAL BANK

CAPITAL $150,000.00

LOUIS K. HYDE, President

GENERAL BANKING AND COLLECTING BUSINESS TRANSACTED, DRAFTS AND LETTERS OF CREDIT ISSUED ON ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS

National banks, as every one is aware, who has given any thought to the subject, make ideal depositories, safeguarded as they are by the most careful governmental inspection, with the necessity of making reports in detail of all transactions whenever called upon to do so, and also being constantly under the supervision of bank examiners. These provisions of the law are a guarantee of safety to depositors that could be obtained in no other way and inspire confidence in every branch of business life. Plainfield has, in the City National Bank, one of the staunchest and most ably managed banks in the country, one that has done, since it was organized in 1875, and is doing, its full share in the development of the city and surrounding section. Liberal so far as is consistent with safe and sane banking, it is splendidly equipped to carry on the immense business it has built up. Some idea of the operations of the City National may be gathered from the statement that, since its organization it has paid to its stock holders, in dividends on their capital stock, the sum of $422,250, has now a surplus of $150,000 undivided profits, after paying dividends, of $150,000 and deposits at the close of business on August 9, amounting to $2,789,852.10. On the same date the report shows that its surplus and profits (all earned) amounted to $300,515.61, its circulation was $143,000 and the capital stock $150,000. Against these liabilities it had resources amounting to $2,760,159.33 in loans and investments, cash on hand amounting to $538,209.38 and its banking house, being valued at $85,000, made its total resources $3,383,367.71. The City National, it will be seen from these figures, is in a splendid condition, having a rapid and at the same time healthy growth, it is firmly established in the confidence and regard of its patrons, and the public generally, and is doing a great work in the development of this entire section. The bank has three departments to which especial attention is given. First of these is the regular commercial banking department. This consists of all accounts subject to check, such as business accounts, household accounts, and accounts of individuals as well as firms. The checking account is necessary in business, and in the household is a great advantage. The paying of bills, both large and small, by check, is an aid to the systematic management of financial matters that should not be overlooked. Three per cent. interest is paid on checking accounts when the daily balance averages $500 and above. Checks are collected without cost and the many details pertaining to such accounts are handled with promptness and care. The savings department of the City National has proved very popular with a large and growing class of depositors. Money deposited in this department draws four per cent. and commences the first of each month following the deposit, but if it is made during the first three days of any month, interest will commence with that month. Many banks limit the amount that may be deposited. The City National Bank places no limit on a deposit. Any amount above $10, will receive the 4 per cent. which is credited every January and July. Money is thus drawing compound interest and the depositor who will set aside a few dollars every month, allowing it to accummulate, will at the end of a few years be in possession of a substantial sum. The first institution in Plainfield to provide safe deposit and storage facilities for valuables was the City National, and its accommodations in this direction are of the best. A safe deposit box may be rented for as low a sum as $5; larger ones, of course, bringing a larger rental. Access to these boxes is carefully guarded, and may be obtained only in the presence of the renter and the bank official in charge. In the storage department, large trunks and boxes may be taken, as well as silver chests and smaller packages of any description. The charges are very moderate. The bank also collects coupons, issues foreign drafts, letters of credit and travelers' checks and its facilities for transacting a high class banking business are of the best. The building, occupied and owned by the bank, corner Front street and Park avenue, is one of the handsomest in Plainfield and every accommodation and convenience has been provided for patrons. The officers of the bank, all well known citizens, have been connected with it for years. They are Louis K. Hyde, president; Wm. P. Smith, vice-president; Wm. F. Arnold, vice-president and cashier; Arthur E. Crone, assistant cashier. The president, vice-president, and vice-president and cashier, together with T. J. Mumford, F. T. Woodhull, B. Van D. Hedges and J. F. MacDonald, constitute the board of directors.

BOOKS, STATIONERY AND GENERAL STEAMSHIP AGENT.

When a merchant has successfully conducted business for nearly thirty-eight years in one city, no better proof could be produced, should any be needed, that his methods have always been straight-forward and his dealings with his patrons entirely satisfactory. This is the record of Mr. Mulford Estil, the pioneer in the bookselling and stationery business in this city and section, whose establishment is located at 111 Park avenue. Although having all the prestige, that only years of fair dealing and enterprise can give, Estil's Bookstore is conducted along the most modern lines and his stock will always be found fresh and strictly up-to-date. Besides the standard authors, all the latest books and periodicals are carried, the school supplies department is complete in every particular and one of the largest stock of office requisites in the city is kept on hand, comprising all that is best among the many labor-saving devices that are constantly being placed on the market. A full line of sporting goods and games will also be found at Estil's and the Christmas stock is already arriving. Mr. Estil began business in 1876 on a modest scale on Front street, where Schwed's Clothing Store now stands, remaining there about five years, when he removed to the store on Park avenue, now occupied by Willett. Here he remained for 10 years, his business all the time increasing steadily. Twenty-three years ago larger quarters were again demanded and he occupied his present stand, 111 Park avenue, and has made it one of the most attractive and popular stores in Plainfield. Fronting thirty feet on Park avenue, the building extends back 80 feet, and contains ample room for the display of one of the largest and best stocks ever assembled in this city. Mr. Estil is also the agent here for all the great European steamship lines, and his long experience as a traveler places him in a position to be of the greatest value to those planning a trip abroad. He has crossed the ocean twenty-four times, and is almost as well acquainted with London, Paris, Berlin and other countries of Europe as he is with his own, although in his travels he has by no means neglected his native land. No one is in a better position to assist in planning a trip, and drafts are issued in England, Scotland and Ireland at the lowest rates. Mr. Estil is a native of Plainfield, as his father and grandfather were before him, his ancestors having come to this country from Provence, France, in 1664. He has all his life been actively identified with the business life of Plainfield, and was for some years vice-president and a member of the Board of Directors of the First National Bank.

STORE OF J. C. HANSEN.

JAMES C. HANSEN.

DECORATOR, PAINTER AND PAPER HANGER.

There is on occupation in which more taste and skill is required than in that followed by the decorator, painter and paperhanger. No matter how well the architect has drawn his plans and how correctly the builder has put them into execution, unless the painter and decorator, who follows them and gives the final touches to the completed building, is a man who thoroughly understands his business, the effect aimed at is not achieved. This being true it naturally follows that too much care cannot be taken in selecting a painter and decorator of established reputation, and one who has demonstrated, by years of service, that he is thoroughly dependable. For many years the leading painter, decorator and paperhanger and dealer in paints, oils, glass and varnishes and all kinds of painters' supplies in Plainfield has been James C. Hansen, whose establishment is located at 141 East Front street. Like nearly all successful men, Mr. Hansen started on a modest scale, and he has made his way in the world by his industry and energy alone, for if there was ever a self-made man he is entitled to be called one. A native of Germany, of Danish ancestry, he came to this country as a boy and for a time worked at everything that offered. At last he decided to become a painter and decorator and learned his trade with Mr. Woolston, now a member of the Council of North Plainfield. He is not the type of man, however, who is content to work for others, and he soon went into business on his own account on Sycamore street, where the Police Station has since been erected. Twelve years ago he removed to 141 East Front street, where he opened the largest painters' supply store in this section of New Jersey. His business increased rapidly and is not confined to Plainfield, but extends throughout this section. His establishment fronts on the main thoroughfare of the city, 20 feet, extending back 104 and together with the basement, provides a floor space of over 4,000 square feet which is filled with the largest stock of paints and painters' supplies ever assembled in Plainfield. He makes a specialty of handling John W. Masury & Sons celebrated ready-mixed paints and pure colors, which have long been standards, as well as other brands of the highest standing. It is upon the solid foundation of merit that Mr. Hansen has built his business, and it is merit and square dealing that continues to make it grow. Employing only the best and most experienced men, using only superior materials and making reasonable charges Mr. Hansen has built up a flourishing and growing business. His success in the face of many obstacles should be an inspiration to every young man who has to make his way in the world.

L. C. WHITALL.

WHOLESALE PRODUCE.

There is an immense demand in Plainfield and the surrounding country for high-grade produce and foreign and domestic fruits, a demand that has for the past 35 years been supplied by the wholesale produce concern of which Mr. L. C. Whitall is the owner. During the many years that have elapsed since this business was established many rivals have started, most of them lasting but a short time, and this old and reliable concern has remained the acknowledged leader in the important field which it so thoroughly covers. There are but few retail dealers in this city and section that do not patronize Mr. Whitall, for he has unequalled facilities for promptly supplying his customers and his prices are the lowest quoted on the market. Produce of every kind, fresh from the farm, is received daily by Mr. Whitall, usually in carload lots and is distributed to the retail trade by a well organized delivery system which thoroughly covers Plainfield and the suburbs, extending as far out of town as Westfield, Dunellen, New Market, Fanwood and other surrounding towns. The salesrooms of Mr. Whitall are located at 304 Park avenue, near the railroad station, and contain about 5,000 feet of floor space, which provides ample room to transact the large and growing trade. The business was founded about 35 years ago by Mr. C. B. Clifton, who continued it alone for some years before taking a partner, when the firm became Clifton & Campbell. About five years ago Mr. Whitall bought out the business and under his energetic and capable management its growth has been rapid. Mr. Whitall was formerly in the electrical business and has proved himself to be a live wire in handling produce at wholesale. Fine public spirit has always been noted in Mr. Whitall.

HARDWOOD AND PARQUET FLOORS.

Nothing adds more to the beauty and attractiveness of an artistic interior than does hardwood, or parquet floors, which are every year growing in popular favor among those who take pleasure in making their home beautiful. Every year the new designs become more unique and artistic and some of the best designers are constantly at work originating something to take the fancy of those who are in the hunt for the unusual. Many of the finest homes in and about Plainfield and this section have parquet or hardwood floors laid by the firm of S. E. Ward & Co., the leaders in this line in the city. It is entirely unnecessary to go to New York or elsewhere to have the finest work done in the most workman-like manner, for Mr. Ward has facilities and a corps of assistants that are as good as any of his competitors, while his expenses being lower and the fact that he is on the ground, makes it possible for him to quote more reasonable prices, at the same time giving the highest grade of work. Mr. Ward also repairs, refinishes, scrapes and polishes old floors, and the work done by him in this line of endeavor is really remarkable; old floors being made to look quite as good as when first laid. Among his Plainfield patrons are some of the most discriminating residents, owners of beautiful homes. A few examples of his work are to be seen at the residences of Mrs. Griscome, 166 Sycamore street; J. C. Manning, Kingston and Martini avenues; J. V. Du Bois, 1113 Putnam avenue; Frederick Tagg, Rockview Terrace, and a number of other handsome buildings. He also did the work at the fine new Elk Hall on Watchung avenue, now nearing completion, and at Columbus Hall, the home of the Knights of Columbus, on Front street. Mr. Ward has recently removed from his old stand, 715 Webster Place, to handsome quarters on the ground floor of the new Manning Building, 108 Depot Place, just opposite the railroad station. He has fitted the show room up most attractively with artistic examples of all that is best in parqueting, and is better prepared than ever to serve his patrons. Mr. Ward is a native of Plainfield and is a thoroughly practical man, giving his personal attention to all work entrusted to him and satisfaction is guaranteed.

INSURANCE AND REAL ESTATE.

There is no class of citizens of more value to a community than those engaged in the real estate and insurance business, and Plainfield owes a great deal of its growth and progress, along the best lines, to their endeavors. The men in the business here are of the best type, they are not what are called "boomers," in the sense that the term is used in some sections, but are consistent, dependable workers, whose efforts have helped the steady, healthy and substantial growth of the city. This is the best kind of progress, for the artificial inflation of property values called a "boom" has never helped permanently any city, and if experience counts for anything, it never will. Among the most prominent real estate and insurance men of Plainfield is Mr. Lamar Van Syckel, whose office is located at 146 Park avenue. Although he has been in business here less than four years, Mr. Van Syckel has, by his energy and ability, succeeded in building up a large and growing business, and has on his lists some of the most desirable properties in this section. He covers the entire real estate field, buying, selling and exchanging property, acts as trustee and appraiser, manages estates, collects rents and negotiates loans. Those contemplating buying a home or investing in city, suburban or country property, would do well to consult Mr. Van Syckel before doing so. He also conducts one of the largest insurance agencies in Plainfield, representing nine leading companies, with assets of millions. Since he bought out the old insurance business of Liefler and Lang, located here for many years, he has greatly enlarged his clientele and numbers among his patrons some of the largest property holders of this section. Every kind of policy is written, fire, accident, health, liability, automobile, bonding, plate glass and boiler. The companies he represents are the Germania Fire of New York, Fireman's of Newark, Scotish Union and National, Fidelity Fire, Equitable Fire and Marine, Prussian National, Capital Fire, Standard Fire, Alliance, United Fireman's, Commercial Casualty Co., Aetna Life, Travellers, and the New Jersey Fidelity and Plate Glass. Mr. Van Syckel is a native of New Jersey, having been born in Huntingdon county, but lived for years in New York, where he was successfully engaged in the wholesale hardware business. He is a veteran of the Seventh Regiment and an ex-member of the New York Athletic Club, a member of the Holland Society of New York and of the Society, Descendants of the Mayflower, and of the Park Club. He has always taken a great interest in athletics and military affairs. About five years ago Mr. Van Syckel came to Plainfield to reside and three-and-a-half years ago engaged in the real estate and insurance business. Since then he has been actively identified with the business life of the city and has been the secretary of the Plainfield Board of Trade since that vigorous organization was founded, making a most efficient official. Mr. Van Syckel is also a director of the Union Building and Loan Association. He is doing his full share toward making Plainfield a bigger and a better city, along the most progressive lines.

BOICE, RUNYON CO.

COAL, LUMBER AND MASONS' MATERIALS

SOLE AGENTS FOR TRENTON ELASTIC PULP PLASTER

aving all the prestige that only rs of fair and straightforward deal- confers, yet thoroughly modern in business methods, the Boice, Run- Company, now and for many years the leading dealers in coal, lum- and masons' materials in this and section, still retains the place as so long held as the leader in field. There is no class of busi- more necessary in a growing city that connected with the handling umber and builders' supplies, and since the concern, which is now Boice, Runyon Company, was nded in 1837 by David Boice and id Thickstun, who conducted it un- 850, when Mr. Boice became the owner, it has taken a prominent active part in the up-building of nfield. There are but few houses standing in the city, except the very oldest, that were not built wholly or partially from materials furnished by this concern, and it has always kept pace with the wonderful growth of the city. It was not until the admission of John D. Runyon, as a partner, that the firm name was changed. About 21 years ago the coal, wood and building material supply business of A. D. Cook & Bros. was purchased, greatly enlarging the facilities of the concern for handling its rapidly increasing trade. The yards are by far the most extensive in this section and are improved by a large, modern brick office building, fronting on Park Ave., opposite North Ave., extensive lumber sheds, one of them 500 feet in length, a three-decker, with a capacity of 2,500,000 feet, and modern coal chutes with bins holding 4,000 tons. Coal is loaded directly into the patent dumping carts which this company is alone using in Plainfield, and is automatically sifted as it comes down the chutes to the carts, so that the partons of the Boice-Runyon Company get coal entirely free from dust and dirt. Only the best Lehigh coal is handled, a specialty being made of "Plymouth." The company, in addition to its immense lumber, coal and wood trade, does a splendid business in masons materials and supplies, handling only the products of manufacturers of established reputation and standing. It carries an enormous stock of cement, shingles, lath, lime wall plaster, wall boards, ready roofing, sewer pipe and flue linings and is sole agent for the Trenton Elastic Pulp Plaster. Upon the death of David J. Boice, the founder, about 28 years ago, and of his partner about 10 years later, the business was continued successfully by the estate. On December 15, 1909, it was incorporated as the Boice, Runyon Company, with Mrs. Sarah R. Runyon and Miss Anna E. Boice, daughters of David J. Boice, practically sole owners. Upon the death of Mrs. Runyon, Miss Boice inherited the property. Miss Boice has proved to be a most excellent business woman and the affairs of the corporation have prospered under her jurisdiction. Mr. Charles D. Rice, general manager of the business, is a native of New York, and was for 17 years connected with the Gorham Manufacturing Company. Mr. Rice has thoroughly identified himself with the business life of this city, in the future progress of which he has the greatest confidence.

CONCRETE BLOCKS, BRICK, ORNAMENTS AND PAVING.

"ETERNAL AS THE PYRAMIDS."

Concrete is rapidly taking the place of brick, granite and timber in many lines of construction work, and the future of this old, but at the same time comparatively new, material is bright with promise. More durable than even granite, it has been used before the beginning of written history, and time has proved that it is as eternal as the great pyramids of Egypt that were built with it. Plainfield has not used this material as generously as most cities, especially for paving purposes, and the Board of Trade is now agitating the passage of laws making the laying of concrete pavements, in some parts of the city, compulsory. That the material is rapidly gaining popularity among property owners, is best demonstrated by the success with which Mr. J. R. Jeffers has met in his efforts to give Plainfield a thoroughly modern concrete plant. Although he only began business on his own account about three years ago, Mr. Jeffers has succeeded, by his enterprise and energy, and the fact that he does only the best class of work at reasonable prices, in building up a fine trade among the discriminating property holders, builders and contractors, not only in Plainfield, but throughout this section. His plant is located at 308 Mansion Place, and is equipped with the latest improved machinery and molds for making all kinds of concrete blocks and bricks, trimmings for buildings, hitching and fence posts, window and door sills and steps, ornamental vases, flower pots, waterproof vaults and burial cases, and other cementing work, curbing and all sizes of drain and sewer pipe, and in fact every article into the composition of which concrete enters. Only the most superior materials are used and the most experienced workmen employed. Mr. Jeffers also lays concrete pavements, side-walks, foundations, and builds porches. No material is more easily adulterated than concrete. The use of too small a quantity of high class cement and too much and inferior sand produces concrete that may look and wear well for a little while, but will not stand the test of time, as it cracks and crumbles under ordinary usage. The methods of some manufacturers have brought concrete into disrepute in some quarters, but these untrustworthy workmen have only served to show the superiority of the work done by Mr. Jeffers. All blocks, bricks and ornamental work of every kind made by him are guaranteed to be just as represented in every particular. He is not building for the present alone but for the future, and when a patron gives him work to do, or buys his material, he tries to give such excellent service that he will make a permanent customer. Excellent examples of the character of the work done by him can be seen on the hotel and grounds of Mr. Allen M. Johnson, of Madison and Stelle avenues, the Public School in North Plainfield, the residence of Mr. Yates, at Watchung avenue and Cedar Brook road, and on scores of other buildings. Mr. Jeffers, who is a thoroughly practical man of long experience, came to the city from Ohio, where he learned his trade, about six years ago. After working for a time for other contractors he decided about three years ago to begin business on his own account and has been most successful.

SAMPLE OF PIER WORK, CONSTRUCTED BY J. R. JEFFERS.

R. G. BUSH.

ARCHITECTURAL ARTIFICIAL STONE, CONCRETE CONTRACTOR.

Concrete has without doubt a great future and in the opinion of many intelligent men, who have given thought to the subject, it will eventually almost entirely supersede other building materials, excepting structural steel, in conjunction with which it is used in the erection of the larger class of structures. Its use has certainly become popular in Plainfield and this section, some of the handsomest modern buildings are of concrete block and the Board of Trade is urging the paving of the entire city with concrete sidewalks. It makes a better appearance than any material that can be used; is less dangerous to the pedestrian and at the same time is more durable and economical. One of the most complete and best equipped concrete plants in the country—that of Mr. R. G. Bush, at North avenue and Berckman street—is located in Plainfield. Mr. Bush is an extensive manufacturer of all kinds of artificial architectural stone and is also the largest concrete contractor in this part of Jersey. He manufactures at his plant all kinds of concrete block of the highest grade, using only the best materials. Nothing in building materials can be more easily made below the standard by using too much and inferior sand and too little cement; upon this rock many concrete firms have been wrecked. The blocks made by Mr. Bush are guaranteed to be of only the best materials; they have stood all sorts of tests, including time and fire, and are used by the best builders. Good examples of what they are like can be seen in the splendid buildings of the Rushmore Dynamo Co., the Mono-Fireproof Storage Warehouse Co., and that of Vanzandt & Vorhees on Park avenue. There is hardly a street in the city, however, in which his fine work cannot be found. He is also an extensive manufacturer of concrete sewer pipe, reinforced water-proof cement vaults, concrete hall and garden furniture, steps and porches, panels for buildings, pedestals, vases, flower pots, hitching and other posts, and in fact, everything that is made of concrete. He has also the best of facilities for laying all kinds of concrete sidewalks, roadways, flagging, curbing, etc. Mr. Bush deals in concrete materials of every description, such as trap rock, crushed granite, crushed marble, marble dust and flour, Franklin white and Lakewood sands, water-proof compounds, paints and Portland cements. He is a concrete expert of nearly 25 years' experience and has made his business a life study, and is a recognized authority, not a mere follower, but an originator. Mr. Bush was formerly in business at 743-745 South avenue, but several years ago moved to the plant at one time operated by the Plainfield Cement Stone Co., at Berckman street and North avenue. The property fronts on the avenue about 150 feet, extends back to the railroad tracks and is admirably located for the purposes of his business, which extends throughout this section and is steadily growing. Mr. Bush is a thoroughly practical man, employs only the most skilled help in his work, and anyone contemplating using concrete in any form could make no mistake in consulting him. CONCRETE FLAG POLE, HILLSIDE CEMETERY, ERECTED BY R. G. BUSH.

POWLISON AND JONES

RELIABLE FURNITURE DEALERS.

In no other line of endeavor has there been such a vast advance, during the last decade or two, as in the furniture trade. Modern methods of merchandising and manufacturing have worked a veritable revolution and furniture can today be produced better and at more reasonable prices than ever before. The man with a moderate income can at the present time furnish his home in a way that was only possible to the wealthy man of a few years ago, not with cheap furniture made simply to sell, but with artistic and well-made furniture that will last for generations. The leading furniture establishment of Plainfield and this part of New Jersey is that conducted by Powlison & Jones, at 149-151 East Front street. A store of this high character is rarely found in a city the size of this and the fact that it has been so successful speaks louder, than could any written word, for the taste and discrimination of the people of this section. Powlison & Jones sell furniture exclusively, the firm does not deal in carpets, rugs, draperies and household furnishings, such as are generally carried by the average furniture dealer, theirs is distinctly and exclusively a furniture store, and nothing but furniture from the best and most dependable manufacturers is handled. Although all grades are sold the firm makes a specialty of high and medium class goods, an immense stock being carried, specially selected by Mr. Powlison, who makes a trip to Grand Rapids and other large manufacturing centres every season to select the very latest and best designs. The store, owned and occupied by Powlison & Jones, is one of the most attractive in the city, as well as one of the largest. It extends along Front street nearly 44 feet, is 100 feet in depth and there are three stories and a basement, providing a floor space of over 17,000 square feet, all of which is needed to accommodate the superb stock carried. The facilities for inspecting the stock are unusually good, for the building was erected especially to display goods, after ideas suggested by years of experience. When it was built, 16 years ago, that part of East Front street, where it stands had not been built up to any extent, the only building of any consequence being that now known as the Waldorf Hotel, which is just across the street. This will give the reader an excellent idea of the rapid growth of Plainfield in recent years. There was by no means lacking wiseacres to prophecy the disaster that must inevitably overtake the firm in moving from, the, then business section, but the foresight of its members has long been justified for the business section built rapidly toward the East and the property they purchased is now worth many times what was paid for it. The firm celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary last April, having been established in 1888 by Messrs. John A. Powlison and Frank W. Jones, the present owners. They had but a few hundred dollars capital, but what they lacked in money was fully made up by plenty of industry, energy and a determination to succeed. Like nearly all successful enterprises its beginning was modest. The first location was next to the old Music Hall, on West Front street. The members of the firm at first did all of their own work and by strict attention to business and fair dealing it soon became the leading furniture store in Plainfield, a position it has never lost. Both Mr. Powlison and Mr. Jones are natives of this section. Mr. Powlison was born at Pluckaman, near Somerville, and as a young man went West, residing for a time in Michigan, the largest furniture manufacturing State in the Union. Mr. Jones was born near Millington, on a farm, and when a young man was in the dairy business. He takes great interest in church work and is a deacon of the First Baptist Church. The members of the firm are among the most public spirited and progressive citizens of Plainfield and are always ready to aid in any movement that is for its advancement along the best lines.

WOOLSTON & BUCKLE CO.

INTERIOR PAINTING AND DECORATING.

There is no class of work going into the construction of a high-class building that requires more skill and intelligence than that done by the painter and decorator. No matter how well the architcet has drawn his plans and how conscientiously they have been followed by the builder, without the co-operation of the painter the result will not be what was intended, for a man who does not thoroughly understand his business will spoil the job. The fact that the Woolston & Buckle Co. has, since it was founded, in 1880, been doing a large percentage of the work done in this city and section, on the best class of houses, is the best evidence that could be produced to show that it stands at the very head of the list, numbering among its patrons some of the most particular property owners, builders and contractors in this part of New Jersey. It has the prestige that comes only with years of straightforward dealing, but at the same time it has kept fully abreast of the times and is thoroughly modern in its methods. Nothing is more easily adulterated than paint. The house painted with poor paint looks for a few weeks just as good as the one painted with pure paint. It takes time and the elements to show the difference and that is the reason why the discriminating property owner patronizes the old Woolston & Buckle Co. It has a reputation for reliability, its work on hundreds of houses speaks for itself, it is responsible, and every job it does is guaranteed to be up to the letter of the contract. The company covers the entire field thoroughly, doing house and sign painting, interior decorations, wall papering, frescoing, kalsemining, everything in its line. It is also the largest dealer in ready-mixed paints, varnishes, brushes, glass and all kinds of painters' supplies, in this section and is also interested in a store at 54 and 56 Fulton street, New York, of which Mr. Woolston is treasurer. Its stock of imported and domestic wall papers and room mouldings of the latest pattern is one of the largest in the State. The company has for 33 years been one of the leading enterprises of Plainfield and hundreds of its most attractive buildings bear witness to the character of the work it has always done and is still doing. cities in the country have so many artistic homes as Plainfield, in proportion to its size, and this concern has done its full share toward giving it its reputation for beauty. Formed in 1880, by Messrs. Lemuel B. Woolston and James F. Buckle, former mayor of Plainfield, it has fully kept pace with the growth of the city. Mr. Buckle was for many years president, but recently retired from active business. Mr. Woolston is still in active business life and is treasurer of both this company and the Price-Bond Varnish Co. He is also a valued member of the North Plainfield Borough Council and has been for the past six years. His son, Mr. Howard F. Woolston, is now manager of the company, with which he has been associated since he started active business life. The officers of the company are among the most progressive business men of Plainfield and are always willing to do their share towards its growth and prosperity.

S. HIRSCH.

LADIES' TAILOR AND FURRIER

Every woman should have at least one tailor-made gown in her wardrobe and probably that gown will be the best investment of all the other garments. Made by a high-class ladies' tailor from the best of materials, they always look well and are ready for almost any occasion. The tailor-made woman has an air and charm that is lacking in others, smart, chic and altogether attractive. Furs, of course, go with the tailor-made gown, heightening its effect. The leading ladies' tailor, furrier and maker of artistic habits in Plainfield is Mr. S. Hirsch, whose well-appointed establishment is located at 409-411 Watchung avenue. Mr. Hirsch has succeeded in building up a large clientele among the best and most stylishly dressed women of this city and section, who realize from experience that they can get the same service from him as from the largest New York firms, while, at the same time, it is much more convenient, and his expenses being low, he is enabled to quote better prices. A Hirsch tailor-made gown is perfection, for he employs only the highest class of workmen, is himself an experienced and talented designer and his facilities for doing the best kind of work are unsurpassed. He does all kinds of renovating, repairing and remaking, both gowns and furs. Mr. Hirsch learned his business in the old country and came to America nearly 25 years ago. For a dozen years he worked with some of the leading ladies' tailors and furriers of New York before coming to Plainfield about 12 years ago to engage in business for himself. He is a public-spirited and progressive citizen, who is always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to any cause that is for the welfare of old Plainfield, his home and the little city in which he has cast his fortunes.

CENTRAL GARAGE.

A. B. LARMOUR, PROP. HIGH-CLASS AUTO AND MACHINE WORK.

Plainfield probably numbers among its inhabitants as many automobile owners in proportion to its size as any city in the country. Its splendidly paved streets and the improved highways of the surrounding country, as well as its proximity to New York and the largest cities of Jersey, brings about this result and as a consequence the place is a big automobile centre. It has many garages and repair shops, and competition for business is keener here, in this line of endeavor, than in almost any other. The fact that the Central Garage, of which Mr. A. B. Larmour is the proprietor, has within a comparatively short time built up a fine business in the face of this keen competition, is the best evidence that the service it is giving is most satisfactory. The garage and repair shops have only been in operation at the present location for about three months, having formerly been at 180 East Front street. Mr. Larmour succeeded to the business formerly carried on by Robert C. Woodhouse, dealer in automobiles, gas engines and contractors' supplies for a number of years. At his new location, 119 Madison avenue, Mr. Larmour has a finely equipped establishment, provided with the latest improved appliances and machinery, not only for doing automobile and motorcycle work, but for making repairs on all kinds of machinery and doing experimental work. He is a thoroughly practical machinist with many years of experience, especially in automobile work, and there is no job too delicate or intricate that he is not prepared to undertake and carry to a successful finish. Mr. Larmour is a native of Philadelphia, but has lived here for many years, and is thoroughly identified with the business life of the city. He is practical and progressive and is always ready to do his full share toward advancing the growth and prosperity of Plainfield.

ARTHUR E. SMITH.

ENGINEER AND CONTRACTOR.

Concrete, steel and iron are fast revolutionizing building methods, if indeed they have not already done so, and many contractors go so far as to declare that the time is not far distant when they will take the place of all other materials in most building operations. The advantage they possess over wood are too obvious for discussion and they are cheaper and quite as durable as granite and brick, besides being more easily worked. One of the greatest handicaps concrete has had is the fact that it has been used to a great extent by men who do not thoroughly understand how to handle it, and by others who could not resist the temptation to use cheap materials. Properly used, concrete and steel combined, make the ideal building materials, but they must be used intelligently to attain the best results. This requires knowledge, experience and training such as is only possessed by engineers who have made a special study of concrete and steel construction. Mr. Arthur E. Smith, engineer and contractor, of Plainfield, where he has an office in the Frost Building, has given concrete and steel construction his special study and has been most successful in railroad construction, concrete and steel structures and in all kinds of iron and steel structural work. His business extends throughout New Jersey, and the work done by him is guaranteed to be modern and thoroughly high class in every respect. Mr. Smith is a graduate of Rutgers, and as an engineer ranks high in the profession. Since going into business in his native place he has been entrusted with a number of important contracts and has been most successful. One of the best examples of his work in this vicinity is the plant of the Hall Printing Press Company, at Dunellan, which is a splendid specimen of modern concrete and steel construction. The Millington arch bridge is another fine example, along different lines, as is also the work on the Cranford School, which has recently been completed. Plans and estimates for any kind of work in his line

CARL SILBERT.

JEWELER AND OPTICIAN.

High-class jewelry stores, conducted along the most modern lines make an appeal to every lover of beautiful things and fine workmanship, that few other establishments have the power to do. They are to many the most attractive stores of every city, and among the enterprises of Plainfield none is more popular than the jewelry and optical establishment of Mr. Carl Silbert, at 255 West Front street, opposite the postoffice. For 23 years Mr. Silbert has been a leading business man of this city, and he has by his enterprise and uniformly straightforward dealing made his place the headquarters for the discriminating people of Plainfield. He carries an immense stock of diamonds and other precious stones, jewelry of every kind, silverware and bric-a-brac, cut glass, clocks and watches from the leading makers, and his optical department is one of the best equipped in New Jersey. This is in the rear of the store, and all the latest appliances for a thorough examination of the eyes and the proper fitting of glasses have been installed. Mr. Silbert is an expert optician, as well as a practical jeweler and watchmaker, with years of experience, and besides employing skilled workmen gives his personal attention to every department of his business. Few cities in the country of the size of Plainfield can boast of a more attractive and, as well stocked a store. The building fronts 20 feet on the main thoroughfare in the centre of the shopping district and extends back a distance of 75 feet, providing a floor space of 1,500 square feet. It is furnished with handsome show cases of French plate glass, and the arrangement of the splendid stock of goods is most attractive. All of the standard lines of watches, such as the Howard, Hamilton, Waltham and others, are carried, from the most reasonably prices to the highest, and a specialty is made of engraving and repairing. The display of solid and plated silverware made by such high-class makers as Gorham and Reed & Barton, is beautiful and the stock of cut glass is nothing less than dazzling. Mr. Silbert's stock of diamonds and precious stones is also especially fine and his facilities for stone setting are of the best. Nothing has been forgotten or neglected to make this store complete in every department, and that the enterprise of the proprietor is appreciated by the public is shown by the generous patronage he has always received. Just in front of the store is a handsome white street clock, made by the Howard Clock Co., which cost over $500, and this has become one of the landmarks of the city, giving the correct time to thousands of passers-by every day. Mr. Silbert is one of the public spirited men of Plainfield and has done, and is doing, his full share toward its growth and advancement.

L. L. MANNING & SON.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF MONUMENTAL WORK.

It is an old and beautiful custom, that of placing monuments over the graves of loved ones who have gone before, to mark the spot where all that is mortal of them reposes. The custom comes down to us from the most primitive ages and is not confined to any race or nation, but is universal. As the years pass these granite and marble monuments become more and more artistic and some of the most talented sculptors and designers of the world have given their genius to the work. Machinery also has done much to reduce prices and monuments can be purchased today for prices many times less than they would have cost only a few years ago. There is no reason why every grave should not be suitably marked, it is a duty that should not by any chance be neglected. Located here in Plainfield, at the corner of Central avenue and Front street, are the granite and marble works of L. L. Manning & Son, one of the largest and most completely equipped in the State, as well as one of the oldest. At this thoroughly modern plant monumental work of every description is done in the most workmanlike and artistic manner, both after designs furnished by patrons and from those of the own designers of the concern. A large stock is also kept on hand to select from. There is nothing in monuments, from the simplest headstone to the most elaborate mausoleum that cannot be furnished by the firm of L. L. Manning & Son, and examples of its work can be seen in every cemetery within a radius of many miles about Plainfield. The concern has also built up a large and constantly growing trade throughout the State and in New York and Connecticut. The yards and works extend along Front street about 100 feet and have a depth of 350 feet space, providing ample space in which to carry on the increasing business. The equipment is of the best, the power used being steam and compressed air and only the most skilled workmen procurable are employed. About 12 men constitute the staff at the works here, but the concern carries about 50 on its payroll, having extensive quarries at Barre, Vermont, from which most of the raw material for its product comes. Like most successful enterprises, that of L. L. Manning & Son, had a modest beginning, having been started in 1862 by the late L. L. Manning, the father of the present owner. It has grown to its present proportions by the exercise of industry, initiative and straightforward dealing and for over half a century has been one of the flourishing industries of the city. Upon the death of his father the founder, Mr. Walter F. Manning, became the sole owner of the business and under his able management it has continued to grow steadily. Mr. Manning is a native of Plainfield and belongs to that class of wide-awake business men who are doing active work in its development.

WILLIAM E. BARTLE.

DEALER IN BUILDING AND DIMENSION STONE.

In the range of mountains at the foot of which Plainfield is situated, there is an almost inexhaustible supply of building and other stone, and the quarries, located within a few miles of the city, have for many years been one of its principal industries. Washington Valley and Martinsville sandstone have no superior as building material and stand in the very front rank. Stone from the quarries operated by Mr. William E. Bartle has been used on some of the handsomest buildings in Plainfield and this section, as well as elsewhere. The stone from Mr. Bartle's quarries at Watchung, known as the Washington Valley quarries, and also from the older quarry at Martinsville, is shipped here to his yards at Second and Church streets, where it is dressed and cut to the dimensions required, by machinery. The plant, which is built from stone taken from the quarries, is one of the best equipped in the country, with the latest improved machinery, such as saws, planing and finishing machines and cutters, and is one of the most flourishing industries in Plainfield. It is operated by steam and at the quarries and plant about 30 men are employed. The Martinsville quarry is the oldest of the two, owned by Mr. Bartle and was worked by his father, Ellis Bartle, before him. The family have been in the stone business for generations; the grandfather of the present owner, John Bartle, having been engaged in the business in England as were several of his relations. Mr. Bartle's father came to this country as a young man and settled at Martinsville, where Mr. Bartle was born and still lives, owning a fine farm there, which he keeps in a high state of cultivation. He was the oldest of six sons, five of whom are in the stone business. One of them, Albert Bartle, is manager of the Plainfield plant, and the others, with a single exception, are employed in the work. Upon the death of his father, Mr. Willam E. Bartle, succeeded him and for 36 years has successfully conducted the plant. Under his energetic and capable management it has grown rapidly and the demand for the fine stone produced at the quarries becomes greater every year. Some years ago the quarry at Watchung was opened by Mr. Bartle and he also established the cutting and finishing plant here. Examples of how fine, for building purposes, this stone is can be seen in the Babcock Building, in which the Post Office is located, St. Mary's Academy, The Seventh Day Adventist Church, St. Joseph's Church, a portion of the National City Bank, and the Westfield Trust Company's Building, as well as in scores of other handsome and substantial structures. It stands the test of time admirably, does not become discolored, and is easily worked. Mr. Bartle divides his time between the Plainfield plant and the quarries and is one of the active business men of this part of New Jersey. He is in the prime of life, having on September 2 celebrated his 58th birthday and is one of the progressive business men of this part of New Jersey.

FARMERS' HOTEL.

JACOB BLIMM, Jr., PROP.

One of the landmarks of Plainfield and one that has for nearly half a century enjoyed the patronage of the people of this city and section, is the Farmers' Hotel, located at 35-37 Somerset street, one block from Front. This famous old hostelry is now conducted by Mr. Jacob Blimm, Jr., and under his capable and efficient management the high standard set by his predecessors has been rigidly maintained. During the 45 years the building has been devoted to hotel purposes the management has never been out of the family to which Mr. Blimm belongs and every year its popularity has steadily increased. Having the prestige of years of fine service behind it, the Farmers' Hotel is at the same time conducted along the most modern lines. Fronting over 60 feet on Somerset street the property extends back about 150 feet, the spacious yard in the rear being improved with good sheds and stables for the accommodation of the people of the surrounding section. The hotel has for years been headquarters in Plainfield for the farmers of this section of Somerset, Union and Middlesex counties, it is their great meeting place, for they know by experience that they can always get the best accommodations here at reasonable prices. The hotel has fourteen comfortable, well-furnished and sanitary sleeping rooms supplied with every convenience. The first floor is given up to the cafe and dining rooms, where the best of meals are served at reasonable prices, lunches being a specialty. A splendid stock of the finest wines, liquors, beer and cigars are kept on hand, served by courteous and efficient dispensers. It must not be concluded from the foregoing, however, that the patronage of the Farmers' Hotel is confined to out-of-town people, for such is not the case. It draws its customers from people in every walk of life, business and professional men, mechanics and merchants, many of whom have been its patrons for years as their fathers were before them. The hotel was established by Mr. Warner Heidloff, the uncle of the present proprietor, when Plainfield was little more than a prosperous country town, before its most optimistic citizen had ever dreamed that it would become a beautiful, modern city. He was succeeded by Mr. Jacob Blimm, his brother-in-law, who conducted the place most successfully for 27 years. His son, Mr. Jacob Blimm, Jr., succeeded him, about five years ago, and under him the standard of excellence has been kept fully up to the mark.

FINE WINES, REFRESHMENTS AND CIGARS.

Among the popular places in Plainfield where the best of wines, liquors, beers and cigars are served, is the cafe kept by Mr. M. F. Watson, 207 Grant avenue, near Second street. Mr. Watson by his enterprise has succeeded in giving the people of plainfield, and especially those living and having business in the West End of the city a quiet, orderly place, patronized by the best class of people; men who are good judges of the best in his line. There is nothing more easily adulterated than wines, liquors and beer, and despite the pure food laws, this is done to a greater or less extent, notwithstanding the large fines and penalties imposed. Much of the popularity of Mr. Watson's cafe results from the fact that he keeps only the purest of goods, from the best distilleries and breweries, and everything sold by him is submitted to the severest tests before it is sold to his customers. He is a stickler for purity and the result is that he numbers among his patrons, men who know by experience that he handles only the highest class of goods while his prices are just as reasonable as is charged in many places for inferior goods. Mr. Watson, who comes originally from Down East, is well known in Plainfield as a royal good fellow, and a reliable business man, having lived here for the past 25 years. He takes an interest in social and fraternal affairs, and is a prominent member of the Mooses. Recently Mr. Watson erected a handsome residence opposite his place of business, and his other investments in real estate indicate that he has faith in the growth of the city.

THE LYRIC.

PLAINFIELD'S NEW PLAY HOUSE.

Moving pictures have revolutionized the theatrical business, and there is now no doubt, in the mind of any thoughtful man or woman, that they have become a permanent future in the amusement world, especially since the character of the picture theatres have so greatly improved and a higher class of films made. Plainfield, usually up with the times, has been a little slow in keeping step with progress in this direction, and until the Lyric opened its doors, in September, did not have a theatre devoted exclusively to moving pictures at popular prices. The Lyric, located at 204 West Front street, is a perfect little gem of a playhouse, and represents the last word in picture parlors. It was entirely rebuilt inside last September by the proprietors, Metz & Gold, artistically decorated, steam heat equipment installed and completely furnished with the very latest chairs and other furniture. Only the best and latest pictures are shown at the Lyric, the choicest work of Pathe, Essanay, Kalem, the Vitagraph and Biograph, Lubin, Melie, Selig and Cines, and from the very first night the house scored a success. It is now the popular resort of the amusement-loving people of Plainfield, and is crowded every afternoon and evening with the best class of people. The house is comparatively small, the seating capacity being only 299, but what it lacks in size is made up in cosiness and comfort. The building is as absolutely fireproof as it can be made. The floors are marbleized, the only flooring of the kind in Plainfield, with the exception of that at Elks Hall, the walls are covered with a fire-

Plainfield Business College and School of English (Herr's School)

DAY AND NIGHT SESSIONS

Rooms splendidly lighted, ventilated and furnished with every convenience to make study attractive PROF. A. S. HERR.

This is the era of business. It is the age of commerce and industry conducted along new lines, and the young man or woman, who has a modern business training possesses an incalculable advantage over the one who has none. The business man of today has little time to train his employes, he is too busy, his time is too valuable and when application for employment is made to him, probably the first question he asks is whether the applicant is familiar with modern business methods. If the answer is in the negative, the chance for employment is infinitesimal. The office, factory and store have ceased to be a kindergarten, and to obtain lucrative employment in the business world, training is almost indispensable. The young man or woman with a diploma from a business college of standing is given the preference every time and this fact is every day becoming more apparent to the great army of workers. As the standard required of employes has advanced, as has that of the business college and the commercial school, the modern college is very different from that of a few years ago. One of the best types of the new institution is the Plainfield Business College and School of English, or as it is rapidly becoming known, Herr's School, after its proprietor, Mr. A. S. Herr, who has built up a unique organization and one that is doing a great work in supplying students with a superior business education. Herr's School must not be confounded with the cheap, short course business colleges that furnish superficial training in a few months and sometimes leave the student less prepared to begin life when he graduates than when he enters. It is a high class school in every particular and its equipment is of the best. The school occupies the entire third floor over the great department store of the Woodhull & Martin Company, having an entrance at 171 East Front street. The school rooms are splendidly lighted, ventilated and furnished with every convenience to make study attractive. There is something vital about the place, an atmosphere of optimism that must be inspiring to the young men and women preparing for their life work. Although the school is old in years (having been founded in 1895), it is modern in every particular, and under the able management of Mr. Herr it has grown wonderfully, the average number of students being in the neighborhood of 300, coming from a radius of 40 miles of Plainfield. There are both day and night sessions, and students may enter at any time. For a number of years the school was located over the City National Bank, and it was there when Mr. Herr became a teacher, coming here about 10 years ago. He was born in Northwestern Ohio, and is a graduate of the First Pennsylvania State Normal School of Millersville, Pa., and the Pensylvania Business College at Lancaster, Pa. Mrs. Herr, who has worked hand in hand with him in the building up of the institution, is also a graduate of the Normal, and is widely known as a teacher of the highest type. Two years after coming here, the principal of the school where both were employed, died, and they purchased it from the estate. Mr. and Mrs. Herr had original ideas of their own, as to how a commercial school should be conducted, for they are essentially teachers with high ideals and convictions and they have carried them out in building up this institution so successfully. These could not be better expressed than in their own words. "This effort," they say, "strikes a true and timely note in educational progress; it is developing a type of school whose spirit, ideals, purposes, duly attested results, and most inspiring possibilities for good, point imperatively to a sure and definite line to be followed in giving the fundamentals of education to our modern youth; it leads direct to the solution of that present vital problem, the proper and adequate training of boys and girls to the point of 'conscious practical efficiency' backed by a rightful attitude of mind and heart toward the opportunities, obligations, and ever more exacting conditions of the life their new generation must encounter. The supreme emphasis is focused upon the development of the highest values in the individual, in the true conservative spirit, and the product is self-sustaining, progressive, sterling manhood and womanhood. This institution offers liberal and thorough courses of instruction; it has a staff of Technical and Normal Graduate Teachers; it graduates classes publicly each year; it has an Alumni Association, a School Paper, a loyal student body and patronage, and enjoys the confidence of educators, public officials, professional and business men, and citizens of the best type, both in Plainfield and in the surrounding counties. It is the highest ambition of this school to accomplish a work of the greatest good, and so inspirational in its influence that many earnest teachers may be thereby incited to labor in the same spirit in other communities." Herr's School has the earnest and generous support of the people of Plainfield and this section, who recognize the fact that it is doing a great work in the cause of higher business education. Thoroughness is the keynote, there is nothing superficial about the work done there, and when a student receives a diploma it means something, for no one is graduated until he or she has reached the high standard required. Getting employment is not difficult for a graduate of the Plainfield Business College and School of English and the great majority are placed by the management immediately upon the conclusion of the course, which is from 12 to 15 months in length. Some idea of the standing of the school can be obtained by reading the hearty endorsements of such men as Former Mayor Gilbert, president of the Market and Fulton National Bank, and ex-president of the New York Clearing House; Edward L. Suffern, president, the American Association of Public Accountants; L. V. F. Randolph, former mayor of Plainfield and ex-president of the Consolidated Exchange of New York; H. M. Maxson, superintendent Plainfield Public Schools; H. C. Krebs, superintendent Schools of Somerset County; W. A. Ackerman, superintendent schools of Somerville; J. J. Sairtz, superintendent Union County Public Schools; Dr. William C. Boone and a host of other prominent people of this city and section. Although a busy man, Mr. Herr always finds time to take an active part in anything that concerns the upbuilding of the city, is one of the active working members of the Board of Trade, its vice-president and a member of its board of directors. He is active in every movement that is for the welfare of Plainfield and he and his charming wife have a host of friends.

Among the establishments that go toward making up the business life of every city, the high-class jewelry store, conducted along the best lines, is one of the most attractive and makes an especial appeal to every lover of beautiful things and admirers of fine workmanship. The trade of the jeweler is one of the oldest and most honorable of all occupations, and the men who follow it successfully must be of more than average intelligence, for it is more of an art than a trade, with those who love the work. One of the leading jewelers and watchmakers of Plainfield is Mr. Charles E. Vail, whose attractive establishment is located at 236 Park avenue, opposite North. Mr. Vail has certainly a gem of a shop, stocked with a collection of diamonds and other precious stones, jewelry, watches, silverware and cut glass that has been selected with rare taste and skill, and so artistically arranged so as to make a display that appeals to every lover of jewelry. There are, of course, larger stores, but in the opinion of his patrons, none surpasses that of Mr. Vail in completeness. The repairing department turns out the highest character of work only, and the optical department is equipped with every appliance for the skillful and expert examination of eyes. An immense stock of lenses, from the best manufacturers, is also carried and glasses are made to order from prescriptions. Another department of this leading establishment is that devoted to photography. A full line of kodaks and Brownie cameras is carried, together with a complete stock of supplies, made by the Eastman Kodak Company, the largest concern in the world. Amateur developing, printing and enlarging is furnished in a thorough and carefully handled way, insuring the best possible results. Mr. Vail has been in the jewelry and watch repair business at least 40 years, and comes from one of the pioneer families of this part of New Jersey, one of a number of Friends who were among the first settlers, and whose descendants recently celebrated the 125th anniversary of the building of the old meeting house on Watchung avenue. He is one of Plainfield's most progressive citizens and has always taken an active part in its development and progress.

STUART'S SHOE SHOP.

WHITTEMORE & STUART, PROPRIETORS.

There is no article of dress that should be selected with greater care than shoes for nothing is more conducive to the health, comfort and appearance of the wearer. A shoe that is not properly fitted is liable to spoil the feet, by producing corns and bunions, and no matter how well otherwise one may be dressed, footwear out of style spoils the whole effect. Nothing is more attractive than a well-shod foot, it adds style and distinction to a person and the selection of the family shoe merchant is of more than passing importance. Although Stuart's Shoe Shop has been in business under this name only since January 1, it is by no means a new enterprise, having for the last nine years been conducted here by Mr. Stuart as the Waldorf Shoe Company. On January 1st, the firm of Whittemore & Stuart was formed to carry on the business at 215 West Front street, Mr. Kenneth H. Stuart, who had been manager of the company forming a co-partnership with Mr. George G. Whittemore, secretary of the Waldorf Co., extensive manufacturers of shoes, at Framingham, Mass. Recently the store has been practically rebuilt and is now one of the most attractive establishments, devoted exclusively to handling footwear, in the city. A new front of plate glass and metal has replaced the old one, providing an unusually large space for display and the interior has been remodelled and furnished with every convenience and comfort, making it one of the most up-to-date shoe stores in the State. The stock is kept thoroughly fresh, the firm handling goods directly from the factory to the consumer, eliminating the profits of middlemen, and furnishing its patrons with the best footwear at the most reasonable prices. It continues to handle, as a leader, the famous Waldorf Shoe for ladies and gentlemen, a shoe which at $2.50 and $3.00 is the equal of any shoe at a dollar more a pair. There are other makes handled at $3.00, $3.50, $4.00 and $5.00, and every member of the family, from grandfather to the baby, can be suited. "Stuart's Shoe Shop" is the money saving store, and that its efforts to give the people high-class footwear at a reasonable price are appreciated is shown by the generous patronage that has been given it. The business was founded by Mr. P. E. Stuart, the father of Mr. Kenneth H. Stuart, the managing partner, a number of years ago, and was sold by him to the Waldorf Company. Mr. Stuart was with this concern about seven years as manager, and was practically brought up in the business. Mr. Whittemore is one of the best known shoe men in the country and has a number of stores in various large cities, his home being in Framingham, Mass., a great shoe manufacturing centre. These connections enable Mr. Whittemore, by buying in large quantities, for his different stores, to sell shoes to the consumer at more reasonable prices than otherwise could possibly be done. Stuart's is a gem of a shoe shop, and since the improvements have been completed it is one of the most attractive stores in the business section.

M. FIEDLER'S.

CHOICE MILLINERY.

That the crowning glory of a woman's toilet is her hat hardly admits of contradiction. It has always been and probably always will be, unless the styles change so that she will have to do without a hat altogether, and this is almost beyond the range of probability. Located here in Plainfield is one of the most attractive millinery and millinery supply establishments in the State, or, in fact in the country, for the ladies of Plainfield are among the best dressed in the country and demand the best. Although it has only been established in the city but little more than a year, Fiedler's Millinery Store, at 133 East Front street, has become headquarters for the best dressed women of Plainfield and this section. They no longer have to go to New York, for New York has come to them, the store here being a branch of the New York establishment. Here a large retail business is carried on, the firm having direct connections with the great Paris designers, who supply it with models as soon as designs are ready. Paris, however, is by no means depended upon altogether, however, the firm having its own clever artists and some of the most beautiful creations in hats originate with them. The Plainfield store is one of the most attractive in the city, extending 25 feet along Front street in the centre of the shopping district and back about 100 feet. The front portion is devoted to a splendid exhibit of the latest models, and to all kinds of supplies, while the workrooms are in the rear. Every convenience and comfort has been provided for the use of patrons and the place is a rendezvous for the beauty and fashion of Plainfield during shopping hours. It was a happy thought for Mr. Fiedler to locate a branch in this city and that his enterprise is appreciated is proven by the generous patronage he has received. Recently he has removed to Plainfield and has since, more closely than ever, been identified with the business life of the city.

C. H. BISHOP.

WOODEN AND WILLOW WARE, PAPER, PAPER BAGS, TWINE, NOTIONS, BASKETS, ETC.

One of the surest signs that Plainfield is growing in commercial importance is the fact that it is making a place for itself as a wholesale centre and is competing successfully for the trade in the surrounding country throughout a considerable radius. Among the recent additions to its wholsale houses is that of C. H. Bishop, dealer in wooden and willow ware, baskets, paper, paper bags, brooms, twine, at 163 East Second street Although Mr. Bishop has only been established here since January 1, he has already built up a large and growing business in the city and country, going as far as New Brunswick, Roselle, Somerville and the other towns contiguous to Plainfield, and the future is bright with promise. There is a fine territory to draw from and Mr. Bishop is just the man to cover it thoroughly, for he is young, ambitious and energetic, and knows his business in every detail. Since boyhood he has had practical experience in every department, having been for years associated with his father, Mr. C. H. Bishop, Sr., one of the largest dealers in the same line of business in Newark, where he has been established for 25 years or more. Mr. Bishop carries a large and varied stock both at his salesrooms on East Second street and at his warehouse. He is in a position to make immediate deliveries at the shortest notice and is making a specialty of fruit, berry and flower baskets, catering to the trade of the farmers in this section to whom he is making special inducements. His delivery service covers the territory thoroughly and there is no place so remote in his territory that he cannot reach. He handles the highest class of goods, while at the same time, his prices will be found

First National Bank of Plainfield

OLDEST BANK IN PLAINFIELD—ORGANIZED 1864

Invites Your Banking Business 4 Per Cent. Paid on Savings Accounts

SAFE DEPOSIT BOXES, $5.00 and Upward

HOME OF THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK.

There is no gainsaying the fact that age confers a prestige and begets a confidence that nothing else can do, and this is particularly true when thought of in connection with financial institutions. But this prestige can be maintained, and at the same time the institution that enjoys its advantages may be as modern and enterprising in its methods of doing business as others only a few years old. This can be said of the First National Bank of Plainfield, the oldest in point of years in the city, and one of the most progressive. The bank began business in 1864, and next year will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary of service to the people of this city and section. During this long period it has probably done more than any one institution toward the development of the resources of this part of Jersey. It has always been true to the trust imposed upon it, and has a history of which those connected with it may well be proud. Financial depressions have come, great financial institutions have not been able to weather them, but the old First National has always stood as firm as a rock, every year growing in popular favor with depositors in all the various walks of life. Before the organization of the First National there had never been but two banks in Plainfield, a state bank, known as the Plainfield Bank, which was operated from 1837 to 1847. After the lapse of a dozen years the Union County Bank was chartered in 1859, and this was superseded by the First National. The building it now occupies at 111-113 East Front street was rebuilt in 1895, and converted into a high class bank with every modern convenience, including the most improved safe deposit vaults. It is a handsome four-story structure, valued at $50,000, and the equipment has been kept thoroughly up-to-date. The bank has for years been recognized as the leading financial institution of Palinfield, having always had intimate relations with the most prominent business men of the city, but there is no department of banking that it does not cover in the most thorough manner. This includes a savings department, 4 per cent. interest being paid on deposits.

At the present time the bank has greater resources than at any time in its history. By the last statement, issued August 9, it is shown that the individual deposits have reached the sum of $2,495,131.88, the largest in its history. A glance at the report will give the reader the present condition of the bank's affairs, a most admirable showing: Resources—Loans and discounts, $1,544,276.61; overdrafts, secured and unsecured, $111.87; U. S. Bonds to secure circulation, $150,000; other bonds to secure postal savings, $10,000; bonds, securities, etc., $892,726.21; banking house, furniture, and fixtures, $50,000; due from national banks (not reserve agents), $22,408.21; due from state and private banks and bankers, trust companies, and savings banks, $13,930.56; due from approved reserve agents, $202,019.74; checks and other cash items, $5,296.33; notes of other national banks, $2,735; fractional paper currency, nickels and cents, $1,194.66; lawful money reserve in bank, viz: specie $148,660.85; legal-tender notes $30,000.00 or $178,660.85; redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation), $7,500; total, $3,080,860.04. Liabilities—Capital stock paid in, $200,000; surplus fund, $100,000; undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid, $85,306.58; national bank notes outstanding, $145,600; due to other national banks, $795.71; due to trust companies and savings banks, $2,976.60; due to approved reserve agents, $3,577.03; dividends unpaid, $234; individual deposits subject to check, $2,495,131.88; demand certificates of deposit, $19,365.52; time certificates of deposit, $19,000; certified checks, $6,783.90; postal savings deposits, $2,088.82; total, $3,080,860.04. The officers of the First National have been connected with it for many years. They are A. J. Brunson, president; J. A. Smith, vice-president, and D. M. Runyon, cashier. Together with B. Frank Coriell, W. R. Codington, J. A. Hubbard, Elias H. Bird, C. Frank French and C. J. Zeglio, they constitute the board of directors. All of them are public spirited and progressive citizens of the highest standing in the community.

ROSENBAUM'S BAZAAR

ROSENBAUM BROS. Proprs.

Cloaks, Suits, Millinery, Dry Goods and Furnishings

Among the stores in the shopping district there is none more attractive and popular than Rosenbaum's, one of the most up-to-date, modern dry goods, cloak, suit and ladies' and children's furnishing stores in this part of New Jersey. It has become, within a comparative short time, one of the leading establishments of the kind in Plainfield, by straightforward merchandising methods and the fact that its owners, Messrs. Samuel and Henry Rosenbaum, have made a successful effort to sell the best goods procurable at reasonable prices. This is one of the principal foundation stones upon which their success has been built and the results have been most gratifying, both to the patrons of the store and to its proprietors. The efforts of the firm have been appreciated by the people of Plainfield, this being evident from the fact that ever since the two brothers started in business on their own account in 1907, there have been a number of enlargements until the firm now occupies the entire building at 115-117 West Front street. In 1907 Rosenbaum Bros. started business on a modest scale at 237 West Front street with but little capital, save their energy, enterprise and determination to succeed. They worked early and late, did business along fair and square lines and gradually outgrew the old quarters. In April of last year the business was removed to the present location, only the ground floor, 22x110, being at first occupied. The same policy of the best goods for the least money, was continued at the new stand and it was not long before there was a further enlargement, the basement being fitted up for a bargain department, which has become one of the most popular features of the store. This season the upper floor, 22x100, has been handsomely fitted up for the cloak and suit department, formerly on the first floor, and has been made into one of the handsomest and best appointed departments of the kind to be found in a store located, in a town the size of Plainfield, in the country. Nothing has been neglected or forgotten to make it complete in every particular. There are dressing, alteration and retiring roms for the patrons of the house and the stock that has been laid in is from the best makers in this and other countries. At the same time the brothers took the opportunity of completely renovating the dry goods and millinery departments on the first floor, and the bargain basement, and the store as it stands today, is practically a new establishment. Like nearly all successful enterprises, that of Rosenbaum Brothers has grown from a modest beginning. Fourteen years ago the members of the firm came to this country and started in business at the very bottom of the ladder as peddlers and their success has been won by industry and merit alone. They are progressive and public spirited and are always ready and willing to do all in their power toward the advancement of this city and section.

J. L. BENNETT.

THE PURE FOOD GROCER.

As an example of what a thoroughly modern grocery and produce store should be it would be difficult to find a better illustration in a city the size of Plainfield than that conducted by Mr. J. L. Bennett, at 257 West Front street. There are large stores in the city, but none where fresher or better goods can be found at reasonable prices, where the surroundings are cleaner, and more sanitary, and where patrons will receive more courteous and efficient service. It is an attractive store in every way and the first impression one receives upon entering it is one of wholesome, cleanliness, an impression that is carried out by the facts, for on this point Mr. Bennett has most decided views. He has had years of experience in the grocery business, in fact, he may be said to have been brought up in it, having for 24 years occupied a responsible position with the firm of J. A. Smith & Brothers. About two years ago he decided to branch out on his own account and bought an interest in the business of J. G. Williams & Co. This ousiness was one of the oldest in Plainfield, having been established many years ago by Mr. Love. Last July Mr. Bennett bought out the interest of Mr. Williams and became the sole owner. He has made a number of improvements in the establishment and intends to make many more, but as it is now conducted the store is a model grocery of the best modern type. That Mr. Bennett's efforts have been appreciated by the discriminating public is proven by the fact that the trade has almost doubled since he came into possession. This generous support has come from people who know from experience that Mr. Bennett is thoroughly reliable and that he would handle nothing but what was high-class. The store fronts 20 feet and extends back 65, is well-lighted and ventilated, all loose groceries are kept in closed bins, and every effort is made to furnish customers with the purest goods it is possible to obtain. A well-organized delivery service covers the city and suburbs thoroughly and prompt and efficient service, together with reasonable prices, may be depended upon. Mr. Bennett is a native of Rahway, but has lived here since his youth. He is an excellent type of the young business man who is doing so much toward making for Plainfield a larger place on the map, and is always ready and willing to do his share to bring about this result. It should also be added that Mr. Bennett is agent for "White Rose" canned goods and health food products, which are the best in the world.

THE PLAINFIELD FURNITURE COMPANY.

SACHAR & SHIFF, PROPS. FURNITURE, BEDDING, STOVES, ETC.

Modern methods of merchandising have revolutionized many lines of business, and none more than the furniture trade. A man of good habits and reputation can today furnish a home completely, or any part of it, by paying small, weekly or monthly installments and, almost before he is aware, it is paid for with money that in many cases would have been foolishly spent. Hundreds of thousands of happy homes are owned all over the country that would never have been established except for the installment plan. The business has undergone a good many changes in the last decade. When it was first introduced many dealers sold the cheapest kind of furniture at the most exhorbitant prices, but methods have changed for the better and the finest and best made furniture and house furnishings can now be bought at very reasonable prices, when a firm like the Plainfield Furniture Company is dealt with. By doing a fair and straightforward business and furnishing its customers with reliable goods, the company, which is owned by Sachar & Shiff has built up an immense and constantly increasing business which extends throughout this city and section. At its warerooms, 139 East Front street, it has a select stock of furniture, bedding, stoves, rugs, mattings, carpets, linoleums and house furniture for the inspection of the public, and these goods will be found just as reasonably priced as those in any store in this or any other city. The company has set a new standard in the installment business and this fact has been recognized by the people of Plainfield, who have shown their appreciation by according the company a generous patronage. The firm is prepared to furnish a home either for cash or on the easy payment plan, and its reputation for reliability and integrity is of the best. Mr. Kaspar Sachar, of the firm, has charge of the furniture department, while his partner, Mr. Louis Shiff, spends most of his time on the road attending to the clothing and dry goods trade, which the company algo sells on installments as well as for cash. They are among the most progressive merchants of the city and have, within a comparatively short time taken their place among the leaders.

BICYCLES AND SUNDRIES.

More bicycles are seen on the streets of Plainfield than in almost any city of its size in the country, and it can be stated, upon the authority of a salesman for one of the largest manufacturers, that more wheels are sold here than in any city of its population, with a single exception. Those who remember the days when bicycles were at the height of their popularity would, upon coming to Plainfield, think that it has never waned and it has not, so far as this community is concerned. Every one rides, men, women and children, professional and business men, society women and working girls, and every year the popularity of the wheel increases. The leading dealer here is Mr. Clarence L. Thorn, who is also the oldest, having began business in Plainfield 19 years ago and conducted it most successfully ever since. He makes a specialty of bicycles; it is not a mere branch of his business, but the whole business, and he gives his undivided time and personal attention to giving his patrons a service that cannot be improved upon. SPICER MANUFACTURING COMPANY

SPICER UNIVERSAL JOINTS For Automobiles, Motor Trucks, Motor Boats and Shaft Driven Machinery

One of the most rapidly growing industries of Plainfield, and one that has done as much for its industrial advancement as any other, is the Spicer Manufacturing Co., makers of the Spicer Universal Joint for automobiles, motor trucks, motor boats and shaft-driven machinery in general. The product of the factories of this company is shipped all over the world, and the name "Universal" is a most appropriate one for this clever invention. Like nearly every large and successful enterprise, the Spicer Manufacturing Company started on a modest scale, and is a home company. The inventor of the Universal Joint is Mr. C. W. Spicer, president of the concern, who invented it while a student at Cornell University. He left that institution the year before he would have graduated for the purpose of manufacturing the little invention that was to become famous, especially in the automobile world, and came to Plainfield, where he had relatives. With but small capital he began the manufacture of the "Universal" joint in a small room in the works of the Potter Printing Press Co., and at first only three men were employed, the output being limited. Recognition of the merits of the invention were almost immediate, however, the demand increased rapidly, and larger quarters became necessary to supply it. These were found at 308 West Fourth street, the present site of the general offices and one of the plants, the force was increased to about fifty men, and it was not long before the building had to be enlarged. It now occupies a space of about 150x200 and is used exclusively for finishing purposes. The other shops are in South Plainfield, along the railroad tracks, and are splendidly equipped with the most improved machinery. There are three large, well-lighted and ventilated buildings, 90x260, 70x150 and 50x90, and all of the work on the Universal Joint is done right here in Plainfield. The class of workmen employed is high and the product of the factories are as perfect as first-class material and workmanship can make them. The demand for the "Universal" comes from manufacturers of high-class machines only, such as the makers of the Chalmers, Cadillac, Marmon, Baker Electric, Hudson, Correja, Velie, Babcock Electric, Kissel, Buick and Selden. Oil and dust proof, it is the acme of joint manufacture. The growth of the business has been nothing short of phenomenal. It started in the spring of 1904 in a humble way and today, nine years later, 500 men are employed, exclusive of the office force. As the automobile and kindred industries grow, the demand for the Spicer "Universal" joint is bound to increase, and this company bids fair to play a still more important part in the growth and development of Plainfield. The officers of this company, all of whom live here, are C. W. Spicer, president; H. M. Maxson, vice-president; George L. Babcock, treasurer and general manage; A. Seth Randolph, secretary, and A. W. Stone, superintendent. Mr. Spicer, the inventor, comes originally from the West, but since making his home in Plainfield has become thoroughly identified with the city. Mr. Maxson has for years been superintendent of the public schools. Mr. Babcock has long been one of the leading men of the city, and has been most intimately associated with its progress along the most advanced lines. He was a member of the last General Assembly, in which he made a most excellent record, and is president of the Chamber of Commerce of Plainfield, one of the leading commercial organizations of New Jersey. Mr. Randolph is a leading member of the bar and is counsel of the company, and Mr. Stone, the efficient young superintendent, has been connected with it for years.

GEORGE CONOVER & SON.

TRUCKMEN AND RIGGERS.

One of the oldest and most flourishing enterprises in Plainfield is that conducted by the firm of George Conover & Son, truckmen, riggers and storage warehousemen, whose stables are located at 15 Jackson avenue, and offices at 169 North avenue. The business was established nearly 40 years ago by the late George Conover, who was succeeded by his two sons, Messrs. Walter and George Conover, who may be said to have been raised in the business. The firm has one of the best equipments in the city, and its business extends throughout all this section. It has the largest moving vans of any concern in this vicinity, and this service includes two of the finest and most up-to-date motor vans in the State. A specialty is made of moving furniture, pianos and goods requiring particular care in handling. Prompt and quick service has always been one of the characteristics of this concern and its reputation has been built upon the solid foundation of reliability. It has a staff of careful, experienced and obliging men, many of whom have been in its employ for years, and its patrons are among the most discriminating people of this section. Particular care is given to packing china, bric-a-brac and fragile goods of every kind, and satisfaction is guaranteed. This is one of the greatest features of a high-class furniture moving business, and experience has fitted this firm for the calling, more, perhaps, than any other concern in this part of the county. Both members of the firm are energetic young men and are natives of Plainfield, where they have resided here all their lives. They have built up a large trade by strict attention to business and straight forward dealing, and cover their field completely, for the long distance of 200 miles from Plainfield in every direction. In the way of a splendid fire-proof warehouse, the one conducted by Conover & Son is undoubtedly the best in New Jersey. Both the members of this old firm are public spirited and progressive men of the best class. Telephone, 1399.

RANDOLPH'S PHARMACY.

L. W. RANDOLPH, PROP.

One of the oldest in point of years, but at the same time one of the most modern in its equipment and methods of doing business, is the pharmacy conducted by Mr. L. W. Randolph, at 143 West Front street, in the centre of the shopping district of Plainfield. It is also one of the largest and most popular, having as its patrons a large number of the most particular and discriminating people not only of the city but of the entire section of New Jersey, where its reputation for dealing in only the freshest and purest of medicines was established when Plainfield was but little more than a country village of a few thousand inhabitants. In no field of endeavor has a greater advance been made during the last decade or two than in that of pharmacy. There has been a vast improvement in every department and Randolph's has always been in the van, leading in the movement that has resulted in making modern drug store probably the most attractive establishment in every progressive community. It never belonged to that class of old apothecary shops, unsanitary and unattractive that preceded the modern type of pharmacy, but has been kept, as it still is, fully abreast of the times. While a complete stock of fancy goods, toilet articles, confections and specialties usually found in the high-class drug store is carried. Randolph's prescription department has always been the leading feature and in the opinion of many, it is the largest and best equipped in this part of New Jersey—certainly it is one of the most generally patronized. The greatest care is taken in compounding, only the purest and best drugs being used, and physician and patient, both feel satisfied when the name of Randolph, a sure sign of highest quality, is in a bottle or package of medicine. The store is a most attractive one, the stock arranged with unusual taste and is a model of cleanliness, and sanitary. The soda fountain, of marble and onyx, is the largest in Plainfield, and modern in every particular. Mr. L. W. Randolph is a public spirited and progressive citizen, and a man that Plainfield might well feel proud of.

PHARMACY OF L. W. RANDOLPH.

WELSH FARMS DAIRY CO.

PURE CREAM, MILK, EGGS DIRECT FROM THE FARM.

There is no article of food so wholesome and healthful, as well as nutritious, as pure cream, milk, butter and cheese, and the freshest of eggs. And it may also be said in passing that no foods are so dangerous when stale, or adulterated. Too much care cannot be exercised by the consumer in selecting his dealer in these articles and the people of Plainfield are fortunate, indeed, that they have located here such a model plant as that of the Welsh Farms Dairy (Inc.), which recently succeeded to the business of the Brokaw Creamery, at 188 East Front street. Through the medium of this company it is possible for the consumer of this city and section to get the very highest grade of dairy products, fresh from the Welsh Farms in German Valley in the Schooleys Mountains, handled in the most sanitary manner and guaranteed to be free from the slightest contamination. Analysis has shown that the milk, cream and butter from the herds in German Valley is richer and purer by far than that from those on the hills, the pasturage being finer in every way. Welsh Farms comprise about 2,000 acres, upon which graze one of the finest herds of cattle in the State, numbering about two hundred. These cows are for the most part a cross between Jersey's and Holsteins, experience and investigation having shown that cattle of this kind are less liable to disease than the thoroughbred registered cows, and the milk is also richer. Every care is taken at the farm and all cattle are inspected by the State authorities at frequent intervals to detect the slightest taint of tuberculosis or other disease. If such is found the animal is immediately destroyed. Welsh farms are among the model dairy farms of the country, and are managed by men of long experience, who have made a study of sanitary dairying, and they have been placed in the highest plane. To obviate any unnecessary handling of the milk for the retail trade it is bottled at the farm in hermetically sealed bottles and, along with the milk for wholesale in cans, is shipped by special cars to Plainfield, as are also the eggs sold by the company, laid the day before. The butter and pot cheese is made at the creamery of the company on East Front street, the equipment being of the latest and the surroundings sanitary in every particular. The creamery which was established about 12 years ago by John I. Brokaw is an attractive one, and is a popular place to drop into and get a glass of cool sweet or butter milk. In the rear are the separators, churns, and other machinery for making sweet and salt butter and pot cheese. The capacity is about 120 pounds of butter a day. Still further in the rear are the headquarters of the delivery system, which covers the entire city as well as Dunellan, North Plainfield, Netherwood, Scotch Plains and the surrounding country thoroughly. Since the creamery pased into the hands of the Welsh Farms Dairy (Inc.), they propose to make a number of improvements, and the already fine service will be extended and further systematized. The officers of the company are J. C. Welsh, president; R. W. Squire, vice-president; Wm. N. Runyon, secretary, and D. A. Hulick, treasurer. Associated with Mr. Hulick in the management of the creamery is Mr. A. R. Phillips, who, for a number of years was in the milk and butter business here, and is widely and favorably known as a dairyman. Mr. J. C. Welsh is one of the most prominent men in this section of Jersey, and is the founder of the model farms that supply such a large percentage of Plainfield's population with the purest of products. Mr. Squire is an experienced dairyman whose business was taken over by the company, and Mr. Hulick, by profession a civil engineer, is one of the energetic young business men of this section.

A. C. BLAIR.

LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLES.

One of the first favorable impressions the visitor has upon arriving in Plainfield is gathered from the number of fine horses and stylish turnouts seen on its throughfares. The automobile, instead of detracting from the popularity of the horse in this city, seems rather to have increased it than otherwise, and many of the well-to-do class own both carriages and machines. The headquarters of lovers of good horses in this city and section has for many years been the livery and boarding stables of Mr. A. C. Blair, located at 114 West Sixth street, near the center of one of the most rapidly growing residential sections. Fronting 50 feet on Sixth street, the building extends back near 200 feet, is well ventilated, lighted and drained and especial attention is paid to sanitary conditions. Mr. Blair has always maintained that the home of the horse should be wholesome and healthful, and he carries this idea out in his own stables, which are models of cleanliness. Among his patrons are the owners of some of the best blooded stock in this city, and the fact that they have boarded their horses with him for years instead of maintaining private stables is the best evidence that his service has been most satisfactory. The stables can comfortably accommodate about 40 head of horses on the first floor, the second being given up to the storage of vehicles. Mr. Blair carries on a general livery business and has for hire equippages of every kind, excellent horses and careful and experienced drivers. When an equippage leaves his stables it has none of the appearance of the average livery team, but is as spick, span and classy as can be found anywhere. Mr. Blair, who is a public-spirited gentleman, is a native of this section, has been in the livery business at his present stand for about 15 years, and is familiar with its every detail. His facilities are of the best, the largest weddings and teams for other big occasions can be served promptly and his terms are always reasonable.

MILTON H. HINCHCLIFFE.

HATTER AND RENOVATOR, MEN'S SOFT HATS MADE TO ORDER.

For many years the manufacture of hats was the most important industry of Plainfield, and headgear made in this city was worn in all parts of the country. That this industry is to be rejuvenated would appear to be apparent from the success with which Mr. Milton H. Hinchcliffe has met at his factory and salesrooms, 132 North Avenue. Mr. Hinchcliffe is a practical hatter, and since starting in business on his own account, has been most successful. His place of business is conveniently located and he is building up an excellent trade especially in custom made hats. The average man has become so accustomed to buying his hats ready-made that he does not realize the comfort and satisfaction to be derived from a hat made to his order and after his own ideas. When he once has a hat made to really fit him at Hinchcliffe's and enjoys the sensation of having a new hat as comfortable as any old one he ever wore, and at the same price as the ready-made article, he will become a convert to custom made hats, as many of the best dressed men in Plainfield have already. Mr. Hinchcliff makes soft hats exclusively, but he also keeps on hand a fine lot of all kinds of head wear. He also has unusual facilities for renovating and refinishing old hats and cleaning and reblocking both for ladies and men. All work is done with the greatest care and skill, not by inexperienced men, who are liable to ruin fine hats or by high-power machinery, often run by boys, but by practical hatters, who thoroughly understand their business, and are under the supervision of the proprietor. Mr. Hinchcliffe came here from Newark where he learned his trade and worked for a number of years. He was for a time located on Madison avenue, but about two years ago moved to his present conveniently located quarters in the business section of the city. He is one of the progressive manufacturing merchants of Plainfield and is always ready and willing to do his full share toward making it a bigger and a better city along the best lines. Mr. Hinchcliffe is standing at the door with a hat on the block ready to be finished.

PLAINFIELD STEAM LAUNDRY.

H. G. YOUNG, PROP.

Steam laundries, conducted along the best lines have done more for cleanliness than almost any other one thing, and at the same time they have relieved the average housewife of one of her most nervous duties—that of looking after the washing and some times doing it herself. The steam laundry has also encouraged sanitation. Nothing carries infection quicker than clothing and in the old days of the wash woman, when the household linen was taken to her home, no one could know what the surroundings were, or who wore them before they were returned, a week later. The steam laundry has changed all this so far as thoughtful and discriminating people are concerned and every season the steam laundries grow larger and better in their equipment and service.

Safe and Sound Financial Institution

Savings institutions have done as much and probably more than any other one thing to encourage habits of industry and thrift among the wage earners of the country, though the depositors are by no means confined to this large class, but includes people in every walk of life, from the capitalist to the office boy. In the Plainfield Savings Bank this city has one of the model institutions of the kind to be found anywhere, and its steady and continuous growth since it was organized in 1868, as the Dime Savings Institution, demonstrates how much its efforts to give the people a high class institution have been and are appreciated. It was continued as the Dime Savings Institution until 1883, when it was organized as the Plainfield Savings Bank and at the close of business on August 9, of this year, its deposits amounted to $1,190,314.16. This showed an increase of $30,000 over the deposits on January 1, 1913, when the last annual report was made. At that time the bank had as assets, bonds and mortgages amounting to $685,700, municipal, county and railroad bonds $483,675, demand loans $1,300, interest due and accrued $7,689.86 and cash in hand $31,076.35. The value of the handsome banking house, at 110 East Front street, owned and occupied by the bank, is placed at $31,000. The amount of deposits on January 1 was $1,139,240.55, while the surplus amounted to $81,200.66. It will be seen by this statement that the bank is in a most flourishing condition and indicates that the wage earners of this city and section are prosperous and frugal. The Plainfield Savings Bank is the only purely savings institution in the city and occupies a field all its own. It is managed by a board composed of some of the leading bankers, business and professional men of this section. The president, Mr. William F. Arnold, is the treasurer of Plainfield and is also vice-president and cashier of the City National Bank, a banker with years of experience. Mr. A. C. Stebbins, the vice-president, is general manager of the Pond Machine Tool Co. Mr. J. C. Pope, the treasurer, has for years been connected with the institution and has taken a most active part in its upbuilding, and Mr. H. A. Pope, the assistant treasurer, also gives his entire time to the bank. The board of managers is composed of Wm. F. Arnold, Albert C. Stebbins, Lemuel B. Woolstone, James C. Pope, Asa F. Randolph, George F. White, George M. Griffen, Jacob Voehl, F. W. Wescott, M. D., William H. Shotwell, John P. Emmons, David E. Titsworth, Herman Schwed, Louis K. Hyde, men of the highest standing in the community.

This, at least, is the case with the Plainfield Steam Laundry, of which Mr. H. G. Young is the energetic and progressive proprietor. This is the pioneer steam laundry of Plainfield, having been established as far back as 1878. It was conducted for 30 years or more by A. G. Thorne, from whom it was purchased five years ago by the present proprietor, Mr. Young, and under his enterprising management the business has increased wonderfully. The plant of the laundry is located at

THE PLAINFIELD STEAM LAUNDRY.

547 East Third street, between Richmond and Berckman streets. Since he came into possession of the plant Mr. Young has been constantly making improvements and the laundry has been practically rebuilt. New machinery is installed as soon as it has been tested and found worth while, and the equipment is thoroughly modern in every particular. The laundry is sanitary to a degree not found in many, where work is done in the basement, the ventilation of which must necessarily be poor. His washing and ironing rooms are on the first floor, the building is not surrounded by other structures, is well ventilated and bright, with a free circulation of fresh air at all times. Every sanitary precaution is taken, and clothing coming from the Plainfield Steam Laundry is as fresh, clean and sweet smelling as when new. Mr. Young has given the people of this city and suburbs a high-class laundry and they are showing their appreciation of the fact by giving him a generous and rapidly increasing patronage. They have found, by experience, that the work done at his plant is as good as can be done anywhere and much better than at many laundries with an old and inferior equipment. Mr. Young is a native of Fanwood, where he lives on Forrest road, but for many years in New York, where he was employed at the Produce Exchange.

KREWSON'S.

PLAINFIELD'S LEADING BILLIARD PARLORS—13 TABLES.

There is not a cleaner, healthier or more scientific indoor sport played than pocket-billiards, if enjoyed among proper surroundings at a place frequented by intelligent men of the best class. The game is especially the favorite of men who lead sedentary lives, whose work confines them to store or office for long hours during the day, though all classes enjoy it. Not too severe on the muscles of the most delicate, it is a healthy stimulant both to the mind and body, drives dull care away as no other game does and the element of chance is almost entirely eliminated. Billiards and pocket-billiards are essentially games of skill. There are few of the large residences of Plainfield, belonging to well-to-do people, that do not have a billiard room, and the game is recognized as the sport of intelligent people. Plainfield has in Krewson's Billiard Rooms, 153 West Front street, one of the best equipped and most popular places in New Jersey—the resort of all lovers of the game not only in this city, but throughout this section. The surroundings are of the best, and the most particular could find no fault with the manner in which the establishment is conducted by Mr. C. F. Krewson, the enterprising proprietor. Both floors over Laing's book store are occupied; the rooms are bright, well furnished and sanitary, and the thirteen high-class tables are kept in the very pink of condition. There is no pleasure in playing on tables that are not kept in the best of order, and no one appreciates this fact more than Mr. Krewson. He has had over 20 years of experience in the conduct of billiard and pocket-pool parlors. Having been established in Plainfield since 1892, his business has been built up to its present dimensions by the fact that nothing but the highest class of equipment would satisfy him and the further fact that his clientele of patrons are among the most discriminating class. No betting or the slightest disorder is allowed in the rooms, which are conducted along the best lines for the accommodation of people who really love the sport and wish to enjoy it among the pleasantest surroundings. That the methods of Mr. Krewson have met with the appreciation of the public is indicated by the fact that his establishment has grown from an equipment of three tables to one of thirteen, and every season grows more popular. The size of his rooms were exactly doubled last April, when he took the third floor of the building and equipped it in the same modern manner as the old quarters. Mr. Krewson is a native of Pennsylvania, having been born in Bucks county, but has been identified with the social and business life of this community for the last twenty-two years, since he first started rooms on a modest scale on North avenue. Mr. Krewson is progressive and always ready to help any cause that is for the welfare of old Plainfield.

R. H. KEENAN'S SANITARY GROCERY.

R. H. KEENAN.

STAPLE & FANCY GROCERIES.

In the absence of any central markets, such as exist in larger cities, the housekeepers of Plainfield are dependent, to a great extent, upon the grocers of the city to supply them with produce and provisions as well as groceries. As a consequence, stores of this kind are more numerous here than in many communities, and as a class are much superior. Competition is also unusually keen which rebounds to the benefit both of the merchant and the consumer. It has also resulted in the establishment of a number of high-class stores, near the residential sections. These are not mere corner groceries, of the type so familiar a few years ago, but modern establishments conducted along the best lines, many of them quite as large as those in the business center. Among these must be classed the store of Mr. R. H. Keenan, located at the corner of East Fifth and Richmond streets. Mr. Keenan's establishment would be a credit to any city many times the size of Plainfield; it is splendidly stocked with a large line of staple and fancy groceries from the best manufacturers, and there is no better example of what a high-class modern grocery store should be in this city and section. Starting on a modest scale about 15 years ago, in a much smaller store just across the street from his present location, Mr. Keenan has by industry and enterprise built up a large trade which extends throughout the city and is constantly increasing. Expenses in the centre of the city are large and the customers have to pay the bill. They are small, comparatively, in the suburbs, and the telephone in connection with an excellent delivery service, has annihilated distance, so that the consumer, in any part of Plainfield can order from home, take advantage of more reasonable prices and get the goods by dealing with Mr. Keenan. His patrons are not confined to the neighborhood in which he is located, but are scattered throughout Plainfield and its suburbs. A trial order nearly always makes a permanent customer. Mr. Keenan is one of the most successful and progressive business men of the city, and is always ready to do his share toward its advancement and prosperity.

HOTEL CHATHAM.

HILAIRE C. BLATZ, PROPRIETOR.

There is no one thing that indicates better the prosperity and growth of a city than the success of its hotels. Progressive communities always have good hotels, and the town that does not have them is laboring under a handicap that is difficult to overcome. One of the most popular hostelries in the two Plainfields is the Hotel Chatham, located at 70-72 Somerset street, of which Mr. Hilaire C. Blatz, is the enterprizing and progressive proprietor. This has long been one of the recognized institutions of North Plainfield and has a large patronage, made up of the best people of the two cities and the surrounding country. It was established over twenty years ago by Joseph A. Blatz, father of the present proprietor, who conducted it most successfully until about three years ago, when his son assumed the management. He has kept the place fully up to the high standard maintained by his father, who was in the hotel business for many years, having at one time been the proprietor of the Mountain Inn, further down Somerset street, and it was when he was the owner of this hotel that Mr. Hilaire C. Blatz was born. Mr. Blatz was associated with his father in the business from boyhood and thoroughly learned the details of hotel management from him. He is giving the people of the twin-cities a fine service and they appreciate the fact by bestowing upon him a generous patronage. The Hotel Chatham has one of the handsomest cafes in the city, and the stock of fine wines, liquors, beers and cigars kept on hand are of the best. The hotel contains 10 sleeping rooms, exclusive of the private apartments of the family, they are well furnished, neat and sanitary and every convenience and comfort has been provided for the guests. In the rear are fine sheds and stables for the accommodation of stock, for the Hotel Chatham has for years accommodated the farmers of this section. Mr. Blatz, assisted by his brother, gives his personal attention to making his guests comfortable, and anyone requiring permanent or transient quarters in Plainfield, convenient to the business section, but far enough away to escape its noise and confusion, can make no mistake in stopping at the Hotel Catham. It proprietor is a public spirited and progressive gentleman, who does all he can to advance the city in which he has cast his fortunes.

PLAINFIELD SURPRISE STORE.

CLOTHING AND FURNISHINGS.

Well-dressed men are the rule, rather than the exception at the present time, for people have began to realize that, to a great extent, good clothes are the stamp of the successful, progressive citizen. The man who is always shabby, even though he is brainy in other ways, is bound to suffer by comparison, and many a splendid opportunity has been lost because a man did not have a "good front." Clothes were never so cheap and, at the same time, well and stylishly made, as they are at the present and the man who knows how and where to buy can always be well-dressed for a comparatively trifling sum. Try Louis Stiegman, at the Plainfield Surprise Store, 219 West Front street, just once and you will become a permanent customer. If ever an enterprise was appropriately named "The Surprise Store" it is this store, for the shopper will find surprises there in prices and values, no matter which way he may turn. Mr. Steigman's stock of clothing for men and boys and gentlemen's furnishing goods is one of the most select in Plainfield. His store is not as large as some, but it must be remembered large stores necessarily have to carry stocks over from season to season, while the smaller merchant turns his over rapidly and has always a fresh supply on hand. This is one of the secrets of the success of "The Surprise Store." Goods found there are always strictly up-to-date, and the fact that his expenses are more modest than some competitors enables him to sell the same quality of goods at lower prices. The Plainfield Surprise Store fronts on Front street, about 22 feet and extends back about 70, providing a large space in which to show goods. A specialty is made of "Great Six" clothing, one of the best and most reliable brands ever placed on the market. The winter stock is now in, complete and at its best, and if you haven't bought your winter suit try Mr. Steigman and you will never regret it. Mr. Steigman has been in business here for the last ten years and has made for himself a splendid record for fair dealing among the people of this city and section. He came to this country from Stockholm, Sweden, and first started in business at 324 West Front street, where he remained for nine years. About a year ago, he removed to his present stand at 219 West Front street, which he greatly improved and now has one of the most attractive establishments in the city. Mr. Steigman since living in Plainfield has been actively identified with its business life and is one of its most enterprising merchants.

THE P. F. KAINE CO.

PLUMBING, HEATING, TINNING AND METAL WORK.

Plumbing, roofing and heating are three of the most important things to be considered in the building of a house, and no matter how well the carpenter, mason and other mechanics have done their work, particular attention must be paid to the important details. Sanitary plumbing, steam and hot water heating has long since ceased to be a luxury in the modern home, no matter how modest it may be, and the house in which they are not installed, will wait long for a tenant. Although it is necessary for all of them to pass an examination before being allowed to work at the trade, in the very nature of things, since plumbers are superior workmen to others and use better materials, just as is the case in any other business, so that too much care cannot be used in selecting the concern to do your work. To those contemplating building or are considering the installation of sanitary plumbing and heating, the suggestion is made that they consult the P. F. Kaine Co., whose handsome salesrooms and modernly equipped shop is located at 128 North avenue.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE P. F. KAINE CO.

Plainfield-Union Water Co.

GENERAL OFFICE:

175 NORTH AVE.

Incorporated 1891

One of the City's Greatest Blessings

Without a pure and abundant water supply that can be depended upon in all seasons a city is hopelessly handicapped that wishes to keep its place among progressive and growing communities. It constitutes one of its most valuable resources; one that should be most carefully guarded and protected, for upon it, to a very great extent, depends the health of the inhabitants. Almost the first question asked by the prospective home-seeker or investor when visiting a city is in regard to the quality and quantity of water available for use, and fortunately this is a question to which a most satisfactory answer can be given when it is asked about Plainfield. The water supply of this city and its suburbs is supplied by the Plainfield-Union Water Company, and has been appropriately described as the purest and sweetest that Nature can yield. It is drawn from 39 artesian wells ranging in depth from 70 to 500 feet on the property of the company from Leland avenue to Terrell road. The supply, bright, cold and sparkling, undoubtedly has its source in springs in the Watchung Mountain, although it has never been accurately located, but it evidently comes from a considerable height, for the subterranean stream has, it is estimated, a fall of about nine feet to the mile, flowing over a rocky bed, which adds to its purity and wholesomeness. The supply is practically inexhaustible and such a thing as a scarcity of water in Plainfield is never to be feared. Recently extensive improvements have been made by the company through the installation of the Harris Air Lift System which has been perfected.

TOWER OF THE PLAINFIELD UNION WATER CO.—NETHERWOOD

This is operated by Ingersol compressed air machinery and the improvements have made the plant a model one in every particular. In fact it is one of the show plants of the country, its builders using it as an example of all that is most complete in modern water supply systems. The company has spared no expense in giving Plainfield and the surrounding country the best that can be had and the service it furnishes is most satisfactory and dependable, while the rates are reasonable. Besides this city, the company supplies the cities of North Plainfield, Fanwood, Westfield, Garwood, Cranford, Kenilworth, Roselle and Roselle Park, and has laid approximately 150 miles of water mains. The water supplied by the Plainfield-Union Water Company has been analyzed by Allen Hazen, a leading hydraulic expert of New York, and pronounced by him to be of "great organic purity," and in a letter to one of the company's patrons he adds, "You are to be congratulated upon having so good a supply, and you need have no anxiety whatever as to its wholesomeness." Herbert B. Baldwin, chemist to the department of public health of the city of Newark, N. J., made an analysis on September 22, 1911, of samples of water taken from the mains of the company in three different places in the city of Plainfield and states: "Both chemical and bacteriological data in these samples show the water to be of an unusually good quality from a sanitary point of view." The Plainfield-Union Water Company, the general offices of which are located at 175 North avenue, was formed in 1896 as the result of the merging of The Plainfield Water Supply Co., and the Union Water Co. The former company at the time of the consolidation was supplying Plainfield and North Plainfield only, while the Union was furnishing water to the towns east of Plainfield to Elizabeth. Since the merger many improvements have been made, and the service has been excellent. The interests of the company are closely identified with those of the communities it serves, and it is the policy of the management to do its full share to promote their growth and prosperity. The officers of the company are Messrs. Frank Bergen, president, William J. Whelan, secretary and treasurer, and Amos Andrews, superintendent.

KELLER'S

Although this leading concern has just rounded out four years of existence, it has built up a splendid business here in Plainfield and the surrounding country amongst the most careful and particular property owners, contractors and builders, and every season shows distinct progress. Some of the handsomest stores and most attractive residences contain examples of the high-class work done by the company, which also does all kinds of tin roofing, guttering, spouting and sheet metal work. The business was established by Mr. P. F. Kaine, who came here from New York, where he was formerly in business for 15 years, and although the competition is unusually keen in this line of endeavor, he soon built up a large patronage. About two years ago it was decided to incorporate, and the P. F. Kaine Company was formed. Mr. P. F. Kaine is president, William Ball, vice-president, E. A. Caffrey, treasurer, and Mr. M. E. Tunison, all of them being thoroughly practical plumbers and progressive business men.

THE RELIABLE JEWELRY SHOP.

PENN & BERNSTEIN, PROPRIETORS.

Among the establishments that go toward making up the business life of a growing and progressive city like Plainfield, there is none more attractive than the modern jewelry store, especially if it is conducted by young, practical men who are just beginning active business life on their own account. Beginners in business put a vim and vigor into their enterprise that is lacking in older competitors, they have the future before them and are willing to do their very best to make good, with the result that their patrons get the best kind of service. About a year ago the Reliable Jewelry Shop, of which Penn & Bernstein are the owners, opened its doors at 245 West Front street, and solicited a share of the public patronage. Both of the proprietors are well known in Plainfield as men of unusual skill, Mr. Penn having been with one of the local jewelers for three years, and Mr. Bernstein with another for six years and they started with the best wishes of a host of friends. From the first their enterprise was a success and, in the comparatively short time that has elapsed since the firm started in business, an extensive trade has been built up among the most discriminating people of this section. The facilities of the firm for doing all kinds of repairing, stone setting, engraving and watch making are of the best and the members give their personal attention to all work entrusted to their care. Mr. Penn is one of the most skillful jewelers and engravers in the city, while Mr. Bernstein is a watchmaker of long experience. The stock carried by the Reliable Jewelry Store is new, and some of the designs are to be found in no other place in Plainfield. The diamonds, precious stones, rings, bracelets, brooches, watches, charms and silverware, cut glass and artistic bric-a-brac are tastefully arranged in plate glass cases and nothing has been forgotten or left undone that would help to make this a thoroughly modern jewelry store, conducted along the best lines. The firm is composed of Messrs. H. W. Penn and M. Bernstein, both of whom are of that type of young business men who are doing their full share toward the up-building of the "City by the Hills."

KELLER'S CLEANING SHOP.

YSBRAND DE DOOD, PROPRIETOR.

Comparatively few people seem to realize what a great and economical saving they can make in their clothing and dressmakers' bills by patronizing a high-class cleaning and dyeing establishment, such as Keller's Cleaning Shop, located at 125 Park avenue, of which Mr. Ysbrand de Dood is the enterprising proprietor. Many a suit or gown has been thrown aside or given away which could have, in skillful hands and by the use of modern methods, been made almost as good as it ever was by trifling expenditure. Keller's Cleaning Shop has for years been one of the best known institutions of Plainfield, and numbers among its patrons many of the most discriminating and particular people of this city and section, who have learned by long experience that the very highest class of work only is done at this establishment and that the most delicate fabrics can be safely entrusted to the care of its skillful and efficient workmen. Keller's is not one of those little shops that are springing up almost every day, like mushrooms, the entire capital of the proprietor being an ironing board, a couple of irons and a bottle of gasoline. Those who entrust fine clothing to such places do so at their own rish, and if the garments are damaged or ruined, as they often are, the owner has no redress. Keller's is one of the leading enterprises of Plainfield, it was established in 1894, and for nearly a score of years has catered to the wants of the people of this section, giving them an unequalled service, which they appreciate by responding with a generous patronage. This plant is the largest, as well as the most completely equipped, in this part of New Jersey. The most improved processes are used in all the departments which are equipped with the latest machinery, operated by the most skillful employes under the direct supervision of Mr. De Dood, who gives every detail of his establishment his personal attention. All kinds of dyeing, cleaning, repairing and pressing is done on ladies' and gentlemen's clothing, hats, gloves and apparel of every description, and satisfaction is guaranteed in the minutest particular. Though having all the prestige that only years of good work can give, Keller's is conducted along the most modern lines, and is kept thoroughly up with the times. An excellent delivery service calls for and delivers clothing in all parts of the city and suburbs, and orders by mail, to be shipped by express or parcel post, receive prompt attention. Mr. Ysbrand de Dood, the proprietor of Keller's Cleaning Shop, is a thoroughly practical man of long experience. He is a native of Amsterdam, Holland, where his father runs an extensive dyeing and cleaning plant and there he learned his business under the most favorable circumstances. Fourteen years ago Mr. De Dood came to this country and was for years superintendent of the establishment of Rees & Rees in New York, which employs about 350 people. On April 22, of the present year, Mr. De Dood bought Keller's and has, besides making many improvements, kept up the high standard of excellence which has always been maintained.

COAL AND WOOD.

Fuel is one of the largest items in the budget of every family and too much care cannot be used in the selection of the coal and wood dealer. Most people seem to think that coal is not differently graded, that the coal from one mine is quite as good as that from another, while as a matter of fact no greater mistake could be made. High grade coal is free from slate and dust, its heat producing properties are greater and it burns freer, although it looks precisely like the inferior grade. Only the dealer and expert can tell the difference before it is used and the dealer who knows and provides his patrons with the best is the one that discriminating and economical people buy from. It is because they have always protected their customers, given full and honest weight and prompt service that the firm of N. Meyers & Sons, has, in the face of the keenest kind of competition, built up an immense business here in Plainfield in the comparatively short space of four years. The yards of this enterprising firm are located along the railroad tracks between Washington and Richmond streets, occupying nearly the entire block. Coal is unloaded directly into the yards, is sheltered from the weather and comes from the best mines in the country. That the efforts of this firm to give the people of Plainfield superior fuel at the lowest market prices are appreciated is amply proven by the fact that it has had to enlarge its yards greatly. When it was first established the yards were considerably less than half as large as at present, property having been purchased on East Fourth street, and houses moved to make room for the larger stock required by a constantly increasing business. The office at the yards is at Fourth and Washington streets, and there is also an office at 121 Watchung avenue. Orders sent through telephone, 152-W and 1911, by mail, or left at either office will receive prompt attention. The firm is composed of Mr. N. Meyers and his sons, Joseph A. Meyers, and Samuel R. Meyers, who came here from Long Island and have since been thoroughly identified with the business life of the city. They are among the progressive merchants of Plainfield and never hesitate when called upon to do anything that is for its growth and prosperity.

ROSENTHAL'S FINE ESTABLISHMENT

ROSENTHAL'S.

CLOAKS, SUITS, MILLINERY, DRY GOODS AND FURNISHINGS.

Everyone likes to deal at a new store, there is always such an air of freshness about it, no shop worn goods left over from seasons past and gone, but everything just from the best makers. It makes an appeal to the shopper that nothing else can make especially if the most stylish and reliable goods are sold at prices that are just right. The merchant just starting in business has his way to make and he has to give unusual inducements, for at ho time was competion keener than it is at present. But competition puts life and snap into trade, the wide-awake merchant who knows that straightforward dealing must win out, welcomes it, and works all the harder to please his customers. Although Rosenthal's cloak, suit, millinery, dry goods and furnishing store was only opened, at 210 West Front street, last April, it has in the few months that have elapsed made a place for itself among the leading establishments of the kind in Plainfield, and already the proprietors, Messrs. M. I. and D. Rosenthal, are contemplating enlarging. The present store, located in the centre of the shopping district, is fast becoming inadequate to the demands made upon it, for no enterprise ever started in Plainfield has made a greater success in so short a time as has this. Fronting in the main shopping thoroughfare of the city, 25 feet, Rosenthal's extends back 110 feet, providing a large, bright, well-ventilated sales room where one of the most select stocks of cloaks, suits, jackets, blouses, dry goods, notions, toilet requisites, children's clothing, millinery and scores of articles needed by the well-dressed woman, ever seen in this city has been assembled. Every article in the store is the latest product of the best makers, the owners of the enterprise determined at the beginning to keep nothing but the freshest of stocks and dispose of everything by the end of every season no matter what the sacrifice might be. This policy has been in the past and will be in the future rigidly adhered to. The firm are young men who are well and favorably known in Plainfield, where they have lived for years and have hosts of friends. Mr. M. I.

BABCOCK BUILDING
Next to Post Office

There is no valid reason why any family, with a reasonably steady income, should not in time possess an attractive, and comfortably furnished home, by the practice of a little economy, and the selection of the right place to buy furniture and household goods. High class furniture was never so reasonably priced as at the present time, due to improvements in manufacturing processes and modern methods of merchandising, together with keen competition. Plainfield is a city of beautiful homes and hundreds of the most attractive of them have been furnished by Shirley & Johnston, whose splendidly stocked establishment is located in the Babcock Building on Front street. Since it was established, ten years ago, this enterprising firm has built up an immense business, which is by no means confined to Plainfield and this vicinity, but extends as far as New York, Jersey City, New Brunswick, Elizabeth and smaller cities where frequent shipments are made. The firm is constantly extending the radius of its operations and its growth has been rapid and continuous. An immense stock of all grades of furniture, from the best to the lowest priced, is carried and any taste and purse can be suited. A specialty is made of awnings, window shades and draperies, the firm being the largest manufacturers of these articles in Plainfield and a large business has been built up among the most discriminating people of this section. The facilities of the firm are of the best, its plant, run, by electricity, is equipped with the latest improved machinery, the most skilled workmen are employed and the product is of the highest class. Awnings, shades and draperies are made to order in any style desired, and the prices will be found most reasonable, when the high character of the work and materials are considered. The firm also deals in curtain poles and brass rods, lace curtains and portieres and its stock of fine rugs, linoleums and mattings challenge comparison with that of any store in cities many times the size of Plainfield. Shirley & Johnston are always studying the wants of its patrons, its members are men of initiative and are conducting their establishment along the most modern lines. As an instance the concern rents canopies and carpets for weddings and receptions and have men of experience to attend to every detail in placing, and removing them. This department has become very popular and filled a want that had long been felt. The store is most conveniently located and attractively arranged. Fronting 40 feet on Front street it extends to the rear 200. Both the main floor and basement are occupied, providing a floor space of 16,000 square feet. Every available foot of this large space is utilized, yet the stock is so cleverly arranged that the purchaser has every opportunity to examine goods. The firm is composed of Messrs. T. J. Shirley and J. S. Johnston, both of whom are thoroughly practical men of long experience. Before going into business on their own account they were connected with Woodhull & Martin. Mr. Shirley is a native of Plainfield, while Mr. Johnston comes from Hackettstown, but has lived here for the past 15 years. Among other enterprises in which he is interested is the Independent Ice Co., of which he is president. Progressive and public spirited the members of the firm of Shirley & Johnston are always among the first to do everything in their power to advance the growth and prosperity of Plainfield.

PLUMBING, STEAM AND HOT WATER HEATING, GAS FITTING, TINNING AND FURNACE WORK.

Sanitary plumbing and heating have long since ceased to be a luxury to be enjoyed only by the well-to-do, and today nearly every home, factory, public building, store and edifice of every kind, no matter how modest it may be, is supplied with one or both of these modern conveniences. Plumbing is one of the most important things to be considered in the building of a house, and no matter how well the other work is done particular attention should be paid to the sanitary arrangements, for upon these depend the health of the occupants. Armstrong, one of the most prominent plumbers of Plainfield, and have since conducted it most successfully. Some good examples of the kind of work they do may be found in the Roth Building, now being erected on Front street, the Monroe Avenue M. E. Church, and a number of handsome dwellings on Park avenue and other principal thoroughfares. While they have worked here for a number of years both brothers have had valuable experience in New York and Brooklyn. Both gentlemen are progressive citizens who are always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to good old Plainfield.

MARCHANT BROTHERS.
112 WATCHUNG AVENUE, NEAR EAST FRONT STREET.

There are no foods more delicious, healthful and nutritious than pure milk and cream, fresh eggs and butter, such as are supplied to the people of Plainfield and its environs by the Plainfield Milk & Cream Co. For the past fifteen years this concern, or its owners, Marchant Brothers, under which firm name the company formerly operated, has been one of the best known institutions of this city, and has during that time, built up a reputation for the purity of its dairy products of which any concern might be proud. The plant of the company at 112 Watchung avenue, built of brick and concrete, is a model one, equipped with every modern appliance for handling the large business. Clean and sanitary in the highest degree, nothing has been forgotten or left undone to make it complete in all its appointments. The main receiving plant of the company is at Hampton, Hunterdon county, N. J., about an hour's ride from Plainfield. Milk, cream and buttermilk are bottled and shipped from this point each night in refrigerator cars to the Watchung avenue plant, which is the distributing point for Plainfield as well as Fenwood, Dunellen and other suburbs. The company also handles the famous Quaker Hill Farm milk, produced just beyond the Country Club grounds and the Raritan Valley Farm's Certified Milk. The entire city and its environs is completely covered by a splendidly organized delivery service and a call over Telephone 840 will bring one of its wagons promptly to your door. Ask anyone in the territory covered by this company for an opinion of the products it supplies. The company is willing to abide by the result, for its trade rests strictly upon the solid foundation of merit. When the business was started, 15 years ago, by Marchant Brothers, the highest standard of excellence was determined upon, this standard has been rigidly adhered to, and it has brought full measure of success. About six years ago it was decided to incorporate as the Plainfield Milk & Cream Co., under the laws of the State of New Jersey. Since then the business has greatly enlarged, the present handsome and finely equipped plant at 112 Watchung avenue built, and many improvements in the service made. The officers are William B. Marchant, president, and M. H. Marchant, secretary and treasurer, both members of the old firm of Marchant Brothers. They are public spirited and progressive citizens, who have been identified with the business life of Plainfield for years and have always been ready to do anything in their power for its growth and development.

WEISS' BORO DRUG STORE.

THE REXALL STORE.
NORTH PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Modern pharmacies, conducted along the best and most progressive lines, are among the most attractive stores that go toward making up the business life of every city. In no line of endeavor has a greater advance been made during the last few years, than in this and the musty old apothecary shop of the past, with its crowd of loungers, seems but a dream. That the pure drug laws had much to do with bringing this change about there can be no doubt, still there are many men engaged in the business who did not require any law to make them keep a high-class place, and those who know Mr. Louis Z. Weiss, also know that he is one of the men. Mr. Weiss is the popular proprietor of the Rexall Drug Store, at Somerset street and Craig Place, one of the best examples of what a high-class pharmacy should be that is to be found in the city. A drug store has been located at this point for more than 30 years, but Mr. Weiss has only been the proprietor for the past two years. During this comparatively short time the trade of the store has greatly increased, all of the old patrons having been retained and many new ones added. A number of improvements have been made, and while the business has all the prestige that only months of fair and straightforward dealing can give it is conducted along the most modern lines. A complete stock of the famous Rexall Remedies and preparations is carried, remedies prepared in what have been pronounced the most complete laboratories in the world, and which are sold by 7,000 of the highest class of drug stores in this country and Canada. Gives money back if you are disappointed, is the guarantee that goes with Rexall goods. This, however, is only one feature of this thoroughly up-to-date store. A complete stock of Huylers' and Liggett's candies received fresh every week. A full line of the very finest drugs and standard proprietary medicines is carried and also a stock of toilet articles such as perfumes, powders, brushes, combs and everything of this kind usually found in the modern drug store. These, however, are to an extent side lines, for Mr. Weiss has always kept in mind that his establishment is essentially a pharmacy. Especial attention is paid to the compounding of medicines and the prescription department of the Boro Drug Store is one of the best patrionized in Plainfield. Only the freshest and purest drugs are used, compounded by registered pharmacists. The Weiss' Boro Drug Store is the only store in the city where delicious sodas and ice cream can be had on Sunday. Mr. Weiss is a Seventh Day Adventist and does not sell anything, except necessities, on that day. Another feature of his store of great convenience to his patrons and the public generally, is that it is a branch of the Western Union Telegraph Co., and messages are sent to all parts of the world at regular rates. Mr. Weiss came to Plainfield from Toledo, Ohio, over two years ago and, has, since that time, been actively identified with the business life of the city.

H. E. GAYLE HARDWARE CO.

GENERAL HARDWARE AND HOUSE FURNISHING GOODS, STOVES, MIXED PAINTS, ETC.

There is probably no business more difficult in many ways than that of the hardware merchant, and to be successful, he must be especially fitted for the task. The business is constantly changing, new goods are placed on the market almost every day, taking the place of those long considered standard, a demand is created by extensive advertising and he must meet it or see his customers go to a rival. An immense stock must also be carried, so varied is the class of goods coming under the head of general hardware, a large capital is required and store space must be ample. Dealers in hardware must conduct business on a big scale to be successful and, as a class, are among the most progressive merchants of every community. One of the largest and oldest hardware concerns in this section of New Jersey is the H. E. Gayle Hardware Co., whose establishment is located at Front street and Park avenue, in the centre of the city's business section. Its salesrooms form an L, providing two entrances, one on each of the two principal thoroughfares of the city, and though a large space is thus secured it is not nearly enough to accommodate the immense stock carried. Parts of the second and third floors, as well as the basement, are used for storage of the reserve stock, providing a floor space in the neighborhood of 7,000 square feet. There is no room to spare, every foot available is utilized and more could be used, but the arrangement of the stock is so admirable, and the fact that it is space for new goods. It would be difficult to find a better stocked establishment than that of the H. E. Gayle Co. A full line of general hardware, builders' hardware, tools, cutlery, sporting goods, horse equipments, stoves, house furnishing goods, Benjamin Morris & Hollywood mixed paints, and painters' supplies, agricultural implements, seeds and fertilizers, and, in fact, everything usually found in a high-class hardware store is handled.

ONE OF THE FIVE FLOORS OF MURRAY'S FURNITURE, AUCTION AND STORAGE HOUSE.

Nothing has been forgotten or neglected to make this store complete in every particular; to reach perfection is the constant study of the officers of the company and their employes. Though one of the pioneer enterprises of the city, having the prestige that only years of fair and straight-forward dealing can give, it is thoroughly modern in its methods and fully abreast of the times. The business was founded many years ago by Berry & Thorn, that firm being succeeded by the J. P. Laire Hardware Co., which conducted the business for about 10 years. In 1900 the H. E. Gayle Hardware Co. was incorporated, and took over the business which has under its enterprising management had a rapid and continuous growth. The officers are: Mrs. Flora M. Gayle, president; John P. Laire, secretary, and H. E. Gayle, treasurer and general manager. Mrs. Gayle, who is the wife of the general manager, does not take an active part in the business. Mr. Laire is an experienced hardware man and was formerly at the head of the old company, and Mr. Gayle, was, before going into the hardware business, in 1900, a prominent builder and contractor of this city with the business interests of which he has been long actively identified. The officers are among the substantial and progressive men of the city, and are always ready to do their share toward its advancement.

ROBERT MURRAY.

BARGAINS IN FURNITURE, ANTIQUES, STORAGE AND GENERAL AUCTIONEER.

Comparatively few people realize the wonderful bargains that can be found in high class auction rooms such as those carried on by Mr. Robert Murray at 326-328 West Front street. Mr. Murray, besides carrying on the largest auction business in this city and Elizabeth and throughout the State, is also an extensive dealer in furniture, household goods of every kind, books, bric-a-brac, pictures, antiques and hundreds of articles that can be found in no other store in Plainfield. His establishment is a veritable bazaar of bargains, they are to be found on every hand and he numbers among his patrons hundreds of discriminating people who know by experience that they can every day find at his warerooms something of value at simply astonishing prices, rare antiques being a leading feature. This, however, is only one department of the large business conducted by Mr. Murray. From Nos. 326 to 332 West Front street are his storage warerooms, the oldest in the city. Several years ago Mr. Murray, who was then located at 332 Park avenue, bought out the business of the Plainfield Storage Co., at his present location, the oldest concern of the kind in this section. He has over 50 separate rooms of various sizes, all well-ventilated, clean and sanitary, which are rented for storage purposes at unusually low rates. Mr. Murray has had an experience of over a quarter of a century in buying, selling, packing, handling and appraising goods, and this must prove of the greatest value to his customers. He also does repairing and polishing as well. Many classes of breakable goods, such as furniture, glass and crockery, pictures and bric-a-brac are ruined by careless handling, as every owner is aware, and the facilities of Mr. Murray will be appreciated, particularly by owners of such articles. Mr. Murray is a native of Scotland, having been born in Sutherlandshire, near Dun Robin Castle. He came to this country when quite a young man, and before coming to this city lived for a time in Elizabeth, where he was successfully engaged in business. About 12 years ago he moved to Plainfield and has since been actively identified with the business life of the city. Besides his auction and storage business, he is an experienced appraiser, deals in real estate and conducts an employment agency. Although he has long been an American citizen, Mr. Murray still takes great interest in anything that concerns "Bonny Scotland" and is Past Chief of the Clan MacKensie, No. 204, O. S. C., and Past Royal Deputy of the State of Jersey. Mr. Murray is an all around athlete in the clans and takes much interest in all their sporting events. He is one of the progressive and successful merchants of Plainfield and has an abiding faith in its future growth and development.

ALFRED A. KEENAN.

CHOICE MEATS AND POULTRY.

Meat has steadily advanced in price all over the country for several years, and the high cost of living has become one of the most vital questions to every housekeeper. The selection of the family meat dealer is a most important one and the discriminating head of the family is always ready for any suggestion that will bring relief. Probably it has occurred to many that when they buy meats from the big dealers in the business centre of the city, where expenses are large, that exhorbitant prices are caused by these expenses, that they are paying for them instead of for what is sent home in their market baskets. They are correct in taking this view, for it is a fact that they can get the same meat from a high-class dealer in the suburbs, like Mr. Alfred A. Keenan, whose establishment is located at the corner of East Fifth and Richmond streets, for less money, just as good and fresh. They simply pay for the meat and not the rent. Mr. Keenan started in business at his present stand about seven years ago, and has been

M. C. VAN ARSDALE — FINE SHOES — Where Quality and Prices Are Just Right

There is no article of apparel in the selection of which greater care should be taken than in the important one of footwear for the entire family. Nothing adds more to the comfort, health and appearance of everyone than well-made, stylish shoes that fit, for unless the feet are properly shod comfort is out of the question and life loses much of its zest. This being true the merchant who supplies the family with its footwear should know his business in every detail for the comfort of his customers are, to an extent, in his keeping. For over twenty-five years Mr. M. C. Van Arsdale has been supplying the people of Plainfield with shoes with the exception of four years when he lived in Connecticut. Many of his original customers are still buying their shoes from him, the best of evidence that the goods he handles give satisfaction and are as represented. Nothing brings out the quality of footwear like time. When shoes are first worn they look very much alike, the good and the worthless can hardly be told apart, except by the expert, it requires wear to tell the tale and it stands to reason that Mr. Van Arsdale could not sell the same customers season after season, unless the character of his goods warranted their custom, for competition in the shoe business is more than usually keen. The Van Arsdale shoe store, located at 127 East Front street, in the centre of the shopping district is one of the most attractive in Plainfield and would be a credit to any city many times the size of this. An immense stock of shoes for every member of the family, from grandparents to the latest baby, is kept on hand and the store is handsomely fitted up with an eye solely to the comfort and convenience of its patrons. The front portion is devoted exclusively to ladies' and children's shoes, while the men's department is in the rear. A specialty is made of the celebrated "Dorthy Dodd," and the Armstrong shoes for ladies, and in men's shoes, Stacey, Adams & Co., Heywood Boot & Shoe Co., Slater-Morrill (Inc.) Most of the goods handled by Mr. Van Arsdale are made expressly for his trade by some of the leading manufacturers of the country and are stamped with his name, a guarantee that means something, for unless a shoe is precisely as it is represented to be this store is always ready to make good. A few years ago the store was completely renovated and an addition of 24 feet added, over which the office and wrapping department was placed. The establishment is equipped with the Lamson delivery system, and modern methods prevail throughout. Every box of shoes in the store is numbered, and as soon as a sale is made its place is taken by a duplicate from the reserve stock in the basement, so that the stock in the store from which selections are made is always up to the mark and to the high standard Mr. Van Arsdale has set for himself. The business was founded under the name of Doane & Van Arsdale, about 26 years ago and Mr. Van Arsdale has been the owner about 16 years, Mr. Doane retiring. He has been in the shoe business all his life and there is no detail of it with which he is unfamiliar. Mr. Van Arsdale is a resident of North Plainfield, was for 10 years a member of the Council of the Borough, and is a director of the State Trust Co. He is one of the progressive and substantial business men of the city, always ready to do his full share for its growth and prosperity.

most successful. His is one of the most attractive stores in the city, always clean and sanitary, and nothing has been forgotten or neglected to make it a model. There are many larger stores but none where better goods can be found under more sanitary conditions or better service rendered. Besides always having on hand the freshest of beef, pork, lamb, mutton, Mr. Keenan is an extensive dealer in poultry and game, in season, and also carries a select delicatessen stock. His refrigerating facilities are of the best and everything perishable is kept under cover, where there is no danger of contamination. An excellent delivery service is maintained, covering the entire city and suburbs, and orders given personally or sent by telephone, 1909-W, will receive prompt attention. Mr. Keenan is a fine type of the young Plainfield business man, who is doing his part toward pushing the city to the front. For years the leading dealer here has been Mr. Stonewall Jackson, whose well appointed sales stables are located at 297 Somerset street. This is not a stock raising country, to any considerable extent, and by far the larger number of horses are shipped here from the West and South in carload lots. For 30 years Mr. Jackson has followed the business most successfully, and has built up a large and constantly increasing trade by his industry and straightforward dealing. The fact that he holds his old customers and is constantly adding others speaks louder than words of his reliability. He is an acknowledged authority on horses and mules, and his guarantee means exactly what it says. Mr. Jackson has traveled extensively, purchasing stock in the Virginias and Maryland as well as in the West, and has connections with the best breeders, enables him to always have on hand some choice stock. KENNARD IRON WORKS.

STRUCTURAL AND ORNAMENTAL IRON WORK.

Iron is the most useful of all metals and never before in the history of the world has it been in such general demand. Not only from the standpoint of utility is this fact recognized, but the same thing may be said from an artistic viewpoint, for the ornamental iron work being made today is far superior to that cast and forged in the past. Some of the finest work in the country that is being done in this line of endeavor is turned out right here in Plainfield, at the Kennard Iron Works, of which Mr. Edward T. Kennard is the proprietor and which are conducted under his immediate and personal supervision. This is one of the live industries of the city and the products of the foundry stand in the very front rank. Not only do the works turn out all kinds of structural and ornamental iron work, but a large staff of skilled workmen are in its employ who are prepared to promptly install the product. About 20 men are employed all the year round. The Kennard Iron Works are located at 150 East Fourth street and occupy a space 90x200 feet, not including the yards. The equipment is up-to-date in every particular and since Mr. Kennard bought the plant from the W. T. Kirk Co., about a year ago, he has made many improvements. Under his energetic management the business has grown rapidly and the future of this, one of Plainfield's leading industries, is bright with promise. Any one contemplating the installation of structural or ornamental iron work could make no mistake in asking the Kennard Iron Works for estimates, which will be cheerfully and promptly furnished. A specialty is made of artistic designs made after plans furnished by the company's own designers or by others. The proprietor of the growing industry, Mr. Edward T. Kennard, has only been a resident of the city a comparatively short time, but during the year he has lived here has made a host of friends. He is a public spirited and progressive citizen of the type that is placing Plainfield where she belongs—among the industrial cities of New Jersey.

PETER DELGYER.

HIGH-GRADE WATCHES AND JEWELRY.

Few places are so interesting and attractive as a modern jewelry store, conducted along up-to-date lines by a merchant who thoroughly understands his business. Jewelry possesses to most people more than an intrinsic value, most of it is given as a present and has memories, and there are few people who do not have a ring, watch or ornament of some kind that is of more value to them than its worth in dollars and cents. This is one reason why people, when they buy jewelry want to go to the most reliable merchants, one whom they can trust implicitly not to misrepresent, and the fact that Peter Delgyer has built up such a large trade in the comparatively short space of four years, speaks volumes for the record he has made for himself. Mr. Delgyer's establishment is located at 130 Park avenue, near Front street, and his stock of diamonds and other precious stones, watches, rings, brooches and other jewelry, clocks, silverware, cut glass and bric-a-brac is one of the largest and most complete in the city. There is absolutely nothing in his line that Mr. Delgyer cannot supply and every article that leaves his store carries with it his personal guarantee. The optical department, located in the rear of the store, is equipped with every modern appliance for the thorough examination of the eye, and the stock of lenses and frames carried is complete in every particular. A specialty is made of repairing high-grade watches and jewelry, resetting stones and engraving. Mr. Delgyer is a native of Holland, the home of the world's greatest lapidaries, and his knowledge of stones has been gained under some of the greatest experts. He learned his trade in Holland, coming to this country nine years ago, after spending some years in Germany and Switzerland. Mr. Delgyer purchased the business he now owns from Marcus Silbert four years ago, has made many improvements and contemplates making others, one of the most important being the removal of the repair department to the second floor so as to make more room. He has made many friends in Plainfield and has been most successful.

BROWN & GILLESPIE.

GRANITE AND MARBLE WORKS.

Workers in stone, marble and granite are among the most indispensable and skillful of the many and varied craftsmen who go toward forming the population of a progressive and growing city like Plainfield. They must be men of intelligence, for it requires more than average ability to take a rough block of material just from the quarry and, with mallet and chisel, fashion it into a beautiful monument, an artistic corner, or panel, that will last through the ages. Machinery has to a great extent taken the place of the hand-worker, but the best cutters must still know how to use their tools to do a great deal of the work required. Among the industries of Plainfield that richly deserves a place in this edition, is the Brown & Gillespie Granite Works, located at the corner of Fourth and Richmond streets, on the Main Line trolley cars. The business is an old one, having for over 22 years been conducted under the name of Townsend's Granite Works, by Mr. J. E. Townsend, who sold it last year to the present proprietors. The plant fronts on Richmond street about 75 feet and extends along Fourth street about 50 feet. A fine stock of monuments is kept on hand constantly for immediate use and the firm has the best of facilities for making any kind of monument desired, after their own or designs furnished by customers. The plant is equipped with the latest improved machinery, compressed air being used, and only the most skillful and capable workmen are employed, and the best material used. Besides monuments, the concern does all kinds of ornamental work and trimmings for buildings, both of the partners having had long experience in this character of work. Among the buildings Mr. Brown has worked on are the Congressional Library at Washington and the New York Custom House, two of the finest structures in America. Mr. Gillespie was foreman of the Municipal Building in New York and also worked in the library building with Mr. Brown. Both are thoroughly practical men and give their personal attention to all work entrusted to them. The firm is composed of J. J. Brown and Joseph Gillespie, both of whom are from Brooklyn, and although they only succeeded to the business in last December, have, since making their home here, thoroughly identified themselves with the business life of the city.

PLAINFIELD AUTO TIRE CO.

EVERYTHING FOR THE MOTORIST—WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

Plainfield and the surrounding country has probably as large a percentage of automobilists as any city in the country. Fine streets and roads, a beautiful country, and its proximity to New York all go toward making it an ideal automobile country, and as a consequence the city itself has become headquarters for the automobilists of this section. A large percentage of machine owners buy their supplies from the Plainfield Auto Tire Company, wholesale and retail dealers in everything for the motorist at 407 Watchung avenue. Although this concern was only established about six years ago it has from the first been a leader. With it dealing in auto supplies is not a side line, to be looked after in a perfunctory way, but an exclusive business, for nothing else is handled. What is worth doing at all is worth doing well, and this company's establishment is certainly the last word in auto supply houses. While it does not deal in or repair machines, it does look after accessories in a way that would be impossible for any concern to do that did not make a specialty of the business. Its stock of tires of all makes, including the "Firestone" and "Century," the latter a home product, is especially large and varied, and attached to the establishment is one of the best and most up-to-date vulcanizing plants in the country, in charge of expert and experienced vulcanizers. The company also deals in automobile paints and enamels. Starting with a modest business six years ago its trade has grown rapidly and about two years ago a branch establishment was started in Easton, Pa., under the firm name of Way Brothers, which is also doing a splendid business. Mr. E. J. Way is the managing proprietor here, and resides in this city, while his brother Mr. F. L. Way looks after the Easton interests.

STORE OF THE PLAINFIELD AUTO TIRE CO.

THE A. M. GRIFFEN CO.

HARDWARE AND HOUSE FURNISHINGS.

When an enterprise has been successfully conducted for nearly thirty-five years, all the time adding new patrons, while retaining its old customers, no better proof is needed that its methods have been of the best and its dealings always straightforward and satisfactory. Time gives a business a prestige that it can get in no other way, but to be successful it must keep fully in touch with the spirit of modern merchandising. This is particularly true of the hardware and house furnishing goods business, for in no field of endeavor has a greater advance been made. The leading concern, as well as the oldest and largest, engaged in this line in Plainfield and this part of New Jersey, is the A. M. Griffen Co., 119, 121 and 123 East Front street, of which Mr. A. M. Griffen is the president. This company not only handles all kinds of hardware and house furnishings, but is also a large dealer in agricultural implements, seeds, fertilizers, and all kinds of garden supplies. It is one of the largest dealers in ready-mixed paints, oils, varnishes and painters' supplies, and in addition has a plumbing, heating and tinning department that has for years done an immense business, having as its patrons some of the leading property owners, builders and contractors of this section. The various departments of the A. M. Griffen Co. occupy one of the largest stores in the city, at 119, 121 and 123 East Front street. Extending along the main thoroughfare of the city, in the centre of the business section, 40 feet, the building runs back 145 feet and the entire three floors and basement are occupied by one of the largest stocks ever assembled in Plainfield. It fills over 20,000 feet of floor space, every available foot being used, but the goods are so conveniently arranged that they can readily be inspected

Probably in no other line of endeavor has a greater advance been made during the last decade than in the retail grocery business. The modern grocery and produce store, bright, well ventilated and sanitary, is in striking contrast with those of a few years ago, when more than superficial attempt at cleanliness was the exception, rather than the rule, and but little effort was made to regard the most primary rules of sanitation. There were, of course, exceptions, but they were few and among them was the establishment of Neuman Brothers, which has since it was founded, 24 years ago, been one of the leading commercial institutions of Plainfield. From the time it was first started a high standard has been maintained, and as an example of what a thoroughly modern grocery should be the establishment, into which the firm recently moved, at 500 and 502 Watchung avenue, is one of the best illustrations that could be found anywhere. For twenty-two years Neuman Brothers conducted business directly across the avenue, and by their fair and straightforward business, built up an immense trade. Larger quarters were demanded, and the present building occupied by the firm was completely renovated, the interior being practically rebuilt It fronts on Watchung avenue about 50 feet, extending back about 100, and together with the basement contains approximately 10,000 feet of floor space. The front on both the avenue and Fifth street is almost entirely of plate glass, there is an entrance on both thoroughfares and nothing has been neglected that would go towards making this a model grocery and produce store in the minutest particular. Spotlessly clean, well ventilated and lighted, stocked with the best that the manufacturer, dairyman and farmer has to offer it would be difficult to suggest any improvements, for the establishment is the result of years of practical experience. Neuman Brothers do an immense business, which is by no means confined to Plainfield, but extends throughout the surrounding country. It has customers from New Brunswick, Westfield, Long Hills, Dunellen, Bernardsville, Scotch Plains and other cities and towns within a radius of many miles. This fact speaks volumes for the enterprise, and standing of this firm, especially when the unusually keen competition in the grocery trade is taken into consideration. The delivery service of Neuman Brothers consisting of thirteen modern delivery wagons is splendidly organized, and promptness and accuracy has always been one of its strongest characteristics. The firm is composed of Messrs. Peter and Adam Neuman, both of whom are natives of the beautiful and historic Washington Valley across the Watchung Mountains. Mr. Peter Neuman, as a young man lived in Newark for seven years, where he was employed by the firm of Estelle & Taylor for seven years. Upon his suggestion a branch store was opened in Plainfield, October, 1888, 25 years ago, and he became junior partner, the firm name being Estelle, Taylor & Neuman. Two years later he and his brother, Mr. Adam Neuman bought out the interest of the other members, and have since successfully conducted the business, giving the people of Plainfield a pure food store of the highest class. Both gentlemen are noted as progressive citizens, ever ready to help along its interests and welfare of Plainfield.

Every department is complete, nothing has been neglected and the great business is conducted along the most modern and progressive lines. The enterprise was founded on a modest scale by Curtis & Griffen in 1879, and was conducted by them until 1884, when Mr. Griffen bought out the interests of his partner. He successfully carried on the business for some years, when it was incorporated under the laws of the State of New Jersey, Mr. Griffen being made president and manager. He is one of the substantial citizens of the community, and is always ready to do everything in his power for its advancement.

HAND STORAGE AND EXPRESS COMPANY.

PUBLIC TRUCKMEN AND APPRAISERS.

One of the pioneer enterprises of Plainfield, as well as one of its largest and most successful, is the business carried on by the Hand Storage and Express Co., at 63, 65, 67 and 69 Somerset street. This is one of the institutions of Plainfield and has probably, at some time, served every business house and family in this city and the surrounding towns. There is an unusually large demand for express service in this section where the towns are in such close proximity and the Hand Storage and Express Co. supplies the demand most admirably with its thoroughly up-to-date equipment. There is nothing too heavy or too light for it to haul, if it is haulable, and recently one of its teams took a load weighing 18 tons through the streets of Plainfield. Ten horses were required to haul the load which was the largest ever handled in Plainfield. Its express business is by far the largest in the city, the company having in commission 25 wagons of different kinds, and one of the largest in New Jersey. Like most big enterprises it was started modestly and has built up its success upon the firm foundation of good service. The management always has the best teams, the most capable drivers and assistants, and its charges are reasonable. The stables in the rear of the storage warehouse are models of cleanliness and sanitation and are supplied with every comfort and convenience. The concern owns only the finest stock and it takes care of them in a way befitting their value. The floors are of concrete, the stalls are large and roomy and the ventilation is perfect. The stables were erected about three years ago and have accommodations for 20 horses and a large number of vehicles. The storage warehouse of the company fronts on Somerset street 180 feet, extending the rear 300 feet, is of brick and three stories in height. This immense structure is used for the storage of furniture and non-perishable goods of every description. It contains 250 rooms of various sizes so that the property of patrons is kept entirely separate and distinct. Every precaution is taken against fire and a faithful and alert watchman is always on duty. Most of the goods stored consists of furniture and household goods and in this connection it may be well to mention that the Hand Storage & Express Co. are the owners of the largest and most modern furniture moving vans in this section. The finest furniture may be entrusted to their care with the greatest confidence, and the company numbers among its patrons some of the most particular and discriminating property owners of this section, who will entrust their goods to no other concern. Taken as a whole this is one of the most complete storage warehouses in the country. As has been said, like all big enterprises the Hand Storage and Express Co. had a modest beginning and made its way step by step. It was started on a small scale by Capt. William Hand, in 1859, on Mechanic street, since renamed Madison avenue. When the War Between the States broke out two years later Capt. Hand responded to the call to arms, fought throughout the war and after the surrender of Lee returned to his home in Plainfield and began his interrupted business life. He again started his express company, worked with untiring industry and the business grew rapidly. It was removed to larger quarters on Second street and seven years ago the present structure was occupied and the business which had at first been carried on under the name of William Hand, and then Wm. Hand & Son, was incorporated. The officers of the company are Frederick W. Hand, president; C. Frank French, secretary and treasurer, who together with William C. Smith, constitute the Board of Directors. Mr. Fred Hand is a son of the founder of the business and devotes his entire time to its up-building. He is a chip of the old block and one of Plainfield's most energetic business men. Mr. French is also one of the city's substantial citizens and is treasurer of the Crystal Ice Co. Mr. Smith is a leading contractor and builder. Although having the prestige of long years of service, the company is thoroughly modern in its methods and its service is unsurpassed.

PLANT OF THE CRYSTAL ICE CO.

CRYSTAL ICE CO.

B. FRANK CORRELL, PRESIDENT AND GENERAL MANAGER.

Pure ice is just as essential to health as pure food, and this fact is beginning to be recognized by those who are giving the subject of right living the consideration that it deserves. The old idea that the mere freezing of water eradicates all impurities it may contain has long since been dispatched, for chemists tell us that contaminated water will make contaminated ice, and freezing does not change its constituents to any appreciable extent. So the purchaser of ice should give the same attention to his supply as he does to anything else that might affect his health, and that of his family. There could not possibly be made purer ice than that made at the plant of the Crystal Ice Co., for every possible precaution is taken to prevent contamination from the beginning of its manufacture until it is completed. In the first place the water is pure when it comes from the company's own artesian well on the premises. It has not been brought for miles through pipes, the inside of which have not seen the light of day for probably years, but comes fresh from Mother Earth, clear and sparkling. Chemical analysis has shown its absolute purity, but the management of the Crystal Ice Co. decided to make assurance doubly sure and when they installed the Wolf-Linde compression ice-making machine, they also installed a double distilling machine with it and all water goes through this process before being converted into ice. Then again the surroundings of the plant are the most sanitary. The building, which is located at Arlington avenue and Third street, is of concrete, the cleanest material that can be used, and it is kept as neat as a new pin. It fronts 100 feet on the avenue and extends back an equal distance, providing a floor space of 10,000 square feet. The plant has a capacity of 50 tons a day and this is sold wholesale to dealers and large consumers. The company does not sell at retail. What is not sold here is shipped to Jersey City, Newark, Elizabeth, New Brunswick and smaller towns in this vicinity where there is always a demand for the pure hygienic ice made at this modern factory. The Crystal Ice Co. was incorporated in July, 1909, and the officers are B. Frank Correll, a well-known real estate man of this city, and a director in the First National Bank, president and general manager; C. Frank French, an officer of the Hand Storage Co., treasurer, and John E. Dunn, formerly with the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Co., but now a wholesale lumber dealer in New York, secretary. They are substantial and progressive citizens who have for years taken an active part in the development of Plainfield.

JACK HORNER.

BICYCLES, MOTOR CYCLES.

There is no city in the country better adapted to the use of the bicycle and motorcycle than Plainfield, and nowhere are these machines in more general use, both for business and pleasure. The wheel may have lost its vogue in other places but not here, and is steadily advancing. The splendidly paved streets of the city and the fine roads that intersect the section in every direction are a great factor in making wheeling popular, and also the fact that located here is one of the largest and best bicycle and motorcycle dealers and repairers in New Jersey. The establishment of Jack Horner, 33 Somerset street, is one of the most complete enterprises of this kind in the country. Fronting 30 feet on Somerset street, the building extends back a distance of 150 feet, and that part occupied by him contains a floor space of nearly 5,000 square feet. The attractive salesrooms occupy the front part of the store and here is assembled the largest stock of bicycles, motorcycles and accessories to be found in this section. All of the leading standard makes are kept in stock and the latest models are received as soon as they are placed on the market. A specialty is made of "Indian," "Harley-Davidson," "Pope motorcycle and Pierce, Columbia and Hartford bicycles, but any machine made can be obtained at Horner's, and he always has on hand bargains in second-hand wheels. There is absolutely nothing in the latest and best accessories and parts that cannot be obtained from him and his place has long been headquarters for the leading bicyclists and motorcyclists of this city and section, as well as for the many tourists passing through Plainfield. The line of tires carried is particularly large and complete. In the rear of the building is the splendidly equipped repair shop, where the latest improved machinery is installed, and any job, no matter how difficult, can be done promptly and by the most experienced mechanics, who have given special attention to machine work for years. Mr. Horner is himself a thoroughly practical man and gives his entire attention to all work entrusted to his care, and every job done carries with it his personal guarantee of high-class workmanship. He established the business on a modest scale five years ago across the street from the present plant, and on the site of the Ford Automobile Garage. It grew rapidly, and more room was soon required, so that three years ago the building at 33 Somerset street was leased and "The Big Store" has since been one of the best known institutions of Plainfield. Mr. Horner came here about seven years ago from New York city, and has since that time been actively identified with the business life of the city.

CONFECTIONERY AND ICE CREAM STORE OF DEBELE & STAHL.

DEBELE & STAHL.

ICE CREAM AND CONFECTIONERY.

Pure candy and ice cream are among the most delicious, and at the same time nutritious of foods, but the materials from which they are made must be of the purest and freshest. Few articles are more easily adulterated and despite the pure food laws this is still done by unprincipled manufacturers. The only way to avoid this imposition is to buy from home manufacturers, from men of established reputations, reputations made by years of fair and straightforward dealing. Such is the firm of Debele & Stahl, manufacturers and dealers in ice cream and candies at 111-113 Somerset street. For twenty-two years this firm has been supplying the people of Plainfield and this vicinity with pure goods, it has all the prestige that time alone can give, while at the same time it conducts business along the most modern lines. Its candy and ice cream factory is thoroughly clean and sanitary, there is not a chance of contamination and it numbers among its customers some of the most particular and discriminating people of the city and suburbs who have learned by long experience that Debele & Stahl deal in nothing but the purest and best goods, made under their personal supervision. The firm also conducts a general confectionery store, handling all kinds of candies. The members are William G. Debele and Julius J. Stahl, two of the most prominent business men of North Plainfield, where both were born and have always lived. Mr. Debele at one time served as chief of the North Plainfield Fire Department and has also held the office of Overseer of the Poor. He is also connected with the Prudent Realty Co., and is interested in other enterprises. Mr. Stahl is now serving his second term as member of the Council from the Fourth district, and has made an excellent record as a law-maker. He was for 15 years a member of the volunteer fire department, and was chief at the time it was succeeded by the paid department. He is also a member of both the Plainfield and the North Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association and a life member of the New Jersey State Fireman's Relief Association. Since January 1, of the present year, Mr. Howard G. Debele, a promising young business man, has been a member of the firm, which is composed of public spirited and progressive citizens who are always ready to aid in any movement that has for its object the prosperity and growth of this section.

THE MOUNTAIN INN.

THE MOUNTAIN INN.

C. J. JENSEN, PROP.

There are few more valuable assets a city can possess than well conducted hotels. People judge a community, to a great extent, by the quality of its hostelries and the accommodations they receive, and it will always be noticed that the more progressive a town becomes the better they are. One of the best places for the accommodation of the public in North Plainfield, is the Mountain Inn, 225 and 227 Somerset street, of which Mr. C. J. Jensen, is the popular and enterprising proprietor. Located at the corner of Greenbrook road and Somerset street it is in the very centre of North Plainfield, and is directly on the trolley line, near the foot of Watchung Mountains, which are within a few moments walk. The house which has been a hotel for the past 40 years has 22 rooms, of which 15 are handsomely furnished bedrooms. Everything is kept as neat and as clean as could be, and anyone seeking board by the day or week, at reasonable terms, could make no mistake in becoming a guest of the Mountain Inn. The dining rooms are handsomely furnished, and the best of dinners can be served to parties. There is a well appointed pool room and a fine stock of cigars and tobacco is carried. Recently a number of improvements have been made on the building, and Mr. Jensen keeps fully abreast of the times in every way. He is a native of Denmark, but has lived in this country for many years, coming here in 1888; taking out his naturalization papers in 1893. He purchased the Mountain Inn in 1902, after having rented it four years, and has since conducted it successfully. Mr. Jensen is the manufacturer of C. J. Jensen's Liniment, for neuralgia, rheumatism, pneumonia, sore throat, coughs, colds and kindred complaints, one of the greatest remedies ever placed upon the market. It has great healing power and is used by some of the best known baseball players, prize fighters, boxers and athletes in the country. Progressive and public spirited Mr. Jensen has given the city one of its best hostelries, and he fully deserves the splendid patronage which has been accorded him, both by the people of Plainfield and the traveling public.

QUEEN CITY LAUNDRY.

K. I. FAUCETT, PROPRIETOR.

Modern steam laundries have been wonderful agencies in reducing the cares of the housewife, making the batchelor still more content with his lot and have minimized the danger of infection from clothing by doing their work amidst the cleanest and most sanitary surroundings. There is no one modern innovation that has done more for cleanliness, and consequently health, than has the steam laundry, and in the Queen City Laundry, the people of Plainfield and this section are fortunate in having one of the very best and latest type. The Queen City Laundry, of which Mr. K. I. Faucett is the energetic, enterprising and progressive proprietor, is located at 303 Filmore avenue, and has, within a comparatively short time, taken a leading place among the best laundries of New Jersey. The enterprise was established about five years ago, and for a time had a rather varied and uncertain existence, passing through several managements. Like every other business, however, experience is absolutely necessary to bring success, and this is more than usually true of the steam laundry. People do not care to have their clothing experimented on by learners and pay the bill besides, so when Mr. Faucett took charge of the plant, nearly two years ago, the patronage had dwindled into

PLAINFIELD'S LEADING DEPARTMENT STORE

HONEST GOODS HONEST PRICES

FIRST OPENED JULY 1907

109-111-113 WEST FRONT STREET

That the department store has become an established institution goes without saying, for every year it grows more and more popular with all classes of people and is continually widening its scope. It is the perfection of modern merchandising and, even in the smaller towns of the country, will be found establishments that would be a credit to much larger cities. In the department store, popularly known as Tepper's, Plainfield has an establishment of this kind, of which any city might justly be proud. Located in the centre of the shopping district, it is easily reached from any section, and has ever since it opened its doors, in July, 1907, held a leading place among the most enterprising establishments of the city. The building occupied by this enterprising concern is at Nos. 109, 111 and 113 West Front street, and extends along that thoroughfare 45 feet, running back 150 feet, terminating in an L, 20x45 feet, which gives it also an entrance on Park avenue. The basement and first and second floors are occupied by the firm of M. and A. Tepper, providing a floor space of about 20,000 square feet. This immense space accommodates one of the finest stocks of dry goods, millinery, ladies' and children's ready-to-wear garments, cloaks and furs, gentlemen's furnishing goods and notions, blankets, white goods, laces, embroideries and toys, ever brought together in this city. The store has become, by fair and straightforward dealing, and the fact that it sells the best and most reliable goods at reasonable prices, headquarters for a large percentage of the most discriminating buyers of Plainfield and vicinity. There are hundreds of articles to be found in these attractive stores at bargain prices that are never mentioned in their advertising and a visit to the establishment is a revelation to anyone who is not a regular patron. The goods are most attractively displayed, and, notwithstanding the size of the stock, are easily examined on account of the systematic manner in which they are stored. The fall and winter styles are to be found here just at this time in richest profusion and never before in the history of the store have the selections made by the firm appealed more strongly to its patrons. Every year sees a distinct advance at this store, it is thoroughly progressive and is continually adding to its departments. Particular attention should be called to the handsomely furnished millinery parlors on the second floor and the splendid display of the latest models that is being made. Although Tepper's is a splendid example of what the modern store should be, the business is one of the oldest in Plainfield, having been established over 35 years ago by I. H. Bohm. After its purchase by the present proprietors, extensive improvements were made and are continually being made. The first store established by Tepper Brothers, of whom there are five, was started in Selma, Ala., in 1893, and is the leading enterprise of that progressive Southern city. It is managed by Mr. B. F. Tepper. They are also largely interested in the exclusive Central Alabama Dry Goods Company, wholesale, located there. Their first venture outside was in Plainfield, which was a success from the start and is managed by Mr. Max and Jacob Tepper. Another was established in 1910 in New Brunswick, where Mr. J. Tepper resides, and the present year still another was established in Elmira New York, presided over by Mr. Adolph Tepper. They are among the most progressive merchants in the country and their success has been fairly won by straightforward dealing and the fact that their patrons get the full worth of their money.

WILLIAM JEFFERY

∴ Real Estate Operator ∴

JEFFERY BUILDING

134 Park Ave.

The Sherman Park Development and The Little Farms Co.

CHOICE PROPERTY OF ALL KINDS

This is becoming more and more an era of suburban development in municipal growth, and every year the trend toward the country and away from the shops, offices and factory, becomes more pronounced. Not only in the largest, but in cities of the size of Plainfield, is this perceptible, and the fact was long ago recognized by men whose business it is to make a study of real estate conditions. Plainfield, from almost a suburb itself, now has suburbs of its own and none of them is more popular than Sherman Park, the recent development of the Little Farms Company, less than one mile from Grant avenue Station. In both of these enterprises Mr. Wililam Jeffery, one of the leading real estate men of the city and president of the Board of Trade, has been, and is, taking a most active part, being an officer in the company. Since coming here from New York in 1900, to make his home and engage in business, Mr. Jeffery has been most successful and has built up a large clientile among property owners, investors and home-seekers. For a time after coming to Plainfield he conducted a general real estate business, but of late years has specialized, to a great extent, for he is a man of original ideas and would never be content to follow in the beaten path, being by nature a pioneer. His offices are in the Jeffery Building, 134 Park avenue, and anyone interested in Plainfield real estate, either as a home-seeker or investor, will find in him one of the best informed men on the subject in this section. But although a busy man with his private affairs, Mr. Jeffery has always found time to devote toward making Plainfield a bigger and better city along the most modern lines, and his work as president of the new Board of Trade has been what might be called strenuous. Naturally a man selected as the head of a progressive organization, like this has proved itself to be, would be one who has for years been identified with the interests of the city, has supreme confidence in its future and is willing to give of his time, energy and ability to its up-building. A man who is willing to make the necessary sacrifice required is difficult to find, in any community, and this is the reason why so many business organizations are practically useless. Plainfield has a live Board of Trade and this is so to a great extent because the man who is its president has a strong, virile personality, one who loves the work he is doing and communicates his enthusiasm to the other members. For a number of years he was in business in New York, but has lived here about 20 years. He belongs to that type of public spirited and progressive men who have confidence in the future growth and prosperity of Plainfield and are always ready to do there full share towards its advancement.

almost nothingness. Mr. Faucett had little capital, mighty little, as counted in dollars, but he had what was just as valuable—experience, industry and a determination to succeed that was bound to win out. He knew what good laundrying was, there was no detail of the work with which he was not familiar and he was not afraid to do it himself. For the first few months, with the help of Mrs. Faucett and a single assistant, all the work was done, and done well. Pleased customers are splendid advertisements and Mr. Faucett saw to it personally that eveyone of the few he had were pleased in every minute particular. He did his own soliciting, collected and delivered the washing to his customers, driving the single wagon he owned, and at night was at it until the small hours. It was hard, grueling work, but he kept at it and is still keeping the pace, giving his personal attention to the work, though he now has 30 employes, three wagons and an automobile delivery, modern machinery of the most improved pattern and a clientele of hundreds of pleased patrons, not only in Plainfield, but throughout this section. This has been accomplished in less than two years and illustrates what energy and hard work, properly directed, will do in Plainfield. The Queen City, formerly the "Ideal" and then the "Nonpareil" Laundry, has been almost entirely equipped with new appliances since Mr. Faucett came into possesion of the plant, but there is one department—one that did much for his success—that has been retained. This is the hand-ironing for shirts. There has never been a machine devised that can iron a shirt as well as it can be done by hand and many careful dressers will have nothing but hand-ironed shirts. All shirts are done by hand and that this kind of work is appreciated is shown by the fact that the number of shirts ironed at the Queen City Laundry has grown from 35 a week to 1,500. Promptness in delivery has also been a great factor in the growth of the laundry in popularity. A splendidly organized system covers the entire city, and there are branches at Westfield, Crawford, Bound Brook and Dunellan. Mr. Faucett is a native of Texas, where he was in business several years before coming North to live. He has been in the laundry business all his life, having at one time managed the John Wanamaker Laundry in New York and the Blue Ribbon and Linen Supply Laundry at Yonkers. Since he came here to live he has been actively identified with the business life of the city and is one of its most public spirited and progressive citizens.

THE QUEEN CITY LAUNDRY AND STAFF.

EDWARD A. LAING.

STATIONER, NEWSDEALER AND BOOKSELLER.

Plainfield has probably the largest book and stationery store in New Jersey and certainly one of the most attractive in the establishment of Edward A. Laing, 151-153 West Front street, in the centre of the business section of the city. Fronting 50 feet on the main thoroughfare it extends back 100 feet and including the basement, a floor space of 10,000 square feet is provided for the display and storage of the largest stock of stationery, books, office furniture and fixtures, sporting goods, games and similar articles ever assembled in Plainfield. Nothing has been neglected or forgotten that would go toward making this a complete establishment of its kind in every particular, and that Mr. Laing's efforts to give Plainfield a store of the very highest class are appreciated is shown by the generous patronage which he receives. The fact that the city can and does support an enterprise that would be a credit to any community no matter what its size, speaks louder than any written word could do for the culture of intelligence and refinement of the people of this community. Laing's is a fine example of what the really modern book store should be. Besides all the standard works in history, science, poetry and art, a full line of the latest publications is carried and the best sellers can always be found on his shelves. Particular attention is also given to society stationery and all kinds of engraving is done in the latest style. The commercial stationery and office fixture department is also a leading feature of this up-to-date store, and all the latest labor-saving office devices are carried. But it is needless to particularize, the establishment is simply a model one, and does an immense business, which extends throughout a radius of many miles of Plainfield. Like nearly all successful enterprises, the beginnings of Laing's Book Store were modest and its growth has been the result of industry, enterprise and straight-forward dealing. The business was started on a small scale nearly fourteen years ago, just across the street from where it is now located. There years ago larger quarters were demanded, and the business was removed to the present store, or at least a portion of it, for it is just double the size it was formerly, Mr. Laing having taken the building next door formerly occupied by J. A. Smith & Brother, when they moved last year. He threw the two stores into one and gave Plainfield an establishment that few, if any, of its sister cities of the same size can duplicate. Especial attention should be called to the daily newspaper delivery, covering the city and suburbs. Mr. Laing is a native of Plainfield, where he has always lived, his ancestors having been among the first settlers.

VAN NEST DOOR AND LUMBER COMPANY.

SASH, BLINDS, DOORS, MOULDINGS.

In a growing and progressive city like Plainfield the building interests are naturally of great importance and the manufacturer of sash, doors and blinds, mouldings, flooring, ceiling and other builders' supplies is one of the leading industries. Nothing else shows the growth of a city better than does the activity of its planing mills and dealers in builders' supplies and to judge from the busy scenes that are daily enacted about the mills of the Van Nest Door and Lumber Company, at 218-220 East Fourth street, the building industry is in a flourishing condition. This is one of the most flourishing enterprises of Plainfield and one that is growing rapidly, conducted as it is by men of long experience and plenty of energy. Although it has only been in operation about five years a trade has already been built up, in the face of keen competition, that places the company in the front rank. The plant is a model one of the kind, equipped with the very latest improved machinery for manufacturing sash, doors and blinds, mouldings, flooring and all kinds of trimmings. A specialty is made of making special work, and all kinds of odd sizes. The plant, built of cement blocks manufactured on the ground by Mr. Van Nest, is a handsome two-story structure fronting 60 feet on Fourth street and extending back 100 feet, the yard going further back to the residence of the company's president, Mr. L. C. Van Nest, and is two stories high, containing 12,000 feet of floor space. A large trade has been built up by strict attention to business and the manufacture of the best supplies in its line. The product of the company is also sold in New York, Newark, New Milton, the Oranges and other places, though the demands made upon the mill by local builders consumes nearly the entire output. The company is also a large dealer in lumber and timber and all kinds of glass. Mr. L. C. Van Nest, the founder of the concern, and its president, conducted the business for nearly four years on his own account. About a year ago he decided to incorporate under the name of the Van Nest Door and Lumber Company, Mr. E. A. Van Nest being made vice-president, and L. R. Van Nest, a son of the founder, secretary and treasurer. The president is a thoroughly practical man of long experience and for 16 years was connected with Richard H. McCullough in the same business in North Plainfield. He is a native of Bound Brook, but has lived here for 45 years and has long been identified with the business life of the city. His son, the secretary and treasurer, has been with him a number of years. They are among the progressive citizens of Plainfield and are doing their full share towards its growth and progress.

More serious attention has been given to sanitary plumbing and heating during the last decade than ever before in the history of the trade, and an immense advance has been made all along the line. People realize that not only their own health but that of the entire community in which they live depends to a great extent upon sanitation, and hardly a day passes but what some improvement is made. The successful plumber, to keep up with the times, must be a man of intelligence and ability, equipped to work with his brains as well as his hands, for he must adapt himself to the constant changes that are being made; a man able to cast aside old methods when something better is to be had, and not cling to them simply because they have been in use for years. One of the oldest and most progressive concerns in Plainfield is that of Voehl & Waldron, whose office, shop and

JOSEPH HARRIGAN

DEALER IN

Coal, Wood, Hay, Grain and Feed

"The Best and Only the Best"

929 SOUTH AVE., NETHERWOOD

40 SOMERSET STREET

Among the more recent additions to the business establishments of Plainfield is a branch coal, wood, hay, feed and grain store, opened by Mr. Joseph Harrigan, who conducts one of the largest enterprises dealing in these commodities in this section, at 929 South avenue, Netherwood. Although his yards are located in that flourishing little suburb most of the trade of the firm is, of course, in this city and so rapidly has the business increased that Mr. Harrigan decided to open a branch at 40 Somerset street, which is in charge of his son, Richard J. Harrigan, an energetic young business man, who has been associated with his father at the main office and yards since entering active business life. The yards at Netherwood are the largest in area in this section, fronting 200 feet on South avenue and extending along the railroad tracks 450 feet. An immense stock of coal, wood, grain, hay and feed is carried. At the Somerset street store only hay, feed and grain is kept in stock, but orders for coal and wood are promptly supplied from the Netherwood yards. Mr. Harrigan began business about 11 years ago on Cottage Place, near Richmond street, where he remained for about a year. The business in this time outgrew these quarters and six years ago the Netherwood property was purchased and Mr. Harrigan has recently installed an absolutely fire-proof iron and concrete trestle at these yards. Since then the trade has continued to grow rapidly and now extends throughout this section. Mr. Harrigan is a native of Albany, N. Y., where his father was engaged in the grain business, with which he was also connected. He afterwards removed to New York where he was with the firm of W. & J. Sloan, before coming to Netherwood, eleven years ago to go into his present business. Since then Mr. Harrigan has been actively identified with the business life of this section. He is a public spirited and progressive citizen, who is always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to any cause that is for the welfare of old Plainfield and this section, in the future growth and prosperity of which he has the greatest confidence.

ZEEK BAKING CO.

MANUFACTURERS OF AND DEALERS IN

PURE AND SANITARY BAKE SHOP PRODUCTS

Main Office and Factory: 629 SOUTH AVENUE

Good, wholesome bread is one of the most delicious, as well as nutritious of foods, while the reverse can be said of bread improperly cooked, for nothing is more indigestible. The same rule applies to cakes, pastry and all sorts of sweets, and the public is rapidly awakening to the fact that these most necessary articles of food can be far better prepared at a high-class, modern bakery, such as that conducted by the Zeek Baking Company, of Plainfield, by men who have made baking the study of their lives, than they can be at home by cooks who have no especial qualifications as bread and pastry makers, but have to give equal attention to everything prepared for the table. It is but reasonable to accept this as a fact, to prove it requires no argument, and the best way to find out its truth is to compare the products of the Zeek Baking Co. with those of your own kitchen. Then the fact that the preparation of these products is thoroughly sanitary, all the work being done by machinery, weighs heavily in favor of the bakery. The store and pastry bakery of the Zeek Baking Co. is located at 170 East Front street, while the bread bakery is at 629 South avenue. Both of these establishments are thoroughly modern in every particular, the equipment is of the latest design and the machinery is all new. At the bread bakery on South street, which is 60x80 feet, two stories high and contains nearly 10,000 square feet of floor space, two of the most improved ovens have been installed one a "Peterson" and the other a "Werner & Pfleiderer" double deck, draw plate ovens, with a daily capacity of 25,000 loaves of bread. There are no finer ovens manufactured and these are of the latest pattern. Everything at this plant is under the personal direction of Messrs. Ernest and Denton L. Zeek, two of the three brothers comprising the company, while the third brother, Mr. Lewis D. Zeek, spends most of his time at the up-town store and bakery. This is one of the most attractive establishments in Plainfield, and there is always on display a splendid stock of all varieties of bread, rolls, biscuits, cakes and pastry. The company has exceptional facilities for baking wedding, birthday and other special cakes and pastry and this department of the business is much patronized by the society people of this city and section. The company also makes two special brands of bread, "Foremost" and "Kleen Maid," which are the last word in break-making, and for which there is a large and constantly increasing demand. This and its other products is delivered fresh from the ovens, throughout Plainfield and its environs. The delivery system has been organized with the greatest care and attention to detail. It consists of seven modern wagons, built expressly for the purpose and a motor car for delivering special orders and to supply the trade. The growth of this concern has been remarkably rapid and furnishes the best evidence that the people of the city appreciate the efforts of the Zeek Baking Co. in giving them a really high-class bakery. The company only began business on January 23, of the present year at 174 East Front street, but these quarters were soon outgrown, and on July 1, the store and pastry bakery were removed to the present commodious building, which occupies a space 25x90 feet. Within eight months it has built up a trade upon the merits of its product that requires seven wagons and a motor car to handle, and this is soon to be increased. The company is incorporated under the laws of the State of New Jersey, the officers being Ernest Zeek, president; Denton L. Zeek, treasurer, and Lewis D. Zeek, secretary. All the brothers are thoroughly practical bakers, having learned their trade with the S. Cushman's Sons, of New York, where they worked from periods ranging from 9 to 17 years. Since coming here they have been actively identified with the business life of the city, and have proved themselves public spirited and progressive citizens ever ready to do all in their power for the growth and prosperity of Plainfield.

FRANK NEIDIG.

LINCOLN MARKET — CHOICE MEATS, POULTRY, CANNED GOODS, GAME, SEA FOOD AND FULL LINE OF DELICATESSEN.

One of the first things that attracts the attention of the visitor to Plainfield is the number of modernly equipped establishments devoted to the sale of choice meats, poultry, game, sea food, canned goods and vetgetables. Few cities of the size of this has so many and it speaks well for the people of the community that they are so generously supported. Among the leading stores, and one that is patronized by the most particular and discriminating housewives, not only of Plainfield and North Plainfield, but of this entire section, is the Lincoln Market, of which Mr. Frank Neidig is the enterprising and popular proprietor. Located at 94 Somerset street, it is conveniently reached from every part of both cities, and as an example of what a modern, sanitary market of the best type should be, no better could be found anywhere. There are others larger, but in none can be found a fresher, purer, better stock of meats, poultry, game, sea food and produce than is always kept on hand at the establishment of Mr. Neidig. Cleanliness is one of the first impressions one receives upon entering Lincoln Market. It is insisted upon by Mr. Neidig and it would indeed be difficult to discover how his plant could be made more sanitary than it is. The establishment is equipped with the latest improved refrigerators, the danger of contamination is reduced to a minimum, and nothing has been neglected that would go toward making Lincoln Market high class in every particular. At the same time Mr. Neidig has practically demonstrated the fact that the best can be sold at reasonable prices. His place is outside the high-rent district. His expenses are consequently lower than many competitors. But the entire city is thoroughly covered by an excellently organized delivery system and orders by phone receive the same careful attention that is given those delivered in person. Mr. Neidig was born in Brooklyn, of German parentage, and before coming to Plainfield in 1903, was successfully in business in New York city for about five years. His enterprise here was started on a comparatively modest scale about 10 years ago, but its growth has been steady and substantial until he now has one of the most modern and popular establishments in the community. Mr. Neidig is a public spirited and progressive citizen, who is always willing to lend a helping hand to any cause that is for the welfare of old Plainfield.

THE BOROUGH GARAGE.

RICHARD L. BELLIS, PROP.

Plainfield is an ideal home for the automobilist with its level, splendidly paved streets and the excellent roads, entering it from every direction and probably there are as many machines owned in this city and section in proportion to its population than as can be found in any place in the country. This condition has resulted in the establishment of a large number of garages and repair shops and none of them has proven more popular, and consequently more successful, than has the Borough Garage, of which Mr. Richard L. Bellis is the proprietor. The Borough Garage is located at the corner of Watchung avenue and Race street, on one of the most frequented automobile drives in this part of New Jersey and is equipped with all the latest appliances for doing the most difficult motor work promptly and at reasonable prices. Although it was established only about four years ago, it has long been headquarters for a large number of the most discriminating and particular machine owners in this section, who have learned by experience to expect and get the highest grade of work. Mr. Bellis is a thoroughly practical man and gives his personal and particular attention to all work entrusted to his care. He is an expert in his line, has made an intelligent study of the automobile and keeps fully abreast of the times. Success has come to him early, but he has won it fairly by industry, ability and straightforward dealing. The Borough Garage fronts on Watchung avenue 30 feet and extends back 50 feet, providing ample room. There is an excellently stocked accessory department, all the latest improved automobile requisites being kept on hand. Mr. Bellis at present devotes himself entirely to repairs, storage and dealing in accessories but at an early date will handle one or more of the standard makes of machines. Being energetic and progressive, he is a fine type of the hustling business man of Plainfield, who is pushing the city to the front.

PARQUET AND HARDWOOD FLOORING.

Parquet and hardwood flooring are among the most beautiful of interior decorations and never before has this class of work been more popular than it is at the present time among owners of attractive homes. Every year the designs become more artistic, some of the best designers in the country devoting themselves exclusively to this line of endeavor. The demand does not come entirely from the owners of unusually fine houses, as was once the case, but from all sources, and some of the most modest and unpretentious cottages and bungalows in this section contain fine examples of parqueting. Since he started in business, five years ago, Mr. George E. Watt, whose establishment is located at 150 North avenue, has built up a large clientele among the most discriminating and particular property owners, builders and contractors of this city and section. He is an expert, and gives his personal attention to all work entrusted to his care, with the result that his patrons can be assured that they get nothing but the best. Some fine examples of the class of work he does can be seen in the handsome homes of former Mayor Charles J. Fish, on West Seventh street; Mr. Judd Stewart, 57 Willow avenue; P. Aklatvata, on Leland avenue; Judge Coddington, on Mountain avenue, and Mrs. Walter Scott, 418 East Front street. He also did the floors in the Marsh Building, and other structures in the business section. Mr. Watt does not confine himself to Plainfield and this vicinity, but goes throughout this and adjoining States. He is a native of Newark, where he resides, coming to Plainfield every morning; but his business interests are here and he is always ready to do his share toward aiding in any movement that is for the growth and prosperity of the city.

EXTENSIVE GROCERY OF J. A. SMITH & BRO.

J. A. SMITH & BRO.

Plainfield's Oldest, Largest and Leading Grocers

ESTABLISHED 1836 301-303-305 WEST FRONT STREET

There is no class of establishment among the many that goes toward making up the business life of a city that has a stronger appeal to lovers of good things to eat as the thoroughly modern grocery, produce and fruit store conducted along the best lines. As an example of what such a store should be, no better illustration could be found than the establishment of J. A. Smith and Brother, the largest and oldest as well as the most modern grocery in Plainfield. This store would be a credit to any city, no matter what its size, and that the enterprise of its proprietors is appreciated is best shown by the immense patronage bestowed upon them by the most discriminating people of this city and section. In completeness it ranks with the best up-town stores in New York, catering to the best class of trade and the methods of these stores were carefully studied, before the firm moved into the new building at 301 to 305 W. Front street last March. This building is one of the largest and most attractive in the city, it is modern in all its appointments and the first impression one receives upon entering the salesrooms is that of cleanliness and freshness. The store stands at the corner of Front street and Madison avenue, and both sides of the main floor are of plate glass, letting in a flood of light that reaches every corner and provides a splendid opportunity for the display of fine fruits and produce for which this firm has always been noted. The main floor, 50x110 feet, contains over 5,600 feet of floor space, the basement as much more and the arrangements for handling goods are perfect, a mistake in delivery being practically impossible. The delivery system has been given the same particular attention that has always been characteristic of the firm and nine modern delivery wagons cover this entire section. It is this strict attention to the smallest detail that has had much to do with the success of the concern, for it is above all things dependable. Every modern improvement has been installed, including the best refrigerators obtainable and nothing has been forgotten or left undone to make this a model store in the minutest particular. The large, airy, well-ventilated basement, connected with the main floor by an elevator, is used for the stock room and the butter and cheese refrigerators. Vegetables are also kept here, the temperature being always cool. Every attention has been given to sanitation and the place is as sweet and clean as the rest of the establishment. The business now conducted by J. A. Smith and Brother, is by far the oldest in Plainfield, dating, as it does, from 1836, when it was founded by Ira Pruden. He was succeeded in 1866 by Theodore J. Pruden and he in turn by Smith and Rockwell in 1886. Mr. J. A. Smith, senior member of the present firm, bought out his partner a short time later and in 1895 formed a co-partnership with his brother, Mr. Fred. E. Smith. Under their energetic management the business has grown wonderfully and has become one of the big enterprises of Plainfield. Since it was established in 1836, the store has had three locations, each time moving into larger and better quarters. At the beginning it was located at 119-121 West Front street, from there it was moved to 151-153 W. Front St. and last March to the present building. Both members of the firm are natives of this section and have been in the grocery, produce and fruit business all their lives and know its every detail. They are among the most progressive and substantial of Plainfield's business men and have always been among the first to do everything in their power for its growth and prosperity.

PLAINFIELD CAB COMPANY.

LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLES. W. J. HUDSON, PRESIDENT.

One of the first things to attract the attention of the visitor to Plainfield and make a favorable impression, is the many stylish equippages seen on the streets. Though it is one of the greatest of automobile cities, the love of good horses and fine turnouts has always been characteristic of the inhabitants, and they have generously appreciated the efforts of the Plainfield Cab Company, in giving them a service that is high-class in every particular, while its rates are always reasonable. This is an ideal city and section for driving, with its splendid streets and stretches of fine roads, and for years the Plainfield Cab Company has done a flourishing business which every season grows larger. There is nothing in livery that this company cannot furnish promptly—carriages, cabs, buggies, surreys, coaches and Broughams. The people here want the best that is to be had and when a team leaves the stables of this company it has the appearance of a high-class private equippage, rather than the average livery rig. The business is one of the oldest in the city, having been established over 25 years ago. It was formerly owned by Daniel Roberts, from whom it was purchased about five years ago by the Plainfield Cab Company, of which Mr. W. J. Hudson is the enterprising and experienced president and manager. The stables at 130-134 East Second street are modern in every respect; well-lighted, ventilated and drained and particular attention is given to sanitation. Besides the general livery business a large business is done in boarding horses. Some of the most particular and discriminating horse owners of the city having long been permanent patrons. Fronting 50 feet on Second street the stables extend back a distance of 100 feet and are four stories high, containing a floor space of 20,000 square feet. Every floor is reached by the modern elevator service and every convenience has been provided for the proper care of stock. Mr. Hudson has for years been in the livery business and there is no detail of it with which he is not thoroughly familiar. Modern in his ideas and progressive in his methods he has a firm faith in the future growth of Plainfield, and is always ready to do his part to give it a boost.

SOMERSET HOTEL.

WILLIAM G. FEASTER, PROP.

For many years the old reliable Somerset Hotel has been one of the most popular hostelries in Plainfield, and never before in its long history has it been more generously patronized, than it is at the present time. Under the capable and efficient management of Mr. William G. Feaster, the Somerset has entered upon a new era of prosperity. Mr. Feaster became the proprietor two years ago, and from the first set a high standard, which he has rigidly adhered to. Always famous for its excellent cuisine, it has been made better than ever, and a meal at the Somerset is the best for the money that can be obtained in Plainfield. The rooms are light, airy, clean and comfortable, and the terms either by the week or day will be found reasonable, when the character of the service furnished is considered. Attached to the hotel is a handsome and well-stocked cafe, where the best of wines, liquors, beer and cigars are kept on hand. Mr. Feaster, the proprietor and manager of this hospitable old house, is a native of New Brunswick, but has lived in Plainfield for many years. For eleven years he was connected with the Hotel Waldolf and also with the Hotel Kensington. He succeeded Mr. Boice, the owner of Somerset, and has distinctly made good. Mr. Feaster has, since taking charge of the Somerset, given Plainfield a thoroughly good hotel and that the public appreciates his efforts is shown by the generous patronage bestowed. Although one of the oldest hotels in the city the Somerset is provided with all modern improvements and keeps fully abreast of the times.

W. W. WARNOCK.

BAKER, CONFECTIONER AND CATERER.

Few articles of food are so wholesome and delicious as well-made bread, cakes and pastry, from a clean and sanitary bakery presided over by a man who throughly understands his business. On the contrary, bread and pastry that is not properly baked is injurious, being about as indigestible a food as can be placed on the table. For nearly half a century the people of Plainfield and this section have been eating Warnock's bread, cakes and pastry, and epicures have pronounced the products of the bakery of the highest degree of perfection. Bakery or kitchen products could not be purer or better in any way than those made by Mr. W. W. Warnock, whose attractive and splendidly equipped establishment is located at the corner of North and Park avenues. Only the best materials procurable are used; the most expert and experienced workmen employed, and Mr. Warnock gives his personal attention to every detail of his establishment. Fronting on North avenue 30 feet, the building occupied by Warnock's bakery extends back a distance of 80 feet to the railroad. The front portion is used as a salesroom, one of the most attractive that could be found anywhere, while in the rear is the bakery—clean, sanitary and thoroughly up-to-date, having only been built about three years ago, when the business was removed from Front street. The concern was established in 1866 by Alexander Warnock, father of the present proprietor, who conducted it successfully until about 17 years ago, when he was succeeded by his son, Mr. W. W. Warnock, who has fully maintained the high standard set by the founder. Mr Warnock is a thoroughly practical man, a native of Plainfield, and has for years been identified with the business life of the city.

Shout for good old Plainfield.

FOURTH WARD HOTEL.

JOHN C. CLARK, PROP.

For over forty years the old Fourth Ward Hotel has been one of the best known and most popular hostelries of Plainfield and this section of New Jersey. Located at 456 West Third street, it is the favorite resort of people living in the western section of the city, who have found, by years of experience, that they are always sure of finding there something refreshing to drink and a good meal, as well as comfortable sleeping quarters. Though one of the oldest hotels in this city the Fourth Ward is one of the most modernly appointed and has, under the capable and popular management of its proprietor, Mr. John C. Clark, been kept fully abreast of the times. The cafe attached to the hotel is most attractive, being unusually large, well-lighted and ventilated. There are tables for those who wish to partake of refreshments at their leisure or have a business or social talk and there is no place in Plainfield where a more enjoyable hour can be spent. The bar is stocked with the finest wines, liquors and cigars to be had, and the service is of the best, while at the same time the terms are reasonable. The Fourth Ward Hotel was established by Patrick Flannigan in 1872 and was at the time only two stories high. When the railroad tracks through the city were elevated in 1875, the building was razed and another story built underneath in which the safe and office are located, adding a third more to the size. The upper floors are used exclusively for the dining rooms and chambers. Mr. Flannigan was succeeded by John Gough and he in turn by Hugh O'Donnell. About 14 years ago the late Bernard Clark, father of the present proprietor, came into possession and he conducted the place most successfully until his death when his sons ran it for a while under the firm name of Clark Brothers. The interests of Mr. John and Mr. Frank Clark were finally purchased by Mr. John Clark, now the sole proprietor. Mr. Clark has made many improvements to the hotel, and under his management the business has rapidly increased and the popularity of the old Fourth Ward Hotel is greater now than at any time during its long history.

L. HOERSTER.

WHOLESALE DEALER IN FINE WHISKIES, BRANDIES, CORDIALS, WINES, ETC.

When a concern has for over half a century successfully carried on business, retaining old customers and constantly adding new ones no better evidence could be produced that its methods have been fair and straightforward. It is a record possessed by but few firms and constitutes a most valuable asset, one that could hardly be computed in dollars and cents. For the last 25 years or more the firm of L. Hoerster, dealers in fine whiskies, brandies, cordials and cigars, bottlers of foreign and domestic beers, ales and porters, and manufacturers of pure sarsaparilla, ginger ale and other soft drinks, has been a leading one in North Plainfield, having as its patrons some of the most discriminating people of this section, people who want the best that is to be had at reasonable prices. At the attractive establishment, 98 Somerset street, an immense stock of the best brands liquors and cigars are carried, sold at wholesale only. There is no kind of goods more easily adulterated than wines and liquors, or so difficult to detect, and despite the pure food laws the practice is still wide spread. It was upon the firm and solid foundation of purity that the late Mr. Hoerster founded his business many years ago and the high standard he then set, has been rigidly adhered to by his widow, who has since his death most successfully carried it on. To the rear of the wholesale store and office is located one of the best bottling plants in this city and section, equipped with the latest improved machinery. Bright, well ventilated, clean and sanitary, only the highest class of goods are bottled here, and there is no possible danger of contamination. The purest materials are used and the most experienced help employed. Besides all kinds of soft drinks the leading brands of beer are bottled, such as Rupperts, Trifz, Schlitz, Pabst and Smith's Philadelphia ale and porter. Mrs. Hoerster has proved herself a splendid business woman, and is building up a constantly increasing trade. She is public spirited and progressive and ever ready to help good old Plainfield.

WASHINGTON HOUSE.

AT WETUMPKA FALLS IN THE NOTCH.

FRANK PROBST, PROPRIETOR.

Located just outside of Plainfield, "at Wetumpka Falls in the Notch," is the quaint but modern Washington House, one of the historic stopping places in New Jersey, and a favorite resort with lovers of good things to eat and drink, partaken of amid beautiful and delightful surroundings. The house is thought to be at least a century and a half old and the original building is still standing looking much as it must have appeared when George Washington stopped there on his way South to meet the English and engage in the battle of Trenton. A number of additions have been made from time to time, including automobile sheds; but the atmosphere of the old inn still smacks of Colonial days, hightened by the old-fashioned garden in the rear, the weather-stained sign with its picture of the Father of His Country on horseback, and the quiet that pervades the place. It is hard to imagine that the busy city lies only a mile away, and it is not to be wondered at that the tired business man often walks or rides out in the afternoon to enjoy a dinner such as he could not find in the city. The old inn makes a quaint and picturesque picture as it stands in the Notch of Watchung Mountains, and no visitor to Plainfield should fail to visit it and partake of the hospitality of mine host, Frank Probst, who, for the last three years has presided over the destinies of the historic hostelry. Mr. Probst is a thorough hotel man, and while he keeps up the traditions of the house, he has added every modern convenience usually found in the modern hotel. He prides himself on his cuisine, and the most particular diner-out could but be satisfied with the food, the cooking and the service, as well as the reasonableness of the prices. Mr. Probst is a native of Vienna, one of the gayest of European capitals, and before coming to America was the manager of the Hotel Bristol at Carlsbad Springs, the famous watering place. As a young man he served in the Seventy-sixth Royal Austrian Infantry and still has the erect carriage of the trained trooper. Every year there is an advance in fireproof building construction and less timber and other inflammable materials are being used today than ever before. HEADQUARTERS OF THE SERVICE MOTOR CAR CO.

That the remarkable development of the automobile will go down in history as one of the greatest wonders of this wonderful age, no thoughtful man can for a minute doubt. Every year improvements are being made and it would seem that perfection cannot be far off, though many contend that the present is comparatively nothing to what the future will bring forth in the development of this great industry. This may or may not be true, but the fact remains that every year sees an increase in the number of machines bought, and with most people who can afford the expenditure, it has become not a question of owning a machine, but that of what machine to buy. Plainfield is one of the best automobile cities in the country, with its splendidly kept thoroughfares and the fine roads leading from it in every direction. Located here is also the finely equipped garage, repair shops and supply establishment of the Service Motor Car Company, one of the most complete in the State. Although this company has only been established in Plainfield less than three years, it has built up an immense business which is rapidly growing in every department and its garage has become headquarters for a large percentage of the best known automobilists of this city and section as well as for the great traveling public. The garage and repair shops of the Service Motor Car Company are located at 149 East Fourth street, just opposite the railroad station, and are of concrete block and brick, three stories high. Fronting on Fourth street 100 feet, the building extends back to the railroad tracks the same distance, providing a floor space of 30,000 feet for the use of the various departments. There is not a more complete establishment devoted exclusively to the automobile business in the country. The repair shops are equipped with the very latest automobile repair machinery and a large staff of the most skilled and experienced mechanics and machinists are employed. There is no job, no matter how difficult, that this company is not prepared to undertake and carry to a successful conclusion, as has been shown in many instances. The supply department is also complete in every particular and there is nothing needed by the automobilist that cannot be found in stock. The Service Motor Company handles exclusively the Abbott-Detroit and the Hupmobile machines, both standard and among the biggest sellers. The company is the state agent for the Hupmobile and has 60 agencies in every part of New Jersey. Its officers are E. A. Craig, president; Frederick Harrington, vice-president, and George R. Morris, treasurer and general manager. Mr. Craig is a prominent electrical contractor of this city. Mr. Harrington is one of its best known business men and an extensive dealer in leather, and Mr. Morris, the general manager, is one of the most prominent men in automobile circles in the State, having been connected with the business for years and being familiar with its every detail. They are among the city's most substantial and progressive citizens.

Quick, Good Work at Honest Prices

Most Modern and Best Equipped Laundry in this part of New Jersey

With the advent of the steam laundry there was a domestic upheaval in hundreds of thousands of American homes and no one can doubt that the time is fast approaching when that great bugaboo of the housekeeper, known as wash-day, will in the near future be but an unpleasant memory. No really good reason exists why there should be a wash-day in any modernly managed home, and it has disappeared in many. An investigation of the service offered by Marshall's Laundry must convince any housewife that the modern methods of doing the family washing is best. She cannot help but decide after giving the matter the thoughtful consideration it deserves, that it is best to patronize this up-to-the-minute, sanitary establishment and eliminate wash-day forever. In the end she will find that it will be one of the most progressive and economical steps she ever made. Marshall's Laundry is not only the oldest but is also the most modernly equipped steam laundry in this city and section. It had been thought by many that the last word had been said in steam laundry equipment, so many were the improvements that had been made over old methods, but it remained for Marshall's Laundry to show its patrons what a real modern laundry means to them. Last year entirely new machinery of the latest improved pattern was installed in the wash rooms, which occupy the entire basement of the handsome new building erected at the corner of Watchung avenue and Fourth street, about four years ago. This is the best equipment that could possibly be made, and with it the work turned out at Marshall's Laundry will compare most favorably with that of any establishment, no matter where located. The wash room, which is 30x110 feet and contains a floor space of 3,300 square feet, is a model of cleanliness and sanitation, is bright and well-ventilated and every convenience is provided for the prompt execution of work. The power is furnished both by steam and electricity, the laundry having its own 20-horse power dynamo as well as a 20-horse power steam engine. On the floor above the basement is the sorting, marking and finishing rooms and offices. These are also well arranged for rapid work, machinery being used wherever possible, and the system is so thoroughly perfected that mistakes and loss of garments is almost impossible. There is much less wear and tear of garments by the new machinery than the old, friction having been almost entirely eliminated. There is an impression prevalent among many that steam laundry methods wear out clothes, while as a matter of fact, it is hand work, the constant friction caused by the flat-iron of the hand worker, that is wearing. There is nothing washable that cannot be done in the very best style at Marshall's and the fact that the business is growing so rapidly is the best proof that the people of this city and section appreciate the efforts of the proprietors to give them fine service. The special attention of housewives is called to the fact that the laundry does all kinds of rough-dry work, to be ironed at home, at reasonable rates. The delivery service has been organized with the greatest care and prompt delivery is one of the foundation stones upon which the success of Marshall's Laundry has been built. The service consists of four modern wagons and extends to Westfield, Dunellan, Netherwood and throughout the city and suburbs. About 25 people are employed in the plant. Marshall's was at one time conducted as the American Steam Laundry at 122 East Front street, where it was founded in October, 1890, just 23 years ago this month. Mr. Harry W. Marshall bought the property over 20 years ago and under his active and enterprising managment it has grown from very modest proportions to be one of Plainfield's most flourishing enterprises. When it was decided to incorporate he was elected president and treasurer, the other officers being G. W. V. Moy, Esq., vice-president, and A. L. Marshall, secretary. Mr. Marshall is a native of Newark and was for a number of years, before going into business on his own account, engaged in railroad construction work, being associated with one of the largest firms of contractors in that line. He worked on the Central Pacific, spending some time in the Indian Territory, now Oklahoma, and also on the Richmond and Danville and other roads, most of the time being paymaster. Since making his home in Plainfield he has been actively identified with the business and social life of the city. Mr. Marshall is secretary of the Mono Fireproof Storage Warehouse Company, vice-president of the Auto Distributing Company, president of the Business Men's Credit Association, treasurer of the Board of Play Ground Commissioners, and is a member of the Chamber of Commerce.

CENTRAL BOTTLING WORKS.

Wonderful progress has been made in the bottling business during the last few years, the demand for bottled beers, ales, liquors, sarsaparilla, soda and other drinks was never so great as it is at the present time, and there is no industry in the country in a more flourishing condition. The leading concern engaged in the business in this city and section is the Central Bottling Works, at 66 and 68 Somerset street, North Plainfield, of which Mr. Henry Haurand is the enterprising and popular proprietor. He has by his energy and enterprise built up a large and growing business which is by no means confined to Plainfield, but extends throughout this section, the radius of his trade constantly growing, as the merits of his goods become better known. Mr. Haurand is the sole bottler in Plainfield of the famous Bartholomay, Rochester beer, which has been truly called "America's Finest Product," receiving it in carload lots and bottling it at his own plant by the most improved machinery and amidst the most sanitary surroundings. Without exception, this is the cleanest and most sanitary bottling plant the writer has ever visited, and he has inspected many in all parts of the country. The utmost care is exercised in bottling all goods, and patrons of Mr. Haurand can rest content in the knowledge that they are getting the purest of products. Peter Doegler's and F. and M. Shaffer's beers are also handled, and a splendid line of wines, brandies, whiskies, cordials, gins and liquors are kept in stock. These are sold at wholesale only, nothing less than a quart being handled. The wholesale liquor department and offices are in the front portion of the establishment, while the bottling plant is in the rear. Fronting on Somerset street about 40 feet, the plant extends back about 200, giving a large space in which to conduct operations. A specialty is made of bottling "Plainfield Club" and "Monogram" whiskies, both brands belonging to Mr. Haurand. The delivery system of the Central Bottling Works is splendidly organized, covering this entire section, and orders by telephone, mail or otherwise receive prompt attention. The business was established in 1900 and its growth has been exceptionally rapid. Mr. Haurand has for years been identified with the business life of the city, and is an active member of the Board of Business Men's Credit Association, New Jersey Liquor Men's Association, the Chamber of Commerce, the Elks, Moose and Red Men. He is also president of the Gesany and Turn Berein, and is captain of the Independent Shooting Club, and is one of the substantial and progressive citizens of this section in the future prosperity of which he has every confidence.

COMMERCIAL MILLS AND ELEVATOR

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DISTRIBUTORS OF

FLOUR, FEED, GRAIN, HAY AND WOOD

670 to 690 SOUTH 2nd STREET — ESTABLISHED 1860 — PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY

For considerably more than half a century, or to be exact, since 1860, the year preceding the beginning of the Civil War, the Commercial Mills and Elevator has supplied a large percentage of the people of this city and section, wholesale and retail, with flour, feed, meal, grain, salt and wood, and today the business is being carried on with the same energy and progressive spirit that it always has been though the management has changed. It is a long record, one that is made by few concerns and indicates better than any written word could do, the result of fair and straight forward business methods. The Commercial Mills and Elevator plant is located along the railroad and Second street, the site taking in the numbers between 670 and 690 on that thoroughfare, providing a frontage of about 300 feet on Second street and extending back about 250 feet to the tracks, with which they are connected by a siding, the first to be laid in Plainfield. This space includes the yards and sheds. The original mills built by Mr. A. L. Cadmus were built some years before 1860, along the brook and water power from the stream was used. At first only lumber was manufactured on a limited scale, for Plainfield was but a village and the demand was small. In 1860 a grist mill was built by Mr. Cadmus and the sawmill abandoned. For years this mill and French's were the only ones in this section, and farmers come from miles around, bringing corn to be ground and receiving meal, after toll had been taken. About thirty years ago the present plant was built, the scope of the business greatly broadened, an elevator with a capacity of handling 1,000 bushels of corn every two hours was built and a number of other improvements made. As usual the wiseacres of the little community declared that such an extensive enterprise could bring nothing but ruin to the owner, but Mr. Cadmus kept his own counsel, and was soon doing the largest business in this section. His business increased rapidly, and four years ago, having amassed a competency, it was sold by him to Mr. Otis Corbett for many years an importer and manufacturer of New York. New machinery was installed including a large separator through which all grains received in the elevator pass and are recleaned, insuring their reaching the consumer absolutely clean and in best possible condition. The senior member of the old staff, Mr. Wm. H. Shotwell, who for twenty-five years has been identified with the mill, is still on duty. For 50 years the treasurer of his church, the First Presbyterian; a former treasurer of the city—as bank official, or as executor or trustee, it can be said that no man in this community has served it more faithfully or enjoyed its confidence and respect to a greater degree. The business has continued to grow and the output is distributed throughout all this section of the State. Besides manufacturing a large quantity of the finest meal, made by the old methods, which contains all the rich flavor of the corn destroyed by the modern process, there is a large output of feed and "C. M. & E." poultry feed. For a great many years the C. M. & E. have been the selling agents for this section for the famous Pillsbury, Washburn's Best, and Imperial brands of flour—other of their agencies include the great Purma Mills of St. Louis, Worcester and other salt, beet pulp, etc. A large stock is carried of the various grains and seeds.

WOODHULL & MARTIN COMPANY

PLAINFIELD'S BON TON EMPORIUM — Dry Goods, Carpets, Furniture, Shoes, Housefurnishings and Gentlemen's Furnishings — EXCELLENT HOLIDAY GOODS

This is distinctly the era of the department store and the community that cannot support several of a high class must be placed in the list of unprogressive and unenterprising towns. No such charge can be made against Plainfield, however, for in the great establishment of the Woodhull & Martin Co., it has a department store of which any city many times its size might well be proud to possess. This thoroughly up-to-date establishment, stretching from No. 163 to 171 East Front street has long been one of the institutions of Plainfield and that the enterprise of its proprietors is appreciated is best illustrated by the great success with which it has met. Coming into competition with the big department store of New York, it has grown steadily in popularity by selling the best goods at the most reasonable prices and using the most modern methods of merchandising. The principal departments of the Woodhull & Martin Co.'s store are dry goods, carpets, furniture, shoes, house furnishings and gentlemen's furnishings. It also conducts a high-class bakery on the premises where the finest home-made bread, cakes and pastry are made fresh every day. The sales department on the first floor is a most popular an attractive one. The main floor covers over 20,000 square feet. This immense space is crowded with the best products of great factories, both at home and abroad, yet the arrangement of the various departments has been done so skillfully that the customer has no difficulty in making a thorough examination before purchasing. Most of these departments are really stores in themselves, better stocked than the average store, carrying a single line, and the department store policy of low prices is carried out to the letter. This store does not cater for the patronage of any special class, but is emphatically the people's store. Dry goods occupy the large space their importance demands, and there is absolutely nothing usually found in a high-class dry goods store that cannot be found here. The department devoted to carpets, rugs, druggets, mattings, linoleums, shades, portieres, draperies, curtains and similar goods alone takes up a space 20x100 feet. Furniture and bedding occupy a space in the rear and have always been one of the largest departments. Like the other departments it is a store in itself and a big one. In the basement is one of the most complete house furnishing departments to be found in a store of this kind of the size in the country. The section devoted to women's and children's shoes has proved very popular. Nothing has been forgotten or neglected and the store has long been the headquarters for the housewives of this city and the surrounding section. In this connection the fact should be mentioned that the Woodhull & Martin Co.'s store is headquarters for Standard Sewing Machines and Butterick Patterns. It is a real pleasure to visit a high-class store such as the one conducted by this concern. Everything is so attractively arranged, the clerical force so obliging and the prices so reasonable. The first impression the visitor has upon entering the store is that of the newness and freshness of everything, as well as that indefinable atmosphere of high quality prevailing. And the impression proves to be a correct one, upon investigation, the establishment could be searched from one end to the other and not a piece of old or shop-worn goods could be found. The concern is not one of those that carry stocks over from season to season, until they are disposed of in one way or another. Before the close of a season, everything, except standard goods, is sold, no matter what the sacrifice may be and with the new season there is practically a new store. This is one of the methods of modern merchandising that has brought the enterprise success. The Woodhull & Martin Co. was established about 16 years ago. A high standard was set from the first and this has been strictly maintained. About seven years ago Mr. S. Schuldenfrei, of New York, became president. Mr. Schuldenfrei is a merchant of long and varied experience and has been most successful. He also has stores in Atlantic City and Lakewood. Mr. H. Schuldenfrei, the manager of the store, is also a gentleman of wide experience and the growth of the store is proof of his ability. They are progressive and public spirited and take pride in giving the people of Plainfield a department store of the most modern type.

FRANK LINKE

Wholesale Wine and Liquor Dealer

Family Trade a Specialty — 227 W. FRONT STREET

Few cities of the size of Plainfield can boast of such a high grade establishment as that conducted by Mr. Frank Linke, wholesale wine and liquor dealer and bottler of beers, ginger ale, sarsaparilla and mineral waters, at 227 Front street. For more than a quarter of a century Mr. Linke has been the leader in his line in Plainfield, and while he enjoys the prestige that only years of fair and square dealing brings, he has kept his establishment fully abreast of the times and it is conducted along the most modern lines. Mr. Linke carries an immense line of wines, liquors, cordials and cigars, and has as his patrons the most discriminating people of Plainfield, people who are judges of the good things of life. He does by far the largest business in the city and his plant extends entirely through the block to Second street. The salesrooms front on the main thoroughfare of the city in the centre of the business section and are most attractively arranged. There is absolutely nothing in liquor, from the best distilleries of the world, that cannot be found here, much of it bottled in bond. In the basement are the wine cellars, kept at just the right temperature and filled with a splendid stock of both foreign and domestic wines of the best vintages, choice brandies, whiskies, rums and cordials. Mr. Linke is a direct importer from France, Spain, Germany, Portugal and other great wine-producing countries and his patrons are served direct from the original casks as they came from the government bonded warehouses. Every kind of wine is carried, from Paul Roger, Pommery & Greno, Cliquot, Perrier-Joicet, Moet & Chandon's and Mumm's Champagnes, to the most reasonably priced domestic wines. A specialty is made of J. Calvert & Co. and Barton & Guerster's claret and sauternes and John Baptist Sturm Rhine wine. To the rear of the salesrooms on the first floor is the bottling plant, the best equipped by long odds in this section of New Jersey, the latest improved machinery having been installed and particular attention being given to sanitary conditions. An immense business is done in the manufacture of ginger ale, sarsaparilla, root, birch and other temperance drinks, sodas and distilled waters. Linke's Celebrated Ginger Ale, Sarsaparilla and Club Soda have a wide sale throughout this entire section and are "Undisputed Rivals of the Imported." Made from the choicest materials and guaranteed under the pure food act they are delicious. Pure water is one of the great essentials of soft drinks. That from which Linke's are made is procured from an artesian well sunk on the premises, which has been analyzed and pronounced to be perfectly free from any foreign substances. Before being used, however, it is distilled and every bottle is carefully sterilized, the most modern appliances being used. Mr. Linke also supplies distilled water by the demijohn or case and deals in Vichy, Seltzer, Carbons and other mineral waters. He also does a large beer bottling business, bottling on the premises, fresh from the keg, by the most approved methods, such choice brands of beer as Pabst, "the beer that made Milwaukee famous," Beadleston & Woerz, Piel, Lemps, Anheuser-Busch, Feigenspans and a long list of the standard imported beers, and a complete line of imported and domestic ales and porters. A splendidly organized delivery system covers the entire city and a telephone message through phone 157 will bring a wagon, auto delivery, to the door promptly with your order. Mr. Linke started in business on a modest scale in 1886 on Somerset street and was issued the first wholesale liquor license ever granted in North Plainfield. His business grew rapidly and it was not many years before larger quarters were found necessary, and in 1890 the present site was purchased and the first wholesale license in Plainfield obtained. In the new store the business grew still more rapidly, and in 1908 the present handsome building was erected to meet its requirements. During the 27 years he has been a citizen of Plainfield Mr. Linke, who is a native of Germany, has been actively identified with the business life of the city. Mr. Linke's courteous treatment, pure quality of goods and prices as low as those of the larger New York houses, entitles him to your patronage, and we assure you if you extend to him one trial you will have no occasion to place your orders elsewhere thereafter.

Among the enterprises of the city that have won success by uniformly fair and square dealing, and the fact that it has given the public a thoroughly up-to-date service in the various lines of endeavor in which it is engaged is the Plainfield Ice & Supply Company, the general offices of which are located in a handsome concrete block building at 222 Madison avenue. This is one of the largest concerns of its kind in this section of the State, and not only manufactures ice on a large scale, but is one of the largest dealers in coal, lumber, builders' supplies, concrete blocks, fancy brick, sewer and drain pipe, hollow tile, roofing paper and masons' materials in this section, its trade extending to all the surrounding towns within a radius of a number of miles. Some idea of the extent of its operations may be gained when the fact is mentioned that 65 men and 44 horses are constantly employed by the company; its yards on Central avenue extend over one and a half blocks, those on Berkeman and North avenue three blocks, and that it has storage houses on the crest of Washington mountain with a capacity of 20,000 tons of ice, for although its plants have a combined daily capacity of 85 tons, this is not sufficient to supply the demands of its customers. The company is both a wholesale and retail dealer and ships as far West as Pennsylvania in carload lots. Besides the wholesale trade, the city is covered in every section by a splendidly organized delivery system. The ice manufactured by the Plainfield Ice & Supply Company is made after the most approved methods from filtered, artesian water and could not be purer. An immense coal and wood trade has been built up by the company; and its customers can always rely upon getting the best screened coal of every kind, for its facilities for handling

A large trade in carload lots is also carried on. The company's trade in lumber and builders' supplies has fully kept pace with the immense boom in building that has been going on here in Plainfield, especially during the past 10 years. It has as its customers many of the most prominent builders, contractors and property owners within a radius of many miles, the best evidence that could be produced that its methods have been straightforward, and its methods and prices right. This is one of the largest, most enterprising and most rapidly growing concerns in New Jersey, and it is doing its full share in the up-building of this section. The company was incorporated in April, 1909, and is the result of the consolidation of McDonough Bros. (Inc.) and the Natural Ice Co. The officers are Peter J. McDonough, president; Andrew H. THE PEOPLES STORE

H. ADELBERG, Prop.

CLOTHING FOR LADIES OR GENTLEMEN

CASH OR CREDIT

H. ADELBERG'S "PEOPLES' STORE."

This is distinctively the era of good clothing, for never before has it played such an important part as at the present time. Good clothes are one of the most valuable assets any man or woman can have, without them the brightest people labor under a heavy handicap, while, well-supplied with a fine wardrobe, the average man or woman has an advantage that is almost incalculable. There is really no good reason why everyone should not be well and stylishly dressed, even those whose income is very moderate, it is a duty they owe themselves and one that can be performed by the exercise of a litle self-denial and economy in other directions. And in buying clothing they should always keep in mind that the truest economy is to buy the best and go to a dealer who has made for himself a reputation for reliability and straightforward dealing. There is no dealer in ladies' and gentlemen's ready-to-wear and tailor-made garments in New Jersey, or anywhere else for that matter, who stands higher in the estimation of his patrons than does Mr. H. Adelberg, whose attractive and splendidly stocked establishment is at 129 East Front street in the very centre of the shopping district. Fronting 20 feet on the main thoroughfare of the city the building extends back a distance of 135 feet. The second floor is also occupied, providing a total floor space of about 6,000 square feet, in which to display the largest, most complete and most select stock of ladies' and gentlemen's furnishings, suits, cloaks, gowns, jackets and everything usually found in a strictly high-class outfitting store ever assembled in this city. Every garment of the thousands is new and of the latest style, for Mr. Adelberg does not belong to that class of merchants who carry stock from season to season until it is sold. Every season is a new one with him, the old stock goes to make room for the new, no matter what the sacrifice may be. The ladies' alteration room, in the rear, is presided over by experts and all alterations are promptly and skillfully done. Upstairs is the custom-made tailoring departments, where those who prefer having their clothing made to order can be accommodated. All work is done right in the building and patrons are fitted there; it is not sent off to New York or Chicago to be made along with thousands of other suits. Adelberg clothing has an individuality all its own and every garment is made for the man or woman who wears it. He does a large credit, as well as a cash business and hundreds of his customers have accounts on his books, paying such sums at intervals, as is most convenient. This plan of modern merchandising enables every man and woman in Plainfield, who has standing in the community, to be well-dressed, no matter how moderate their income may be. The Adelberg store was established here about eleven years ago and almost immediately became headquarters for the best dressed ladies and gentlemen of this city and section. A position fairly won and maintained by adhering to the high standard set when it first opened its doors. Two years ago a branch store was established at 78 Broad street, Elizabeth, which has been quite as successful as the parent establishment. Mr. Adelberg has, since coming here from Allentown, thoroughly identified himself with the business life of Plainfield and is one of its most successful, progressive and public spirited merchants.

New Jersey's Leading Butchers

THE VERY BEST MEAT AT THE VERY LOWEST PRICES

One of the greatest problems of the present day is the high cost of living and the solving of it is uppermost in the minds of everyone. Discriminating and thoughtful housewives have been greatly aided in its solution here in Plainfield by Roth & Co. (Inc.), who are without doubt entitled to the credit of being "New Jersey's Leading Butchers," a title that has been conferred upon them by the public. Roth & Co. sell meats, the best in the market, from 10 to 25 per cent. lower than most dealers, and it has long been a question with many how they can do it and make a profit, while at the same time their meats are just as good as those sold by competitors asking a higher price. The answer is simple. This firm is the owner of 34 separate stores, in as many cities, thirty-one of them in this State, and the remaining three in Pennsylvania. They buy all their meats, fish, canned goods, poultry, hams, bacon, shoulders, in fact, everything they sell in immense quantities, generally in carload lots, and for cash, taking advantage of all discounts and eliminating the large profits of the middleman, who is responsible more than anything else for the high cost of living. Selling direct to the consumer, it can readily be seen why Roth & Co. manage to sell cheaper, and why the concern has succeeded by modern methods in merchandising in building up the largest business of its kind in New Jersey. This firm has not only been successful financially, but it has been one of the greatest benefactors of the people, who have shown their appreciation by giving it a most generous patronage, which comes from housewives in every walk of life. Roth & Co. have been in business here in Plainfield for the last 14 years, and the firm is recognized as one of the leading and most substantial concerns in the city. It has grown rapidly, as the public has learned that its goods are cheap only in price, and has now in process of construction, at 138 and 140 East Front street, one of the largest and most modern buildings devoted to the meat, fish and grocery trade in the country. This building will have every modern convenience, including its own ice plant and artesian well, all meats will be kept under cover in plate glass, refrigerated cases and in addition to its meat business a general grocery and produce department will be added. The building is of brick, two stories high, and extends back 110 feet, providing a large floor space on the first floor and the basement, all of which will be occupied by the concern. In the meantime the business at 132 East Front street, the temporary location, flourishes and grows bigger and better every day. Roth & Co. is an incorporated concern with headquarters at Orange, New Jersey, where the first store was established over 20 years ago. The officers are Messrs. J. Roth, president; M. Roth, vice-president and secretary, and J. Roth, treasurer. The local manager is Mr. L. Levin, who has been with the concern for the past eight years, coming here from Newark, and he has done his full share in making this one of the most popular stores in the city.

PAUL R. COLLIER.

Plainfield and the surrounding country is admirably adapted to out-of door sports and its beautiful environs also furnish the amateur photographer with an excellent field for the practice of his skill. Nature seems to have created this section of New Jersey especially as a recreation and playground and the hand of man has done the rest by improving it. This being so, it is natural that there should be an extensive demand for sporting goods and photographic supplies, and a large percentage of this demand is supplied by Mr. Paul R. Collier, whose popular establishment is located at 156 East Front street. Mr. Collier carries the largest, most select and complete stock of sporting goods in this section, and he has by his enterprise and straightforward dealing, made his place headquarters for sport lovers living here and in this immediate vicinity. They have long ago learned that it is not necessary to go to New York for what they need, as was the practice for many years, but get it at Collier's, just as good and frequently at a more reasonable price than the same goods can be purchased in the metropolis. Mr. Collier is prepared to outfit individuals and clubs for every line of sport; and his stock of football, basketball, gymnasium and other supplies comes from the most reliable and celebrated manufacturers. Another important department of the business is that devoted to photo supplies and the development of films for amateurs. Mr. Collier is a film specialist and an acknowledged expert; his work comparing most favorably with that done anywhere. His facilities for doing work promptly and in the most skillful manner are unequaled and he has an immense trade among the discriminating and particular amateurs of Plainfield and this vicinity. Any size roll of films are developed within 24 hours for 10 cents. Enlargements up to 8x10 from any size negative are made, mounted and framed for $1.00, and considering the high-class of work the prices are remarkably reasonable. Mr. Collier also handles all kinds of photographers' supplies and his framing department is conducted along the most up-to-date lines. He also deals in photos, etchings and engravings, and his stock of picture post-cards is one of the most varied and select to be found anywhere. Mr. Collier has, during the five years since he opened his doors for business, been most successful and his trade is constantly increasing. Mr. Collier is progressive and alive to the times, and ever ready to do anything for the city's welfare.

improves the skin and hair

RESINOL SOAP is in every way pure, delightful and cleansing for the toilet and shampoo. In addition, it contains Resinol, which doctors everywhere prescribe for skin and scalp affections. Its regular use, therefore, tends to prevent pimples, blackheads, and blotches, to keep the hair thick and lustrous, and the scalp free from dandruff.

Resinol Soap is not artificially colored, its rich brown is given it by the Resinol medication. Costs 25 cents and is worth infinitely more to everyone who values a clear skin and good hair.

Resinol Ointment is most valuable in the treatment of facial eruptions, eczema, chafings, etc. For trial size of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, free, write to Dept. 18-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

Sold by all druggists

Resinol

Heals itching skins

Resinol Ointment, with Resinol Soap, stops itching instantly, quickly and easily heals the most distressing cases of eczema, rash or other tormenting skin or scalp eruption, and clears away pimples, blackheads, redness, roughness and dandruff, when other treatments have proven only a waste of time and money.

Resinol is sold by practically every druggist in the United States, but you can test it at our expense. Write today to Dept. 32-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for a liberal trial of Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap.

Resinol stops itching instantly

THE moment Resinol Ointment touches any itching skin, the itching stops and healing begins. With the aid of Resinol Soap, it quickly removes all traces of eczema, rash, tetter, ringworm, pimples or other tormenting, unsightly eruption, leaving the skin clear and healthy. It is equally effective for sores, boils, burns, red, rough hands, dandruff and piles.

Every druggist sells Resinol

Wherever drugs are sold you can get Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap. Prescribed by doctors for eighteen years. Write to Dept. 1-S, "Resinol," Baltimore, Md., for free samples.

The easy Resinol way to get rid of pimples

PIMPLES and blackheads disappear, unsightly complexions become clean, clear, and velvety, and hair health and beauty are promoted by the regular use of Resinol Soap and an occasional application of Resinol Ointment. These soothing, healing preparations do their work easily, quickly and at little cost, when even the most expensive cosmetics and complicated "beauty treatments" fail.

For 18 years Resinol has been a doctor's prescription and household remedy for eczema, ringworm, rashes and other skin eruptions, dandruff, burns, sores, etc. Stops itching instantly. Resinol Ointment (50c and $1) and Resinol Soap (25c) are sold by all druggists. For sample of each, write to Dept. 31-S, Resinol Baltimore, Md.

Keeps complexions clear and healthy

WHEN you wash your face do you realize that it is not enough to remove the dirt—that your skin needs a soothing, healing influence to keep your complexion fresh and free from blemish?

¶ Ordinary toilet soaps do not assert this influence. Many of them contain free alkali which tends to dry the skin and destroy its delicate texture. Even the best of such soaps can only clean, they cannot heal and protect the skin. Resinol Soap, besides being an absolutely pure toilet soap, contains the same soothing, healing, antiseptic balsams as Resinol Ointment, the value of which in the treatment of skin affections is known throughout the medical profession.

¶ That is why Resinol Soap does for the skin what cosmetics are supposed to do—it insures not only a clean skin, but a healthy skin, and a fair, clear complexion.

Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are sold by all druggists.

For free trial, write to Dept. 15-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

CITY'S OFFICIALS AT 'COPS' BALL

Plainfield's Bluecoats Enjoyed a Night Off "Over the Brook."

Vaudeville Bill Also Adds to Entertainment—Fifth Annual Event Was the Biggest One Yet.

The fifth annual ball and reception of the Plainfield Benevolent Association held in Saengerbund Hall, the borough, last night, was attended by officials of the city, borough, Westfield and other nearby places and was the most successful affair in the history of the organization. Throughout the evening there were more than five hundred people present to enjoy the excellent entertainment provided by the association.

The large hall was elaborately decorated with flags, while Stanley, the florist, transformed the stage into a garden of beauty through the use of palms, ferns and flowers. It was here that Prof. L. R. Anderson's orchestra was seated and from early in the evening until the small hours of the morning discoursed a popular program of dances.

During an intermission about 11 o'clock the guests were entertained by "Musical" William Stewart, of this city, the well-known vaudeville artist, and through the special courtesy of the management of Proctor's Theatre, Manne & Belle, a clever team of singers and dancers, who are appearing there, gave some of their best numbers, receiving several encores.

While the dancing and entertainment was being enjoyed in the large hall, invited guests were entertained at supper in the basement, where Timbo & Co. had prepared an appetizing "spread." The arrangements for the whole affair were complete and passed off pleasantly much to the credit of the association.

Among those present were City Judge W. G. DeMeza, Councilman George S. Clay, A. D. Edgar, William L. Gloak, Francis J. Blatz, P. J. Reville, Fred Endress and Council-elect John H. Cose, Theodore A. Martin, Charles C. Graves, City Treasurer W. F. Arnold, Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., Fire Chief T. O. Doane, I. IN BOROUGH COURT.

Charles Lyons, of 674 West Third street, who was arrested in the borough on October 24, on a charge of disorderly conduct and was given two weeks' time in which to pay a $5 fine, was arrested again last night, because he had failed to pay the amount. Frank Sherrard, 42 years old, of the borough, who was arrested last night, was fined $5 when arraigned in the borough court this morning on a charge of being drunk and disorderly.

SIGN YOUR COMPLAINTS.

Health Officer Randolph Chandler, of the local Health Department, has been considerably annoyed during the past few months by the large number of anonymous communications sent to him complaining of conditions existing in various parts of the city, and he has announced that the health department will pay no attention to those complaints that do not bear the signature of the sender.

DETECTIVES BUSY; $500 IN CASH GONE

United States Express Co. Mystified Over Disappearance of Packet.

The mysterious disappearance of $500 in cash belonging to the New Jersey Central, while being transferred by train between the Grant Avenue Station and the North Avenue station, this city, by the United States Express Company, became known today, when detectives were put to work on the case. Inquiry has thus far failed to throw any light on the matter.

Manager Clark, of the local office of the United States Express Company, when questioned today, declined to discuss the case, beyond confirming the report that the money is missing, and the fact that the full office staff is still at work. He refused to say whether anyone was under suspicion.

The money, it is said, put in charge of the company's agent at Grant avenue by the agent, Clarence Hoffman, was brought to this city, where the package was signed for, but it failed to reach the bank for deposit. The name of the person who signed for the money here is not disclosed, and what become of the package is shrouded in mystery.

TALE OF A WOMAN MOUNTAIN CLIMBER

Illustrated Lecture of Miss Dora Keen Thrills a Large Audience.

Before an audience composed largely of young people, Miss Dora Keen, the widely-known mountain climber, whose achievement in ascending Mount Blackburn, Alaska, is perhaps without an equal, gave an illustrated lecture at the Hartridge school, yesterday afternoon, during which she showed at least 121 pictures, all but three of which were taken by herself, sometimes from the most perilous of positions during the arduous and dangerous ascent of Mount Blackburn.

The early part of the lecture was devoted to a description of the first attempt to scale the mountain. This attempt, made in August, was unsuccessful and after thirteen days of effort the party gave up. Nothing daunted, Miss Keen laid her plans for a second trial in April, when with seven men, ample provisions and dog sleds she started again. When the summit was reached, the enthusiasm of her hearers was spontaneous and prolonged. Miss Keen speaks clearly and vividly, her story being fraught with interest at every point and her pictures are most unusual and beautiful.

TWO YOUTHS ACCUSED OF STEALING HIS TIRES

William Blake, 16 years old, of 212 Spooner avenue, and Walter Holliwell, 16 years old, of 41 Laramee road, will be arraigned before City Judge DeMeza tomorrow morning, charged with stealing a pair of rubber tires from an automobile owned by William Colburn, of 1407 South End avenue.

Over a week ago Colburn noticed that the tires had been stolen and made a tour of the Plainfield junk shops. At the establishment of Isaac Peh, in West Third street, he found his stolen property. The junkman said he purchased the goods from Blake and Holliwell, and paid $1.60 for them.

CHURCH PEOPLE HONOR DR. ZELIE

Reception Marks 10th Anniversary of His Ministry at Crescent Ave. Church.

FOUR HUNDRED THERE

Many Plainfielders Show Their Appreciation of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Zelie—Musical Program Delightful.

The members of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and congregation, as well as the ministers and members of other churches of the city and borough and many old friends joined in a reception to Rev. Dr. and Mrs. John Sheridan Zelie in the parlors of the church last evening, the affair being marked the tenth year of the pastorate of Dr. Zelie. It afforded an excellent opportunity for renewing old friendships and showing the strong sense of appreciation of Dr. and Mrs. Zelie. There were about four hundred persons present during the evening.

The parlors of the church were attractively decorated by Stanley with a profusion of Southern smilax, palms, chrysanthemums and American Beauty Roses, while Dr. and Mrs. Zelie received many gifts of beautiful flowers from friends.

The cleric and his wife received the guests in the Sunday-school room, while the refreshments were served in the large parlor. Those who poured were Mrs. Augustus V. Heely, Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows, Mrs. John P. Stevens, Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna, Mrs. John F. Harman and Mrs. Joseph W. Sandford.

They were assisted in serving by the Misses Mitchell, Marguerite Mead, Helen Harman, Elsie Harman, Annie Campbell, Ethel Colton, Elsie Burke, Ellen Burke, Dorothy Burke, Marjorie Brown, Eleanor Brown, Eva Browne, Catherine Browne, Edith Mellick, Edna Brown, Audrey Gernon, Marguerite Ramsay, Bessie Alpaugh, Harriet Goddard, Mary Runkle, Alison Williams and Hella Hedges.

Mrs. John F. Harman was the general chairman of the affair, and she was assisted by Mrs. John P. Stevens Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch, Mrs. Augustus V. Heely and Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna, who attended to the refreshments, invitations, finances and decorations.

A delightful feature of the reception was the instrumental music, furnished by a harp and two violins. The selections were particularly appropriate to the occasion and added much to the pleasure of the guests. There was a marked absence of formality which was also a feature much enjoyed.

Dr. Zelie came to Plainfield ten years ago, succeeding the late Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, who resigned to become pastor of the Brick Presbyterian church, New York city. During his ministry he has accomplished much for the Crescent Avenue church, and the members of the church and congregation hold a warm spot in their hearts for both Dr. and Mrs. Zelie as was shown by the cordiality of the greeting last evening.

ALL BAKERIES MUST OBEY A STATE LAW

Plainfield's Health Board Will See to it That They Are Licensed.

Although the State law requires that bakeries shall be licensed it has been discovered through investigation by the local Board of Health that out of the twenty-five supplying Plainfield, but five have the necessary certificate. Copies of the inspection reports as prepared by the local department have been forwarded to the State Department in Trenton, under whose jurisdiction the bakeries are and notices have been sent out to the twenty unlicensed shops to make application at once.

Twelve of the local bakeries were found to be in such an unsanitary condition that orders were given them to make necessary improvements at once in order to bring about sanitary conditions. No license will be granted to bakeries failing to comply with the law and the penalty for working without a license is a fine of $50. The next step proposed by the local health department is to compel local bakers to wrap all bread sent out and householders are requested to assist in this work by purchasing only that bread which comes wrapped up.

MORE TAX DISPUTES IN SOMERSET COUNTY

North Plainfield Township's Committee is Now the Complainant.

The Somerset County Tax Board, at a joint meeting to be held on Monday night, Dec. 1, will consider the petition made by the North Plainfield Township Committee to return to that municipality State and county tax moneys paid on some disputed land on which the township of Warren will reap the benefit of all taxes collected in 1912.

When the Warren and North Plainfield authorities settled their dispute over some territory, an agreement was signed to the effect that the land belonged to the North Plainfield Township, but that all 1912 tax moneys should go to Warren. Both municipalities had the disputed territory listed on their tax books, and both paid the State and county taxes, for this property. As the North Plainfield Township did not receive any benefits from the taxes collected, the township committee, of which W. deLa R. Anderson is chairman, claim that the State and county tax moneys paid by North Plainfield on the land should be refunded.

FORMER MAYOR TALKS TO HEAVENLY REST MEN

"Opportunity," was the subject of a timely and interesting address given by former Mayor G. W. V. Moy before the Men's Association of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, at a meeting in the parish house, last night. His subject applied more particularly to the opportunity offered the young men of today in almost every field of endeavor and if they will only grasp it they will reach positions of honor and trust.

After Mr. Moy's talk there was a social hour during which refreshments were served.

MISSION STUDY CLASS IS TO BE ORGANIZED

The need of more prayer in the study of missions was the principal thought conveyed in an excellent address by Mrs. A. S. Phelps, of Bound Brook, before the Women's Guild of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Phelps is president of the Upper Division Missionary Societies of the Episcopal church and is considered thoroughly informed on the subject of missions. Her talk led to the decision to form a mission study class among the women.

This class will take up a six weeks' course, beginning January 8, under the direction of Mrs. William Coe. The women also decided to send a Christmas box to Christ church school, Arden, N. C., and another one to the "Pineys" near Lakewood.

HE SAVED A CHILD FROM WATERY GRAVE

Thomas Steele Rescues Little Ursula Ross From An Untimely Death.

Saved from probable death by drowning by Thomas Steele's quick response to her frightened screams, three-year-old Ursula Ross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Ross, of 47 Grandview avenue, was pulled out of a cess-pool in the rear of her home into which she had accidentally fallen shortly before 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Today the child is recovering from the effects of her experience.

The excavation, about 15 feet deep and 2 feet in diameter, was made by some laborers early in the day, who left the premises with only a small piece of linoleum over the hole. While the mother was absent from the house, little Ursula, playing about the yard, stepped on the linoleum covering the hole. The weight of her body forced the linoleum to give way and the child was sent plunging downward about 10 feet of water. Her screams brought to her rescue Mr. Steele, of East Front street, who was making some repairs about the house. He pulled the little tot from the water as she was sinking to the bottom.

Rev. Dr. Peter Roberts, secretary of the industrial department of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., will speak on "Our Comrades from Other Lands," at the Y. M. C. A., on Friday afternoon, November 21, at 4 o'clock. The lecture will be in the nature of a home mission rally and all young people between the ages of 8 and 20 years, are invited. The lecture will be under the auspices of the Plainfield Federation of Women's Missionary Societies.

PROCTOR'S FINE SHOW.

The splendid vaudeville bill offered at Proctor's theatre attracted a capacity audience at that popular playhouse, last night. For the artistic, the Westoff Trio topped the bill with a beautiful dancing and instrumental act. For the sporting fraternity, the Keeley Brothers offered "Fun I a Sporting Goods Store" as a vehicle for an unusually good act. Harry First & Co., in "The Marriage Broker," produced almost continual laughter. Mr. First is a Jewish comedian with few equals. His characterization of the old marriage broken or matrimonial agent is perfect. For rag-time singing Manne and Belle made a big hit. They have classy selections and know how to sing. The photo-plays, as usual, are the best.

RELEASES FIGURE IN ESTATE FIGHT

Lemuel Smith Again Before Advisory Master in Suit to Get Alleged Share.

GRILLED ON THE STAND

All Sorts of Quit-Claims Conspicuous at Hearing of Plainfielder Who Believes He Has Not Gotten His Part of Father's Estate.

Newark, Nov. 14.—Releases galore figured in the Lemuel Smith estate accounting case when a further hearing was had before Advisory Master Edward M. Colie in chancery chambers here yesterday. It was Lemuel Smith, Jr., of Plainfield, who is suing to recover a share of his father's estate, believed to have been valued at more than $250,000, who signed the releases, receipts, a mortgage, deed of conveyance and a quit claim deed, and while all the releases were not made out to the executors, Brother-in-law John S. W. Thompson, of Morristown, and William F. Wilson, the effect of the several quittances, etc., was to most effectually freeze the complainant out and to practically vest the entire estate in his two sisters, Mrs. Josephine C. Thompson, wife of John S. W. Thompson, and Mrs. Maud S. Thompson wife of William H. Thompson, of Morris Plains; John and William Thompson being brothers.

The elder Lemuel Smith died in Middletown township, February 16, 1889, and on October 20, 1900, Lemuel Smith, Jr., signed a deed conveying all his interest in the realty belonging to his father's estate to John S. W. Thompson for the nominal consideration of $50. This deed was the subject of considerable questioning when the complainant was on the stand last Friday, and there was more quizzing relative to it yesterday.

When Charles C. Pilgrim, counsel for Smith, in association with William Mayo Atkinson asked Smith whether he knew when he signed the deed that he was conveying all his interest in his father's estate to John Thompson, the query was objected to by Henry H. Dawson, counsel for the Thompsons. "The deed," Dawson said, "speaks for itself."

The advisory master gave it as his opinion that the complainant was bound by the inference that might be reasonably drawn from the deed.

When Mr. Pilgrim went into the matter of a quit claim deed which Smith acknowledged having given to Thompson three or four months later Mr. Colie expressed some curiosity as to the reason for the taking of a quit claim deed when the complainant had already conveyed away his one-third interest. Mr. Dawson was unable to answer off-hand and Mr. Colie waived the mater with a "never mind" when Thompson made as if to coach his counsel.

Smith himself volunteered again the same explanation that he gave last week, namely, that he signed both the deed of conveyance and quit claim deed at the instance of Thompson and his co-executor, upon their representations to him that the interests of the estate demanded such action.

On January 2, 1891, Smith signed a release for $8,466.66 and regarding this transaction he testified last week that he did not get a dollar of that sum.

In the course of a long cross-examination to which Smith was subjected yesterday, Mr. Dawson wanted to know whether the release was not signed in conformity with an agreement between Smith and his two sisters to apply a "primary" legacy of $20,000 left by the older Smith to his three children, Lemuel, Jr., and his two sisters to a $20,000 note executed by the Weaver & Benjamin Cattle Company, of Wyoming, which bore the name of Lemuel Smith, Sr., as one of several endorsers. The witness said that this was so. It was already in evidence that after the Thompsons paid the $20,000 note with interest, they had recovered the full amount out of the ranch, and Mr. Colie was quick to point out that if Smith, as it now appeared, contributed in equal shares with his sisters toward the taking up of the note, he was entitled to one-third of the $25,000 plus recovered by his sisters on the note.

"That may have been seen so," Mr. Dawson assented, with visible reluctance.

Mrs. Smith, who sat beside Mr. Pilgrim, gave a sigh of relief as this point was scored in her husband's favor.

When, a little later, Mr. Dawson confronted Smith with another release, for $2,496.91, and asked him if this release was not signed by him to complete the agreement between him and his sisters in regard to the taking up of the cattle ranch note, Mr. Colie intimated rather broadly that an attempt to prove a further contribution of approximately $2,500

JIM M'GUIRE BATS OUT HALF A CENTURY

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 14.—Jim McGuire, one of the best known figures in baseball and at present a scout for the Detroit Club, reached the half-century mark today, having been born Nov. 14, 1863. The "Deacon," as he is familiarly known, is a native of Cleveland. At the age of 20 he began his professional career with the Terra Haute Club. He began the next season with the Cleveland National League, but was released and finished the season with the Toledo American Association Club and was one of the players transferred at the end of that season to the Detroit Club.

In 1886 the "Big Four" deal went through and McGuire was transferred to Philadelphia with Wood and Casey. The following season McGuire played with the Phillies and made a great record, but in the early part of 1888 he was again transferred to the Detroit club, and later on to his first love, the Cleveland. The Toronto Club snapped him up in 1889, and in 1890 he was with the Rochesters. From 1891 to 1897 he was with Washington and during the next five years he played with Brooklyn. In 1902 he jumped to the Detroit American League Club and the next season he was transferred to the New York Americans. After 25 years of yeoman service upon the diamond, McGuire became manager of the Boston Americans in 1906. Later he filled a similar berth with the Cleveland Club. He was a well known figure on the diamond long before some of the present-day stars were born. Notwithstanding this fact, the "Deacon" is by no means an applicant for membership in the down and out club.

HUDSON WILL BRING OUT A NEW "CABRIOLET" CAR

It is rumored that next month will bring something new in the roadster class at the Elliott-Ranney showrooms. It is said that this is to be a two-seated car of a new type that will appeal to a large class of people, and especially to physicians.

With the top up the car forms a completely enclosed coupe. In fair weather the top is folded back and the side windows are dropped, making an open roadster of the standard type.

A compartment in the rear of the car provides for carrying baggage and another space is used for extra tires and tools.

This cabriolet type is much favored in Europe. It is featured there by some of the most famous builders.

—The Daily Press is on sale at Dunellen by Hancock, the druggist.

GET THE CORRECT SIZE TIE FOR YOUR MADAME

It is essential to good service that the correct tire size be adopted. By this we mean tires large enough in diameter and cross-section to satisfactorily carry the load and in other respects meet requirements. Tires of large diameter, and small cross-section have an advantage over small-diameter tires of large cross-section in being able to pass over road obstacles more easily, make fewer revolutions, radiates the heat and better take the shock to the tires and car.

A few years ago, it was not an uncomon thing for cars to be undertired but at the present time the automobile makers and tire manufacturers are working together pretty closely. As a result the equipment decided upon generally proves adequate in size.

TROPHY FOR CADILLAC.

Cable advices received by R. C. Manning of the Motor Shop announce that the 1914 Cadillac has been awarded the Dewar trophy by the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain. This trophy presented by Sir Thomas Dewar, is awarded annually to the motor car demonstrating the greatest achievement toward the advancement of the industry. This is the second victory for the Cadillac in the classic contest of international motordom, the winning of which any motor car manufacturer in the world would consider to be his supreme achievement. The Cadillac is the only car in the world that has won this trophy twice, and the only American car that has ever come out triumphant in any of these contests.

GET TO GAME EARLY.

The Bureau of Tours wishes to emphasize the suggestion of the Yale ticket department that automobile parties get to New Haven as early as possible because of the great crowds in the streets after 12:30 o'clock. The game is called at 2 o'clock. The field is a mile and a quarter from the centre of the city. With the enormous congestion of traffic on football days it would probably take an hour to get to the parking space near the field. Available ground in the neighborhood of the football field is reserved for the parking of cars; no charge is made, but machines are stored on this territory at the owner's risk.

HIGH PRICED EXHIBITORS.

For the salon of high priced cars at the Hotel Astor in January the probable exhibitors are the De Dion Bouton, Isotta-Fraschini, Panhard, Austrian-Daimler, Minerva, Mercedes, Lancia, Fiat and Simplex. Renaut, Benz and Metallurgique, which showed last winter, won't be there this time.

FINE RECORD FOR FRANKLIN.

In the annual reliability run of the St. Louis Automobile Club, held recently first and second places were tied. A Franklin tied for first place with 998 points and another Franklin divided second honors with 997 points. A Franklin was the winner of this club run in 1912.

ATHLETES JUMPED TO THE LIMIT MARK

Standard Bar Could Not Be Raised High Enough for the Vaulters.

One of the most remarkable exhibitions of athletic prowess ever conducted in this city, was staged in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last night when twenty-four members of the senior department Number League competed for honors in the ring vault, an event seldom tried by amateur gymnasts and one that requires skill as well as a large amount of nerve. Considering the nature of the noval event, which proved to be a new wrinkle in athletics to a majority of the contestants, the marks established were exceedingly creditable and the event was completed without a single mishap being recorded.

The ring vault consists of a pull-up on the rings and a vault over the jumping standards. Four of the competitors, Henry Kinney, Jim Manning, John Biddulph and John Karlberg went the limit, still being in the race when the bar was raised to its highest available point, eight feet. Seventeen of the men went better than six feet and as a result a number of the teams will be boosted materially in the race for high team honors.

The summary:

STYLE SR RELIABILITY

Upward and Onward Plainfield to the Front

Never were truer words spoken than these:

"You can't keep a good man down."

This maxim applies to a city as it does to an individual; and a city can only stand still when its inhabitants become inactive.

Never condemn the town in which you live, remember it's your home; that there is "No Place Like Home" and the man who condemns his home gains respect nowhere.

Plainfield is composed of active, industrious and alert business men and mechanics whose efforts cannot be confined to a small town, hence this city must expand.

These men are the bone and sinew, the vitalizing force of this community. They are men who possess an ideal and their ideal is a BIGGER, BETTER and more PROSPEROUS city than the Plainfield of today.

This Booster edition of The Daily Press is the result of the hearty co-operation of our business men, the proprietors of this newspaper and the population in their endeavor to bring Plainfield to the front.

The proprietor of Rothberg's extends a warm handgrasp to the men who have worked for this enterprise, they have my sincerest wishes for success in booming this, the most favorable place of abode in the State of New Jersey.

GOVERNOR WARNS WOMEN NOT TO GO TO CALIFORNIA

Trenton, Nov. 14.—In response to a request from Mrs. Evelyn B. Keck, general secretary of the Y. W. C. A. in California, Governor Taylor yesterday issued a warning to young women who contemplate going to the Pacific coast in search of work incident to the opening of the Panama Exposition in 1915. Mrs. Keck's request was based upon the fact that a number of such seekers of employment are now stranded and in some instances practically starving on the coast. Governor Taylor said:

"The Young Women's Christian Association of San Francisco, has written me stating that many women and girls from the Eastern States are going to California with the expectation of getting work there. This impression has been created by the assumed need of the coming exposition for trained nurses, teachers and stenographers.

"This impression is a false one. The Young Women's Christian Association informs me that many of these women and girls are soon without funds, being unable to secure work, and without friends. They are already starving and there is very little extra work, and that of necessity, if this immigration to California increases, it may result in the ruin of many estimable young women. I am, therefore, moved to ask the newspapers of the State to publish a warning and do their utmost to dissuade, through their columns, young women from going to San Francisco with the idea of getting work for the reason that I am informed that more young women have already gone there than can possibly secure positions."

SEEKING TO PROVE VALID WILL LEAVING BIG ESTATE

Paterson, Nov. 14.—Testimony seeking to prove the validity of the will of Peter Reid, who died last spring, leaving an estate of $3,000,000, was presented by former Governor John W. Griggs before Judge Abram Klenert in the Orphans' Court. The will is being contested by eight first cousins who were not made beneficiaries.

The only witness in the case yesterday was William W. McClench, president of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company, who drew the will. The contestants were represented by a large array of counsel.

TWO GIRLS CLAIM YOUTH, ONE IS MARRIED TO HIM

Elizabeth, Nov. 14.—Vincent Krusnisky, of 162 Bayway, twenty-nine years old, was locked up at police headquarters yesterday on the charge of Mary Levinsky. Miss Katie Soss, a Westfield girl, appeared and said she had a prior claim on his affections.

Judge O. P. Mahon didn't agree with Miss Soss, and while Detective Patrick Brogan took Miss Levinsky and Krusnisky to St. Adelbert's church to be married, Miss Soss was kept under guard so that she would not cause any trouble at the ceremony.

AS TO THIS ISSUE.

To use a stereotyped phrase of the old-fashioned political party platform, "we point with pride" to this, the industrial edition of the Plainfield Daily Press. Let us say, in presenting this issue that we do not expect, neither do we consider we deserve, any credit for this, the best written and most comprehensive story of Plainfield that has ever been published. All the praise is due to our public spirited citizens, professional and business men, men in all walks of life, working together to "Do It For Plainfield."

When the Plainfield Daily Press decided to add to its enterprises and achievements of the last twenty-three months the publication of an industrial edition telling the story of Plainfield in 1913, truthfully and thoroughly, it sent for Albert E. Walker, of Charlottesville, Virginia, undoubtedly the best manager and director of newspaper special editions in the country. Mr. Walker brought his best staff of men here and set to work at once. The result as shown by this issue speaks for itself of Mr. Walker's great ability in this line. He is a superior man in the business and while a community of 35,000 people was rather a small field for his efforts he found that the degree of civic pride and the intelligence of the residents were far above the average.

Judging it by this special issue are we not justified in being proud of Plainfield and in continually attracting attention to it as an ideal residential and industrial community.

AN EXCELLENT IDEA.

Pupils in the High Schools and the older pupils in the Grammar Schools throughout the State are engaged in memorizing that immortal speech of Abraham Lincoln, familiarly called the Gettysburg Address. This is in accordance with a recommendation made by State Commisioner of Education Calvin N. Kendall, who explained his request in this fashion:

"Wednesday, November 19, will be the fiftieth anniversary of the delivery of Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg address. Quite apart from its sentiments of lofty patriotism, the Gettysburg address is universally recognized as one of the great masterpieces of English prose. It is recommended that all pupils in the high schools, and the older pupils in the grammar schools, commit to memory and recite it on the afternoon of the anniversary."

In addition to its value because of the patriotic sentiments expressed and the fact that it is a masterpiece of literature, the pupils will profit by complying with the recommendation for memory tests develop the mind.

WARNS YOUNG WOMEN.

New Jersey's Acting Governor is only thirty-one years of age but like the Acting Mayor of New York he has a whole lot of sound sense and has the respect of the people—and that is worth something in these days when citizens are so free in unfriendly and undeserved criticism.

Albert L. Force.

With his brother, the late W. L. Force, he founded the Daily Press and retired January 1, 1912, when succeeded by the Plainfield Press Co.

Governor Tayloe has asked the newspapers to warn young women that their future welfare and happiness will be put in jeopardy if they go to the Pacific coast with the desire and expectation of securing employment incident to the Panama Exposition opening two years hence. Already, as he is informed by the San Francisco Y. M. C. A., many young women who have gathered there from Eastern States have exhausted their funds and are in distress. Penniless and friendless, the dangers that threaten them are self-evident.

Pitfalls are only too many for young women no matter what protections are thrown around them, but when far from home and friends and dependent upon meagre earnings for their sustenance their situation is one of constant danger to irretrievable disaster. It is worst still when they are thus located and cannot obtain employment.

We feel quite sure that each newspaper in the State will do all in its powers to sound the warning as requested by the Acting Governor.

As is its annual custom, the Plainfield Anti-Tuberculosis Society will sell the Red Cross stamps during the Christmas season. Every stamp bought here means just so much more money for the local work.

Just wait and see the scramble for the county judgeship in Union, should President Wilson elevate James C. Connelly to the Circuit Court bench.

The contributing editor for tomorrow's issue will be Champlin L. Riley. He will discuss "The Model Tenement House," on which subject he is an authority.

We asked you to "Do It For Plainfield." You have done it FOR PLAINFIELD and you have done it well.

COUPLE SURPRISED BY CHURCH FRIENDS

Mr. and Mrs. Sears Celebrate Their Silver Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Norman C. Sears, of Westervelt avenue, were agreeably surprised by about seventy of their friends at their home last night, the occasion being their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. The couple were taken completely unawares and the first intimation of anything unusual they had was was when the Dutch Arms band filed up on their front porch and began to render martial music.

The affair was arranged by members of Mrs. Sears' Sunday-school class in the Trinity Reformed church and they were assisted in arranging the affair by Miss Jennie Sears, daughter of the couple. Following an evening of entertainment consisting of games and the rendition of vocal and instrumental numbers by the band and other guests a supper was served which had previously been prepared in the home of Mrs. George Webster, a neighbor.

Mr. and Mrs. Sears were married in North Branch, four miles the other side of Somerville, November 13, 1888, Mrs. Sears having formerly been Miss Elizabeth C. TenEyck, of that place. Mr. Sears came from New York and is at present employed in Tepper Brothers' store on West Front street.

COLBY SPENT $15,449.59.

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press.)

Trenton, Nov. 14.—Although he received only about 41,000 votes in New Jersey for Governor, Everett Colby, the Progressive candidate spent $15,449.59 in his campaign. This was shown today when complying with the corrupt practices act, he filed his statement of campaign contributions and expenditures with the Secretary of State. He is the first of the Gubernatorial candidates to file such a statement.

SHOOK OFF DEATH.

Ordeal Through Which Archdeacon Stuck Once Passed.

Archdeacon Stuck, who climbed Mount McKinley, the great American peak, once had his life saved in a most extraordinary way.

Late one evening, while exploring in the arctic regions, he was unlucky enough to fall through the ice into the water on his way back to camp. He was accompanied by an Eskimo boy in charge of a sledge and a team of dogs, and the boy soon had him out again, but as the thermometer was then about 70 degrees below zero the possibility of saving his life seemed very remote. He was wet through, of course, and before a fire could have been got well alight the chances were that he would have frozen to death.

The resourceful boy thought of a better plan than that. The explorer was already scarcely able to move, but the boy took one of the dogs out of the traces and forced the archdeacon to take its place. Then he lashed the unfortunate man's legs until he was compelled to run, applying his whip mercilessly every time the archdeacon showed signs of flagging.

In this way the boy kept him moving rapidly toward their camp, and by the time they reached it the terrible lassitude of death that had threatened to overcome the archdeacon had been shaken off.—Pearson's Weekly.

SOOTHING STEINITZ.

Pathetic Scene After Lasker Had Beaten the Old Master.

For thirty years the late William Steinitz beat every player who ventured to oppose him and was at last beaten by a mere youth. I had prophesied that his hour had come, writes Robert J. Buckle in the Chess Amateur, and at Hastings the moment he saw me he rushed in with a redhot attack. "How dare you say Lasker would beat me?" he almost screamed in response to my outstretched hand and attempt at a smile of welcome.

Lasker had actually beaten him, as I had foretold. The crowd looked on for a row. We were in the dining room of the Queen's—a score of masters present. I took his arm and led him outside.

"You had no right to say it," he cried, "and I demand an explanation." He continued to protest until we had reached a quiet corner. "Why did you say it—why did you say it?" he repeated shrilly.

I waited till he had blown off steam, then "Because you were sixty," I said. That softened him. He examined me with his innocent blue eyes.

"A man of twenty-two," I continued, "after a hard day's play is fresh next morning. A man of sixty-two is still brain fagged. You were giving the odds of forty years. It was too much."

A Sunset In Scotland.

It was a sunset of strange tints that evening, a background of clouds of deep violet tipped with crimson. The sky, of the very palest blue, had been turned by the brightness of the sun into a lake of silver, in which floated small fleecy cloudlets of brilliant rose pink, like islets floating in a crystal sea. The rays of the sun behind the purple clouds threw long shafts of dazzling brightness, which tipped the dark background with silver as the sun kisses the petals of a daisy. Every peak in the long range of mountains on the west was rose tipped, but the highest of them all towered clear and cone shaped in the distance, glistening in a shimmering mantle of silver and pale blue, as if the sky had wrapped it round its own cerulean color.—"A Garden of Spices," by A. Keith Fraser.

Do We Dodge Death?

Can we mortals always be trusted to do the right thing? The fear of death is general. Life is sacrificed every hour because the rules of health are not obeyed. Death is the one great monster of dread and from whom all flee. Yet how many safeguard their living in such a way as to avert his coming? The rules of health are violated because of the immunity we feel, but finally the penalty must be paid. No argument is needed to enforce the lesson. Everybody knows it. The rules of right living are clear, explicit. Vice, intemperance, wrong living, overeating as well as overdrinking, continue to pay their tribute to the undertaker and the graveyard.—Leslie's.

POLICE OF SPAIN

In Andalusia They Are Seen In All Their Shabby Glory.

ARSENALS ON MOVING LEGS.

They Will Put a Pistol to Your Head With the Greatest Politeness and Lock You In a Cell With Infinite Courtesy—Mines of Misinformation.

He is polite, is the Spanish policeman. There is a live and let live air about him. He possesses neither the easy and kindly dignity of the policeman of London nor the truculence of the policeman of New York, but he is very, very human. And he has the blessed gift that no other brand of policeman seems to possess of appearing to be more than an ordinary person.

True, he is armed. He is an arsenal moving on legs. But something tells you that he wouldn't really hurt a fly. I like him.

And here I must say that he is not to be confounded with the guardia civil. The guardia civil is quite another person altogether. He is stern and austere, and he patrols country districts and lonesome mountainous places. He was used to put down the bandeleros, those adepts in the art of swift, forceful borrowing, whose presence did so much to heighten the romance of old sunny Spain. The guardia civil killed off these gay financial artists, but now, even after his job has been finished, he still wears a cold, austere air. He is indeed not to be confounded with my friend the policeman.

The first time I met the Spanish policeman was one night in a certain town in Andalusia. Truth compels me to state that I met him in a professional way. I was indulging with others in a row when he appeared—in force. I was gathered in by five of him. But how polite he was! He put his pistol to my head, or, rather, the five of them put their pistols to my head, and made me feel that I would be doing him the greatest of favors by coming with him to the police station.

The whole affair was courtliness itself. To be arrested in such a manner was to have a privilege conferred upon one. At the police station I was again treated with politeness and in the end—with a locked door.

The Spanish policeman is not too well paid. He sports not an ambassadorial salary. All he gets is 2 pesetas a day. He is therefore amenable to the friendly and considerate tip. This, I must hasten to say, however, makes him none the less a worthy and effective guardian of law and order.

He is shabby of uniform. But that is not his fault. It is the fault of a frugal government. In appearance he looks something like an English postman and an impoverished Spanish officer. But there is artistry about his shabbiness. He fits into the picture.

Very often, especially in Andalusia, he is old and rather infirm. One is often sorry for him as he bumps along with his sword trundling behind him. But he has the wisdom that goes with age. If he sees a row he looks at it with his blind eye and allows it to simmer down—a very good thing with rows.

If you ask a Spanish policeman a question he is politeness itself. But his answer will be wrong. He is a mine of misleading information. He doesn't know. Indeed, what he doesn't know about the names of streets and the way to get to them and things generally would fill an encyclopedia. If you want to know anything you must not ask a Spanish policeman. Respect him, for he is of the best, but don't ask him questions.

In the nighttime he sometimes carries a lance. He is then called a sereno, presumably because he brings serenity upon troubled waters. He looks very picturesque on a clear, star lit night and makes one think of the times of old—the times one reads about in historical romances. But he is always harmless, always peaceful and ready for a friendly gossip. He is really a sereno—a serene person. His lance is merely there to round off his artistic and romantic appearance. And it is not a sharp lance. I know, for I have often felt the edge of it—when the sereno courteously handed it to me for inspection. But it looks artistic when seen in the distance on a star lit night.

The policeman of Catalonia is somewhat different from the policeman of Andalusia. He is alert, pushful and interfering. He is apt to want to know who you are and what you are and what your business may be. But Catalonia is not Spain. It is a place where the people rush about doing all manner of things. They like work, and, what is worse, they like other people to work. And their policemen take after them.

No, the Catalonian policeman cannot truly be called a Spanish policeman. If you want to see the true Spanish policeman you must go down to Andalusia.

And you will like him. You will feel for him the friendliest regard. You will see him ambling casually along with stooped shoulders and trundling sword. And should you have to make his acquaintance in a professional way you will find that he will deal with you as an easy and kindly father would deal with you. If he arrests you he will arrest you in a way that won't injure your feelings. I can recommend him.—Bart Kennedy in London Star.

He conquers twice who restrains himself in victory.—Syrus.

Canal's Last Problem Cucaracha Slide. Gaillard, Digger of Cut

CUCARACHA slide at Culebra cut is a thorn in the side of the progress at the big ditch. Its persistent sliding has now caused a barrier to waters of Gatun lake, which after the dynamiting of Gamboa dike it was supposed would flow into and fill Culebra cut. A channel recently cut through the slide enabled the waters of the Atlantic to mingle with those of the Pacific.

Lieutenant Colonel David Du Bose Gaillard, who was invalided home almost immediately after he had completed the digging of Culebra cut, was battling with the problem of Curacha when he was compelled to seek rest. This slide was his last and visibly weakened but still unconquered enemy. When Colonel Gaillard went to the isthmus he was put in charge of all excavations in the canal prism except that incidental to lock and draw construction. This meant that it was his duty to break down the mountains of the isthmus of Panama.

The Culebra cut runs through the backbone of the American continent. It is eight miles long, and it was the only place on the isthmus which presented a continuous problem of dry digging.

The army officer dug the Culebra cut "to the bottom," but at Cucaracha and in its immediate vicinity the earth and the rocks of the mountains, finding a part of their foundation removed, began to move toward and into the excavation, seeking for a new foothold. The engineer dug indomitably. Hill after hill found its angle of repose, and the landslide stopped save at Cucaracha and at points close to it, where the sliding was persistent.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL DAVID DU BOSE GAILLARD, WHO DIRECTED THE DIGGING OF CULEBRA CUT.

CULEBRA CUT AS IT LOOKS TODAY, SHOWING SECTION DREDGE WORKING ON CUCARACHA SLIDE.

Cucaracha's deposited material is, however, light. It seems to be the belief of the engineers that the suction pumps of the dredges can take out the deposit and that when finally this persistent cockroach, for that is what Cucaracha means, gets its angle of repose there will be no danger that the ships of the world will find the feet of the cockroach troubling their progress.

When Colonel Gaillard started his isthmian work he knew that he must overcome the landslides which were certain to start when the mountains through which he was to make his way showed that their footholds were becoming insecure. He made his way fighting. Literally he was obliged to shackle the feet of the great hills. He did it, and engineers say that his work is for all time.

While the work which confronted Gaillard at Culebra cut was not perhaps the greatest individual piece of engineering on the isthmus, it generally was regarded as the most trying and probably the most difficult because of the problems which were presented. Colonel Gaillard during the early years of his contest with the landslides never knew what a morning was to bring forth. Overnight the mountains were likely to break loose and to cover with their deposits the tracks and even the cars which were used to remove deposited material. Steam shovels were likely to be overturned, and there was always the danger in the rainy season that the slides would form dams, cut off the drainage of the cut and flood the scene of the working.

It was the hard work, the nervous strain, the worry and the tropical climate combined which broke the engineer's health just before the hour of his final triumph.

CHILD WELFARE EXPERTS GATHER IN WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.—The four-day session of the fourth annual meeting of the American Society for the Study and Prevention of Infant Mortality, which opened here today has attracted a large number of child welfare experts, physicians, statisticians, and representatives of various boards and organizations in some way concerned with the welfare of infants. Dr. L. Emmett Holt, of New York, the president of the organization, called the gathering to order and will preside at all meetings.

Eugenics and prenatal care are two of the most important subjects which will be discussed during the meeting. Other topics which will be taken up and discussed fully by the scores of delegates include problems of infant hygiene and infant feeding, standards of training for infant welfare nursing, continuation schools of home-making, the relation of vital statistics to plans for social betterment, and the relation of the plan for the conservation of infant life to the general ideals of conservation.

Among those who have been placed on the program for discussion of the subject of prenatal care, which will be taken up at tomorrow's session, is Mrs. Max West, of the United States children's bureau, who is the author of the recently published government document on prenatal care. Dr. J. W. Schereschewsky, of the public health service, has been assigned to lead the discussion on the relation of heat and infant mortality. A symposium on the use of vital statistics in preserving infant life will be opened by Dr. W. C. Woodward, health officer of the District of Columbia. This will include brief statements by various health officers and others on the necessity of bettering the system of keeping birth statistics in this country. Dr. Cressy L. Wilbur, of the census bureau, is expected to be one of the speakers on that subject.

to the $20,000 note settlement would in the words of Artemas Ward be "2 mutch," and Mr. Dawson desisted.

There was no attempt, however, on Mr. Dawson's part to show that Smith ever got the $2,496.01 mentioned in the release.

In the course of a colloquy between court and counsel for the defense over the $20,000 note transaction, Mr. Colie volunteered the comment that the arrangement for the taking up of the note was entirely right, the transaction as to the subsequent recovery was "entirely wrong."

Two releases and a receipt, the latter of like purport as the releases, had relation to 408 shares of stock in the Weaver & Benjamin Cattle Company, were put in evidence. As all three instruments covered exactly the same shares, Mr. Colie wanted to know, "Why so many acknowledgements?"

The complainant nor any one else entitled to speak seemed able to enlighten him.

The case will go on again next Wednesday.

THE DAILY PRESS IN DUNELLEN will be found on sale or delivered to any address every afternoon by Edward Pennock, druggist and newsdealer.

LITTLE TALKS BY THE WANT AD MAN

Copyright, 1913, The Int. Syndicate, Baltimore.

No. 31.

"SOME philosopher once said: "There would be no profit in owning a gold mine if somebody else didn't want gold."

It is upon the law of supply and demand that all business is based.

The merchant who best advertises his wares is most likely to supply the demand of his fellow-beings, provided his wares are right and his prices reasonable.

People with demands to be supplied depend upon the newspapers to guide them to stores where the most economical and satisfactory shopping is possible.

This means that the modern newspaper is really something more than a dispenser of news—it is also a shoppers' guide—a directory in which the ever-changing story of the business man is sure of wide and respectful attention.

People read the Classified—the Want Ad. pages—read them closely, regularly, confidently. Write out your announcement today—now—Mr. Merchant, and put your name and your business before the great purchasing public—put your claim for more business where it is sure of consideration—in the CLASSIFIED columns of this newspaper.

LOZIER CAR CROSS-COUNTRY TRIP RECORDED BY FILM

Neil Patterson, the former Olympic athlete, who has just left San Francisco on a motoring trip to New York city, has introduced a decided novelty in transcontinental travel. Patterson writes from Los Angeles that he has secured the services of a moving-picture operator and intends to record the 5,000-mile tour of his Lozier Six in a film story.

"We have over 20,000 feet of film, in addition to material for taking 5,000 individual photographs," says Patterson, "and, judging by some of the pictures we have already taken on the Pacific coast, the stunt should be a winner."

A number of well-known Detroit capitalists are backing Patterson and his companion, Ben Holladay, in their effort to secure the first moving pictures of a trip across the American continent.

Arrangements have been made to follow the Lincoln highway as closely as possible and supply depots will be established en route to furnish the travelers with additional films and photographic supplies.

The complete film record of the trip from coast to coast is expected to exceed in interest the majority of travel pictures taken abroad. In addition the pictures will have a larger importance from an educational standpoint in boosting good roads and illustrating the present condition of the Lincoln highway route. The party expects to reach New York city by December 15.

IMPROVEMENTS FOR 1914 AS SEEN IN THE OVERLAND

Nearly all of the 1914 models have made their appearance and so far no startling radical changes have been disclosed. Most all show mechanical betterments, but the great tendency has been towards body refinement and more complete equipment.

With the machines that sell up in the thousands it has been very easy to add all the latest wrinkles which make for comfortable operation, but it has been a problem for the builder of the moderate-priced machine to do likewise and not raise the price.

The 1914 Overland is a good example of what has been done in this respect. The new equipment includes electric headlights, electric side, dash and tail lights, storage battery and ammeter. Also mohair top and boot, clear-vision windshield, Stewart speedometer, electric horn, tools and tire repair kit.

The wheel base has been increased to 114 inches and, although the Overland has always been an easy car to start with the crank, it is fitted with the Gray Davis electric starter and generator. This raises the price slightly, but those who desire this luxury will not object to the small addition.

BRIDAL COUPLE MAKE LONG MOTORCYCLE TRIP

No one in Napoleon, Ohio, was surprised when it was announced that the bride of Harry W. Long had chosen the motorcycle as the means of taking their honeymoon tour. Not because motorcycle honeymoons have become so common in Ohio—though there are numerous couples in the Buckeye State that have chosen this means of spending their honeymoon but because Mr. and Mrs. Long have been known as two of the most enthusiastic riders in Napoleon.

Mr. Long has a side-car attachment for his motorcycle, but though, Mrs. Long says side-car riding is better than riding on a train, she prefers the saddle and on this tour she is riding on the tandem seat of her husband's cycle.

About the same time the Longs were starting on their long honeymoon trip, another Ohio couple, Captain and Mrs. Glen, of Cleveland, were also starting life together awheel. And the captain gives credit to his motorcycle for having a bride at all, for it was his dexterous handling of the two-wheeler that first interested Mrs. Glen in her future husband.

HOW TO DRIVE YOUR CAR THROUGH MUD AND SAND

There is quite a knack in driving successfully through sand and clay, according to Dr. Charles G. Percival who took a car 55,000 miles, and from Mexico to the Arctic Circle.

"In heavy sand deflate the tires about one-third," he says, "and if the sand will not be subdued then put on your chains, but be sure and pump the tires up after passing through the sand, in soft mud, clay and the like do not deflate the tires, but put on your chains. If it is bad do not continue to spin the driving wheel, which only makes the hole larger, and lets the car down to the axle or differential. Don't fill up the hole with stones and other rubbish. Jack up the car on a flat board, with a solid stone or log foundation beneath, and then fill in the hole you have made with anything solid, but level with the board, and drive off onto it. A great deal of trouble can be avoided by keeping to the center of the road as much as possible."

TIRES WITHSTAND HAIL OF MEXICTAN BULLETS

General Lucio Blanco, commanding the constitutionalist forces in Mexico, undoubtedly owes his life to the effectiveness of his tires to withstand the bullets from the Federal sharp-shooters.

Through flying bullets General Blanco drove his Firestone-shod car into the thickest of the recent battle at Matamoros, Mexico. Tires, riddled with bullet holes and jagged scars, are mute testimonials that the Federals could shoot straight, although none of them penetrated the tough fabric. One large cut especially appears to be made by a glancing ball from a machine gun.

The tires certainly proved their worth and quality, for Blanco never stopped. Firestone tires saved him from being taken prisoner. His life depended much on his tires and the general showed rare, good judgment when he made his careful selection.

The many winning race drivers have shown the same kind of judgment in selecting dependable tires as Firestone tires have been on most of the winners this season.

UNIFORMS FOR INSPECTORS IS THE PLAN OF MOTOR DEPT.

Trenton, Nov. 14.—Letters pertaining to the enforcement of the automobile law were considered yesterday at a conference between Commissioner Job H. Lippincott and the inspectors of the State Motor Vehicle Department. One question discussed was the advisability of procuring uniforms for the inspectors next spring.

This, it was thought, would avoid much difficulty, since a signal from a uniformed officer would give a motorist no excuse for failing to stop upon the ground that he did not know he had been hailed by an inspector. It is probable that the suggestion of uniforms will be put into effect.

Another question debated was the advisability of dividing the State into two general sections to facilitate the enforcement of the motor vehicle law. No decision was reached upon this point.

GREAT-GREAT GRANDMOTHER RIDES A MOTORCYCLE

Almost every pleasant afternoon last summer Mrs. Catherine Osborne, who is ninety-two years old, took a spin about Warren, O., on a motorcycle. Mrs. Osborne rides with her great-great-grandson, William Bowen.

"When I was eighty-six years old I had my first ride on a train," said Mrs. Osborne. "And I thought that experience was the crowning event of my life. But I didn't even begin to live until this summer, when I took my first motorcycle ride. It's the greatest sport imaginable."

MOTORCYCLE NOTES

A lineman of the Chicago Telephone Company recently covered eighty-two miles on his motorcycle in one day. During the day he made forty-three stops, in many instances having to climb telephone poles in order to make the necessary repairs to wires.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen A. Scott, of Marion, Ind., have just completed a 500-mile motorcycle honeymoon trip. Another Indiana couple who recently made their honeymoon trip by motorcycle was Mr. and Mrs. Ross Berry, of Bruceville.

The first girl motorcyclist to become a member of the Wanderers' Motorcycle Club of Toronto, Canada, was Miss Mabel Wilcockson.

Finding the horse and buggy method of transportation too slow, C. R. Adams, a grain buyer of Mound City, Kan., has purchased a motorcycle to use in visiting the farmers in Linn county.

Richard Scott, a rural mail carrier, of Cambridge City, Ind., recently covered his twenty-five-mile route on a motorcycle in ninety-seven minutes. He delivered mail to ninety-seven boxes on the route.

350 MILES DAILY.

Four one-day trips of 350 miles each were made in quick succession recently by Arthur Holmes, chief engineer of the H. H. Franklin Manufacturing Company. Mr. Holmes, driving a new Franklin Six-Thirty touring car with full passenger load, left Syracuse at six o'clock one morning and drove 350 miles to Boston, arriving there at five minutes past seven that evening. The run was made in 13 hours and 5 minutes. Two days later he returned to Syracuse in 12 hours and 48 minutes, averaging over 27 miles per hour. Later in the same week Mr. Holmes duplicated the performance in practically the same time and each trip was made without mishap.

NEW RECORD MADE.

A new record for a motorcycle trip from Chicago to Denver has been established by Harvey Bernard and Jack Purdy, of Chicago. Riding on a single speed, eight-horse power motorcycle, with a sidecar attachment. The young men made the 1,200-mile trip in just four days, riding only in the day time. The weight of the outfit exclusive of the riders was 580 pounds.

PLAINFIELD ELKS TOOK A BIG DROP

Week's Averages for Individuals and Teams Shows Many Decreases.

LOCALS ARE SEVENTH

Newark Has Displaced Paterson In First Rank and Leads League In Every Department of the Game—Clauss Still Leads Individually.

By virtue of the trio of wins hung up at the expense of the Plainfield tribe of Elk bowlers, the Newark quintet rose to first place in the league standing snatching the top rung from the Patersonians, who until this week cherished a big lead. Newark now leads in percentage, high score and team average and is traveling at a speedy clip out in front of the other nine contestants. Tied for third place in the team standing last week the Queen City herd looked big to its followers but the upset of last night caused a fall that sunk as far as a tie for seventh place before the bottom was struck.

Captain Clauss, of the Betsytown herd, is still on top of the individual average pile with a mark of 192.8 and his nearest rival is Captain Burton, of the Brunswick five, with 187.8 to his credit. Greenwald, of Brunswick, came up from fourteenth place to mingle with the leading quartet and Earle, of Hoboken rose from twenty-seventh to fifth place during the week. "Bill" Nash, who led the Plainfield pinners until the blow-up of last night, sank from his coveted eighth place to twenty-first and Blatz rose to the high water mark of the Plainfielders, although he dropped from tenth to eleventh position.

Campbell dropped from thirteenth to thirty-fourth place, Kiely went from the thirty-first row to the forty-second and Stout lowered his percentage from forty-second to forty-eighth place. Thus, every one of the Queen City representatives took a drop during the week and most of the falls were long and costly.

Last week Newark and Paterson formed the only curtain between the locals and the first place rung, for they are now confronted with the shadows formed by Hoboken, New York, Jersey City, New Brunswick, Paterson and Newark.

NEWARK PIN-KNIGHTS IN FIRST POSITION

Plainfield Elks Roll Poorly in Newark and Drop all Three.

Newark bowlers have taken first place in the Elks' League. The trick was turned last night on the Newark alleys when the Green street pin-knights took three games in a row from the Plainfield quintet, thus passing the Patersonians, who had been showing the way in the competition. In the other Elks' League match rolled last night the New York pin-knights succeeded in getting two games out of three on the Hoboken alleys.

It was classy pinning that the Newarks did last night the three totals being well over the 900 mark, while the visitors' best score was 843. Fred Clark did himself proud with 222 and two marks of 200, for an average of 207-1. Howard Williams rolled 214 and Dick Erler 213. The home team did its best pinning in the first game, in which it tallied 958.

The match in Hoboken was not marked by any great amount of clever pinning. The New Yorks were there for 915 in the second contest, this being the high total of the match. The closest game was the last, which went New York's way by thirty pins. L. Westphal's 231 and Engelke's 211 were the feature marks.

DOUBLE BASKETBALL CARD ON HOPE CHAPEL COURT

Another double-header is scheduled to be played on the Hope Chapel basketball court tomorrow night when the first team of the chapel takes the floor in the main attraction against the Good-Will Fife and Drum Corps, of Perth Amboy, and the Boys' Club aggregation pits its strength against a North Plainfield junior five. Both of the games give promise of being unusually interesting and Hope followers are looking forward to the first team clash with special interest as the Good-Will players are coming here heralded as winners.

The Amboy five has established a good record against Newark and surrounding towns and are confident of taking the locals into camp. During the week the chapelites played a hard game at Paterson but are back in condition again and despite the setback claim they will wallop the visitors tomorrow night.

BORO GIRLS' MANAGER COMPLETING SCHEDULE

Miss Lillian Spencer, manager of the girls' basketball team of the North Plainfield High School, is completing her schedule of games for the coming season and has already signed up contests with Plainfield, Reading Academy, Westfield, Roselle and Roselle Park.

The borough feminine quintet is practising regularly in Saengerbund Hall and the N. P. H. S. five, although lighter than last year's quintet, will probably be equally as fast.

PUMPELLY KICKING GOAL FROM PLACEMENT — KETCHAM KICKING GOAL, OAKES HOLDING BALL

Above are shown two of the players Yale counts upon to help materially in its endeavor to defeat Princeton at New Haven on November 15. Ketcham is expected to have a steadying influence upon his team. Pumpelly is being primed especially for this game and the game against Harvard a week later. He will be used much as Kennard was used by Harvard a year or two ago, when he was pushed into the game at the psychological moment to kick a field goal. That is Pumpelly's specialty, and the Eli coaches are depending upon him to produce whenever the Bulldog eleven is able to work the ball to within scoring distance of the goal.

COMPANY K WILL PLAY N. P. H. S. COURT FIVE

Another pre-season practise game will be played by the North Plainfield High School boys' basketball team in Saengerbund Hall tonight, when the Company K five will lineup against the schoolboys. Yesterday, Captain Burner put his men through a light shooting practise but there was no game.

Addison Newkirk, one of the regulars, is on the sick list, and his coupled with Love's injury has materially weakened the team. Two substitutes will therefore be in the game tonight.

TWO BASKETBALL GAMES IN THE Y. M. C. A. GYM

A double bill of basketball will be staged in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium tomorrow night, this being the first bargain bill of the year for Y. M. C. A. basketball followers. At 8:15 o'clock the Marathon A. C., a uniformed quintet of North Plainfield, will take the floor against the Grace Church boys' five, playing between the halves of the Y. M. C. A. and Newark game.

The big attraction which brings together Newark and Plainfield promises to be a repetition of the two previous games in the association gym which were both interesting and close and some good basketball is promised for tomorrow night.

NUMBER CODE FOR THE FANS BENEFIT

Dartmouth Players Will Try the Following Code in Tomorrow's Game.

That New York football enthusiasts look upon the Dartmouth-Carlisle game at the Polo Grounds tomorrow as something well worth seeing is indicated by the way tickets are going in the advance sale—like the proverbial hot cakes. Though the disbursal of pasteboards has been on at the office of the New York baseball Club for only two days, it was announced by the officers of the club Wednesday that over 3,000 already have been disposed of.

It is likely that one of the biggest crowds in the history of football in New York will attend. Enough tickets will be left for the regular sale at the box office windows tomorrow to accommodate probably all who wish to buy, though the majority of the choice reserved seats are being sold in advance.

When the Dartmouth players try the "number" scheme at the Polo Grounds tomorrow the regulars and substitutes will be numbered as follows:

Hogsett, 1; Pudrith, 6; Beer, 8; Dunbar, 9; Colby, 10; McAuliffe, 7; Loudon, 2; Ghee, 11; Llewellyn, 12; Whitney, 3; Curtis, 4; Murdock, 5; Lafferty, 28; Redfield, 18; Wanamaker, 27; Cavanaugh, 29; Child, 16; Soutar, 24; Rogers, 14; Hinman, 13; Hickox, 17; Milmore, 15; Cumisky, 20; McCullough, 25; Hutchins, 26; Cannon, 21; Tuck, 22; Tucker, 23; Winship, 19; Ramage, 30.

BEST ROAD TO YALE PRINCETON CONTEST

After further investigation of the roads to New Haven the Bureau of Tours of The Automobile Club of America wishes to notify the many automobilists who will motor to the Yale-Princeton football game in New Haven, tomorrow, of changes in conditions since former reports were sent out.

The road from Westport through Bridgeport is in fine condition. A detour through the city of Bridgeport is not necessary and motorists from Westport entering Bridgeport on Fairfield avenue may follow the old direct route straight through the city.

Connecticut avenue construction work is finished and is better than the macadam streets. Stratford avenue is paved with wood and is open through Stratford. This gives a choice of routes and the latter is shorter and probably better for automobile traffic.

The direct road entering New Haven on the Milford Turnpike is quite worn so that it is rough. Automobilists are advised to turn off in Bridgeport or in Stratford and go by way of Derby to New Haven. This is a far better road and has the additional advantage of avoiding running through New Haven itself.

Yale Field is on the outskirts of New Haven on the road from Derby. To avoid the congested streets of New Haven, which will be crowded with over 5,000 automobiles it will be convenient to go the few extra miles necessary.

USE AUTOMOBILE IN BLASTING STUMPS

Farmer in Wisconsin Uses Regal Car for This Novel Purpose.

A farmer in northern Wisconsin recently purchased a Regal motor car and almost immediately discovered a new and novel use to which it could be put.

It seems he had secured a piece of acreage some distance from his farm which was thickly dotted with stumps. He set out to clear the land by blasting out the stumps and here pressed the Regal into service.

The necessary tools and dynamite were loaded into the rear section of the car and with his helpers, the owner drove to the distant field. The holes were then drilled for the dynamite sticks, the charges put in place and wired.

The usual method of blasting stumps is to connect a slow burning fuse to the charge of powder or dynamite. When all is in readiness the fuse is lighted with a match and the person who does the lighting takes himself off to await developments. This is a rather hazardous occupation, for sometimes the fuse smoulders for so long a time that it is considered out and often fires the blast just as an inspection is being made. Results under these circumstances are not to be desired.

Here the farmer showed considerable ingenuity, for he followed the method of blasting in vogue at stone quarries, that is, he wired several stumps in connection to be fired simultaneously. His resourcefulness did not end here, however, for he then utilized the dry cells in the car for the source of the necessary electricity to fire the blasts.

Much time is saved and practically all danger is eliminated by this unique method of blasting and great headway is being made in clearing the land.

IMPORTERS' AUTO SALON OPENED TO AMERICAN CARS

Several high grade American motor cars are to be included among the exhibits at the 1914 Importers' Automobile Salon. This announcement followed a meeting of the Importers Automobile Alliance.

At this meeting five applications on behalf of American built cars for space at the coming salon were considered and two were accepted. These are the Simplex and the Fiat, which will be exhibited side by side, with the leading cars of France, Germany, England, Belgium, Italy and Austria.

It is reported that two and possibly three other American makes will be exhibited at the 1914 salon. As in previous years the 1914 Automobile Salon will be under the management of Stephen J. Kjeldsen, of the Mercedes Import Company. E. Lascaris, manager of the De Dion Zouton, is president; T. Adams, of the Lancia, vice-president, and F. Sewell, of the Minerva Motors Co., treasurer of the Importers Automobile Alliance, Inc., under the auspices of which the annual salons are held.

THOUSANDS GATHER FOR BIG FOOTBALL BATTLE

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 14.—Thousands of followers of the colors of Yale and Princeton are gathering here for the game which will award football honors to one or the other university tomorrow. Hotels, clubs, fraternity houses and dormitories have been thrown open to the visiting classmen and graduates, and a large part of the city is gayly decorated in their honor.

Tomorrow's game will be played on the fortieth anniversary of the first meeting of Yale and Princeton on the gridiron. The initial contest between the two colleges took place here Nov. 5, 1873, and was won by Princeton. No games were played in 1874 and 1875, but the two universities have met every year since. Of the thirty-eigh contests Yale has won twenty, ten have been won by Princeton, and there were eight tie games.

Interest in tomorrow's game is intense, despite the fact that Yale's showing this season has not been such as to inspire her followers with an overabundance of enthusiasm. There has been no diminution in the demand for tickets, however, and a record-breaking crowd is expected to be on hand. The officials of the game will be: Referee, William Langford, Trinity College; umpire, Niel Snow, Michigan; linesman, David Fultz, Brown University.

The bureau of labor statistics of the Department of Labor of the United States has issued a bulletin urging the prohibition of night work for children eighteen years old or younger.

Statistics issued by the United States Government show that in proportion to the number of men employed there are more fatal accidents in the metal mines of the country than in the coal mines.

When the executive officials and delegates to the convention of the American Federation of Labor passed through Butte, Mont., recently on their way to Seattle they were presented with unique souvenirs by the Montana Federation of Labor. The souvenirs were in the form of a miniature show case containing samples of gold, silver, copper and other valuable ores produced in Montana.

MADE TO MARRY BY POLICE, MAN QUITS BRIDE AT ALTAR

Passaic, Nov. 14.—Instead of going to his wedding in a coach, as had been arranged, Michael Olko, of 153 Third street, went to St. Joseph's Polish church in the police patrol. He was accompanied by a policeman as his best man. His bride, Miss Matie Urhay, of 80 Fourth street, also was in the wagon.

The policeman stood by Olko's side until the couple had been pronounced man and wife. Then the bride and her friends left the church through one door, while Olko quietly withdrew through a rear door. There was a wedding reception Wednesday night at the bride's home, but the bridegroom was absent.

Olko was arrested early Wednesday on complaint of Miss Urhay. They had been engaged for some time, it is said, last Saturday being the date set for the wedding. Miss Urhay says she learned Olko was paying attention to another girl, so she demanded an explanation. When none was forthcoming, she had him arrested.

When Olko was arraigned in court Wednesday, Judge Costello told him he'd have to marry Miss Urhay or go to jail. It took Olko several hours to decide to marry.

So the police bundled the recalcitrant bridegroom and the bride into a patrol wagon, took them around for a marriage license and then drove them to the church.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

The Housewife's Daily Economy Calendar

FRANCES MARSHALL

Variety In Cheap Green Vegetables.

Greens should be made wide use of by the economical housewife in winter. The fresh fruits and vegetables that add so much to the summer diet are lacking and their most economical substitutes is greens.

But there is no excuse for serving the same sort of greens day after day. Everyone tires after an indefinite serving of boiled spinach. There are so many ways of preparing it that it might be served once a week all winter and never be served twice in exactly the same way.

Spinach.

Of course, the first thing to do is to wash it thoroughly, and the next thing to do is to boil tender.

It should be put to cook in boiling, slightly salted water. When it begins to boil, note the time and let it boil rapidly for ten minutes. Then drain it through a colander, pour cold water over it to blanch it, and then prepare it in any desired way.

It can be chopped, and seasoned with butter, pepper and salt. It can be chopped and then heated in a saucepan with a tablespoonful of flour, two of butter and cupful of milk for every half-peck of spinach. It can be chopped and garnished with sliced or minced eggs, and flavored with butter and pepper and salt. It can be served in small mounds, each topped with a poached egg or with a tablespoonful of scrambled egg. It can be chopped and warmed up with any sort of stock and a little flour. It can be mixed with a cupful of thick white sauce and two beaten eggs, cooled, formed into fritters and fried. It can be served with cream sauce poured over it after it has been drained, chopped, seasoned and put on a hot dish.

Cabbage.

Cabbage is a healthful vegetable and can be so cooked that it is delicious. Like spinach, it becomes monotonous to the most agreeable family if it is served boiled day after day.

It can be chopped, after it is boiled tender, and served with cream sauce. It can be minced and warmed up with stock or cream and butter and pepper and salt. It can be shredded and cooked in a saucepan in three tablespoonfuls of melted butter until it is tender, then mixed with a well-beaten egg and a little sour or sweet cream, heated thoroughly and served quickly. It can be served with curry sauce. It can be boiled tender, put in a baking dish, sprinkled with cheese and baked for ten minutes. It can be boiled, well seasoned, and scalloped with cracker crumbs. It can be cooked with corned beef or salt pork or bacon.

Others.

Kale can be found in the markets in the autumn. It can be boiled like cabbage, minced, and heated through with broth and seasoning. Cauliflower, when it is not expensive, can be made wide use of. It can be cooked in almost as many ways as cabbage.

LINENS AND CRETONNES.

They Make Durable and Attractive Favors For the Yuletide Season.

Cretonne or linen may be made up into many attractive gifts. Boxes covered with it are not only handsome but useful Christmas tokens. Ordinary pasteboard boxes may be covered with the material and lined with a plain fabric to match the color in the pattern of the cretonne, or the boxes may be cut up and put together again to form any odd or pretty shapes which the maker may devise. The miniature cabinet illustrated here was made in that way. The separate pieces in this case were covered with the material and then stitched together to form drawers, while a large flat box was taken apart, covered and then joined to make the cabinet. The edges were finished with a narrow braid. Crystal buttons instead of the tiny brass handles may be used on the drawers if more convenient. This may be used as a trinket box.

An ordinary cardboard collar box may be turned into a thing of real beauty if it is covered with linen. It then becomes a delightfully artistic box for a man's collars. The cardboard "flaps" must be taken off the lid, and these will not be required again. Now the box itself must be carefully taken to pieces. Each piece must be covered with linen previously embroidered in ribbon work and the inner sides lined with sateen. When you have covered and lined each piece of cardboard they must each one be neatly stitched together to form the box. The box can be finished off round its edges with a narrow silk cord.

Many men appreciate the gift of a little pocket pincushion, and delightful ones may be made of heart shaped pieces of cardboard, size about 2¼ by 2 inches. The pincushion should be covered with satin, upon which little pansies and a motto are worked.

Some Cookery Suggestions

SOME DELICIOUS SOUPS.

THESE nourishing clear soups may be served as attractive accessories to the Thanksgiving dinner. For ordinary occasions they add savor to a light luncheon and are just the soups to tempt the appetite of the invalid.

Bisque of Clams.—Take two dozen clams, wash them in their own liquor and chop fine. Strain the liquor through cheesecloth and add to it two quarts of water. Put it to boil, adding one teaspoonful each of chopped celery, pepper and parsley. Cook ten minutes, add the clams and cook five minutes longer. Rub one tablespoonful of flour in a tablespoonful of butter, add to the bisque, cook three minutes, then put through a puree sieve. Put on the fire, let boil up and add the beaten yolks of two eggs mixed with one pint of thin cream. Serve with crackers.

This Tastes Nice.

Cream of Rice Soup.—Take two cupfuls milk, two tablespoonfuls rice, a teaspoonful butter and flour, one-half teaspoonful salt, dash white pepper, a teaspoonful onion juice, a teaspoonful finely chopped parsley and one-fourth teaspoonful curry powder. Wash the rice, put on with two cupfuls of boiling water and boil twenty minutes. Put the milk on in top of double boiler, add the rice and rice water as soon as it boils. Rub the butter and flour together until smooth, and add to the rice and milk; add the salt, pepper, onion juice, curry powder and parsley; boil three minutes.

A Rich Soup.

Mock Turtle Soup.—Take half a calf's head, fresh and unstripped of skin, remove the brains and clean the head carefully in hot water, leaving it in cold water for an hour. Then put it in six quarts of warm water, with two pounds each of veal and pork and a roasted onion stuck with cloves, rind of lemon, two sliced carrots, a bunch of herbs and a head of celery. Let it boil slowly two hours, then take out the head and pork. Make forcemeat balls of the brains and tongue, break the bones of the head, put all into the soup and boil two hours more. Put into a small stewpan a piece of butter, onions sliced thin, with parsley, thyme, mace and allspice. Add flour to thicken and stir into the soup slowly. Boil gently one hour more, pass through a sieve, season with salt, cayenne, lemon juice and a pint of Madeira wine. Add mushrooms if desired and serve with lemons cut in quarters.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

A Little Boy Who Could Sew Nicely.

He Made Another Quilt.

THERE is no doubt that small boys have not much taste for sewing.

"Though once when I was a small boy," daddy told Jack and Evelyn, "I knew a boy who could sew very nicely. His mother said that he should learn to use the needle when he was young, and then if he grew up and became an old bachelor he would be able to patch his own clothes and sew on buttons.

"And, let me tell you, he could sew very nicely. He had no sisters, and the evenings were sometimes dull.

"One night as they gathered around the evening lamp Georgie—that was his name—watched his mother take out her workbasket and begin stitching.

"'Mother, could I have a needle and thread?' he asked.

"'Certainly,' his mother replied. 'What are you going to make?'

"'I'd like to make something useful,' Georgie answered.

"'I'll tell you what you can make,' she answered. 'I'll cut out some patches, and you can make a quilt for your own bed.'

"Georgie was pleased with the idea, and when his mother cut out the gay patches to form a star pattern he went to work with a will.

"Every evening when they sat down at the table Georgie sewed more patches. Soon he had quite a pile of them done.

"When the patches were sewed his mother showed him how to put them together.

"Then she lined the quilt with cotton and tacked a plain piece of material on for a back. When she had bound the edges together Georgie had a handsome cover for his bed, and he was very proud of it.

"When this little quilt was done he set to work and made a larger and handsomer one for his mother. He seemed to have a knack in matching the colors, and his relatives saved 'patches' for Georgie's quilts.

"Every year a fair was given by the people of that part of the state. It was called the county fair. The farmers sent their finest cattle and fattest pigs to be shown. The farmers' wives sent jars of their best preserves, their choicest butter and finest hens.

"Besides this, there were all sorts of pretty and useful things made with the needle, and prizes were given for the nicest and best things of each kind.

"A dear old lady who admired Georgie's quilts told his mother he ought to send one to the fair to show.

"So a quilt did go off to the fair, and the judges were so tickled over the idea of a little boy having made a quilt that they voted to give him a handsome bicycle as a prize, and I'm afraid after that Georgie did not make many quilts."

Practical Fashion Hints

By Alice Gibson

WE have had nothing more convenient or more becoming than the one-piece dress for many seasons. They are practical for out of door and in door wear and are doubly satisfactory if you make them yourself as many little individual touches may be added which count for a great deal in a dress.

7587 is an attractive model for the home dressmaker. Make it of silk poplin in one of the new colors and it will be appropriate for afternoon or street wear. One of the blues or browns that are so fashionable this fall would be effective with girdle and revers of brightly figured satin.

It is an excellent idea, if the vest be of a lighter material, to finish it separately, attaching it to the bodice with snap fasteners. In this way it may be kept fresh without much trouble.

In this design the bodice closes surplice fashion, has a broad collar and an inset vest. A three-quarter or full length sleeve may be used. A slightly draped four gored skirt completes the frock.

This dress may be made in size 36 with 4½ yards of 42 inch material.

This Is a Perfect Pattern

Be sure to state right size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust for dimensions.

It may be obtained by filling out the coupon and enclosing 15 cents in stamps or coins to the Pattern Department of this paper.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

COURT OF ERRORS, MEETING MONDAY, TO HEAR BIG CASES

Trenton, Nov. 14.—The Court of Errors and Appeals will convene Monday for the purpose of handing down decisions in cases argued at the June term. The November term of the court will open Tuesday.

Up to the present time 120 cases have been listed on the calendar for the new term. Probably the most important of these is the appeal of the Public Service Gas Company from the decision of the Supreme Court affirming the order of the Board of Public Utility Commissioners establishing a ninety-cent rate in the Passaic zone. Both the constitutionality and the application of the law conferring rate-making powers upon the board are involved in the appeal.

Another important litigation on the calendar is that of the Newark District Telegraph Company against Sexton, which involves the constitutionality of the employers' liability law. The act was sustained by the Supreme Court, which upheld the decision of the Essex Common Pleas and the opinion of Judge Martin, awarding damages against the telegraph company.

The conviction of Daniel A. Dugan, Jr., for manslaughter in connection with a fatal automobile accident of nearly two years ago, will also be argued on appeal.

AGED NEW JERSEY CLERIC TO BE BURIED TOMORROW

Easton, Pa., Nov. 14.—The funeral of Rev. William Thompson, for thirty-three years pastor of the Presbyterian church at Stewartsville, N. J., who died Tuesday night at his home here, will be held this afternoon with services in the College Hill Presbyterian church and interment in the Easton cemetery.

Mr. Thompson was eighty-two years old. He was born in Kilmarnock, Scotland, and received his early education in Newark. After a few years in business in Philadelphia, he was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania. After leaving the university, he went to Union Theological Seminary in New York and was graduated in 1857. From 1857 to 1872 he was pastor of churches in Blossburg, Tamaqua and Duncannon, Pa., and while pastor at Tamaqua he organized the first church in the Mahanoy coal fields at Mahanoy City.

From Duncannon, Mr. Thompson went to Stewartsville, where he began his generation-long pastorate, from which he retired in 1907. He was one of the veterans of the Newton Presbytery and was chosen moderator of the Synod in 1886. In October, 1898, Newton Presbytery at the close of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Stewartsville church, appointed a committee to unite with the congregation and adopted special resolutions commending Mr. Thompson in strong terms.

The veteran pastor is survived by a widow, who was his second wife, and two sons, Charles W. Thompson, of Los Angeles, Cal., and William L. M. Thompson, of Philadelphia. A half brother, Thomas F. Thompson, of Philadelphia, also survives him.

CHILD WELFARE EXPERTS GATHER AT WASHINGTON

Fred L. Lilienthal, a member of the New York Division of the Century Road Club Association, started at 12:01 a. m. October 28, determined to ride 500 miles within the allowed time of 60 hours, and he finished a total of 509 miles at 5 a. m. October 30, in the total elapsed time of 53 hours. Going on further, he completed 533 miles by 8 a. m. October 30. The total time for his first 100 miles was 7 hours; second 100 miles, 19 hours; third 100 miles, 33 hours 50 minutes; fourth 100 miles, 43 hours 10 minutes; fifth 100 miles, 53 hours.

During this time he had about four hours sleep at the end of the 150th mile had about five hours sleep. He had ridden over a difficult course, considering the fact that he lives in the Washington Heights section of New York, where hills are the order and the course selected consisted of trips from his home, which he used as a central, to South Ferry, to Yonkers, to Coney Island and to Floral Park, L. I. Several trips to each of the above places were made, and on two occasions light rain fell but not enough to make riding dangerous. This quintuple century makes a total of six ridden this year by members of the association, with times varying from 53 hours to 59 hours and 55 minutes, and were ridden by J. A. Olson, W. A. Buggein, Ed. Jansen, Sylvain Segal, and W. F. Thompson. All of these were awarded a gold medal of the New York Division

LONDON'S NEW LORD MAYOR.

He Was an Unruly Boy at School and the Hardest Fighter.

The new lord mayor of London, Sir Thomas Vansittart Bowater, is fifty-one years old and one of the youngest men to hold that office. He was born in Manchester and is the first man from that city ever elected to the London office. He seems to be different in many other respects from the usual conception of the holder of this romantic office, which one associates with memories of Dick Whittington and his marvelous cat and other men of humble birth and friendless youth.

Sir Thomas is a descendant of two distinguished British fighters—Admiral Edward Bowater, who made a splendid record at the battle of Trafalgar, and General Sir Edward Bowater, who held a command at Waterloo.

The new lord mayor gave no promise in his youth of his present career. He was generally at the bottom of his classes, except in arithmetic, which he learned without effort, and was occupied most of the time in fighting the other boys, gaining the reputation of being the most unruly boy in school and the hardest fighter.

He became more studious in later years and is now at the head of a large paper manufacturing firm in London, but he has retained his youthful enthusiasm for sport and expects to do a great deal while in office for the Olympic games.

The lord mayor rules only over the ancient city of London, about one square mile in area, which in olden days was inclosed in stone walls and defended by troops armed to the teeth. But this area includes the Bank of England, the Tower of London, St. Paul's cathedral and the Guildhall, where all the important mercantile and banking interests of the metropolis are bound together by an organization now many hundreds of years old.

Traditionally the sovereign has no right in the city of London except by permission of the lord mayor, and this official takes precedence in his own precincts of even the Prince of Wales.

DISTRUST OF DIRIGIBLES.

Recent Accidents Have Caused a Reaction in German Public Feeling.

Echoes of the terrible wreck of the naval Zeppelin L-2 promise to reverberate for months to come in Germany. There is no question that the fatherland's hitherto unshattered confidence in dirigibles as weapons of war is at last much shaken.

The kaiser's insistence that the successive destruction of twelve Zeppelins must not deter Germany from continuing to rely on them for the conquest of the air is not so generally shared as would have been the case before the navy lost both its air cruisers, with accompanying heavy loss of life.

Many who in the past were ardent devotees of the Zeppelin system are now shaking their heads, declaring regretfully that realities must be looked in the face. They are asking whether in the light of events the German naval and military authorities can conscientiously order officers and men of the fleet and army deliberately to take their lives in their hands, at least in times of peace.

The admiralty announces that the navy will soon have two new airships in commission, another Zeppelin and a vessel of the Schuette-Lanz type. Both will now be rushed to completion with all possible speed.

One of the really new developments in automobile progress is the landau-roadster type of body which is being marketed this year by the Studebakers. This type is easily transformed from open style to coupe by a few adjustments, the change consuming only a minute or two of time. It is designed especially for the use of doctors, contractors and others who are forced to be abroad in all sorts of weather.

CAUTION!

Word has been received from The Automobile Club of Bridgeport calling attention to the clause in the Connecticut Law regarding the muffler cut-out. This is being strictly enforced throughout the State.

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

Laurette Taylor will play her 375th consecutive performance of the title role in Oliver Morosco's production of J. Hartley Manners' tremendously successful comedy, "Peg O' My Heart," at the Cort Theatre tomorrow afternoon. In spite of reverse conditions in theatrical business this season, "Peg O' My Heart" continues to draw capacity audiences at every performance, and there is no question but the play will remain at the Cort for months to come.

"The Marriage Game," John Cort's production of Anne Crawford Flexner's delightful comedy, will begin the fourth week of its run at the Comedy Theatre on Monday night, with the same excellent cast, including Alexandra Carlisle, Orrin Johnson, Vivian Martin, Charles Trowbridge, Josephine Levett, William Sampson, Allison Skipworth and George W. Howard. Popular prices at Tuesdays' matinees.

Lillian Russell's Big Feature Festival is playing to splendid business in the middle west. John Cort will start this attraction on a tour of the South in another week.

TWENTY-FIVE YRS. OF MARITAL JOY

Reception and Dance Marks Wedding Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Timpson.

SOCIETY FOLK ATTEND

Elaborate Entertainment at Hartridge Auditorium — Festivities Ended at 5 A. M. When Some Started for Football Game.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis G. Timpson, of Hillside avenue, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding, yesterday, and last evening a large reception and dance was given at the Hartridge Auditorium in honor of the event. The invitations were issued by Orville T. Waring, Orville G. Waring, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Waring, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Fairbanks Reynolds, Captain and Mrs. Chauncey Benton Humphrey, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hartley Mellick, all relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Timpson.

During the evening there were about four hundred guests present from this city, the borough, New York and more distant places. The reception was from 9 until 11 o'clock, and from the latter hour until nearly two o'clock this morning the young people enjoyed dancing. The music was furnished by Austin's orchestra, of New York, which also played at the wedding reception of Mr. and Mrs. Timpson. The affair was of double interest for the reason that Miss Ruth Timpson, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Timpson, was formally introduced to society.

The receiving party comprised Mr. and Mrs. Timpson, Miss Ruth Timpson, Orville T. Waring, Orville G. Waring, Mrs. Lewis E. Waring, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Fairbanks Reynolds, Mrs. Chauncey B. Humphrey, Mrs. J. Hartley Mellick and Miss Carolyn Morris Value, of Elizabeth, fiancee of Edward J. Waring, who are to be married on November 19.

The large auditorium was elaborately decorated for the occasion, palms, ferns, Southern smilax and flowers being used extensively. They were banked about the stage, where the orchestra was seated; also in one corner of the auditorium, where the receiving party stood. The celebrating couple was showered with best wishes and Mrs. Timpson received a wealth of flowers.

Supper was served almost continuously from 10:30 on by Davis, the caterer, of Newark. There were many novel features, including the sugar bell, a large heart, while ice cream was served in miniature wedding bells, bearing the dates 1888-1913 and the monogram, "W.-T." Other novelties comprised small air-ships. These were given to the guests as souvenirs of the occasion. The menu was an elaborate one.

The program for the dances was an exceedingly popular one, including the latest selections and the orchestra was generous with encores. It was nearly 5 o'clock this morning when the strains of "Home, Sweet Home" brought the festivities to a close. Many of the young people who had planned to witness the Yale-Princeton football game today, secured an early breakfast and left at once for New Haven. Many out of town guests were entertained prior to the reception at house parties throughout the city and borough.

Mr. and Mrs. Timpson were married at Grace church, twenty-five years ago yesterday by Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, who was then rector of the parish, the bride being Miss Waring, the eldest daughter of Orville T. Waring. A large reception followed at the Waring home. The couple have lived in Plainfield ever since.

NO CLUE TO MONEY LOST BY EXPRESS CO.

Two Employes Dismissed for Violation of Rules—Detectives Are Still at Work.

Further developments today in the case of the mysterious disappearance of $500 belonging to the New Jersey Central, as exclusively published in The Daily Press, yesterday, disclosed the fact that two employes in the local office of the United States Express Company have been suspended. The reason assigned for this, according to Manager Clark, is that they were guilty of violating rules of the company. John Jeffrey has been employed to take the place of one of the suspended men.

Detectives are still at work on the case, but they refuse to discuss any phase of the alleged theft. The local police have not been asked to take any part in the investigation and their only information came through the story in The Daily Press. Manager Clark told Police Chief Kiely that he followed instructions and reported the matter to the company's headquarters and its own detectives were assigned to the case.

As stated yesterday the $500 was sent from the Grant Avenue station to the North Avenue station by an express company's agent for deposit in a local bank. The package was received here and signed for, after which it disappeared.

City Advertised In Other Lands

The Plainfield Daily Press completely underestimated the demand that would be made for the special "Do It For Plainfield" edition of forty-eight pages issued yesterday and as a result is unable to fill the extra orders given last night by newsdealers for hundreds of more copies. In order to fulfill the spirit of the enterprise, we have reserved the few hundred copies on hand today for individual use and they may be had at this office. The supply will be exhausted tonight. Not more than five copies will be sold to one person, for we believe in the "square deal" in all things.

Among orders left this morning for mailing purposes, it was found that the "Do It For Plainfield" edition would go to Chili, Hawaii, Australia, Norway, Mexico, China, Greenland, Brazil, Japan, South Sea Islands, Austria-Hungary, Italy, England; Alaska, Ireland, Algera, Egypt, Mexico, the Philippines, Canada, Russia and other countries, to say nothing of California, Colorado, Maine, Ohio, and Texas. Please bear in mind that extra postage is required when mailing to foreign countries. For the States and its possessions the postage is five cents.

Accept our thanks for "them kind words"—we did it for Plainfield and the credit is due to all those who made it possible. In the near future we hope to do something else worth while FOR PLAINFIELD.

"SKY PILOT" TO PREACH.

Rev. Frank Higgins, representing the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, and who is known as the "Lumber Jack Sky Pilot," will occupy the pulpit of the Crescent Avenue church, tomorrow morning. This is known as home mission Sunday.

MISSION VOLUNTEER TOLD OF HIS WORK

Henri Ferger, a Graduate of Princeton, Addressed Local Y. M. C. A. Members.

An audience of 200 boys attended the rally meeting arranged by Boys Secretary C. William Bingeman in the association this morning and Henro Ferger a student in the Teachers' College of New York, addressed the juvenile gathering, telling them of his experiences among the natives of the Indies, where he spent three years as a missionary. Mr. Ferger told in a graphic way the customs and habits of the native and illustrated his talk with a number of stereopticon views which he took while on the trip.

Although he has recently returned from the mission work, Mr. Ferger is known to a large number of Plainfield boys, having been the camp clerk at Lake Wawayanda, where a number of the local Y. M. C. A. members spent their vacation in 1910. He is a graduate of Princeton University in the class of 1909 and is at present arranging details for a return to India next year. Last night he met with the High School boys' Bible class and related a number of interesting experiences he encountered among the schoolboys of that country.

In giving his talk Mr. Ferger wore the native costumes of the India people and explained in detail the daily routine of the native's life and his methods of recreation and numerous industries in which they engage.

TIGER-ELIS GAME A TIE

PRINCETON . . 0 0 3 0---3
YALE . . . 0 3 0 0---3

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press.)

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 15—Making college football history, the Yale and Princeton teams held their annual contest here this afternoon before an immense crowd that filled every available seat in the big Yale stadium. The game was a splendid exhibition of the great college game, and second only to the contest itself was the wonderful panoramic picture of tens of thousands of lusty young teams throughout the struggle.

It was at 1:48 that the Princeton team, the first men to appear, ran onto the field amid the plaudits of thousands who waved the Orange and Black banners. Behind them came the Yale men, and there was an equally enthusiastic outburst from the Yale stand, where the Blue predominated. Princeton divided up into two teams and ran through signal drill, while Yale followed the same practice, the substitutes taking the bench. Princeton won the toss, and chose the west goal.

Following was the lineup for today's game:

FIRST QUARTER.

Ketcham kicked off for Yale, to Hammond, on Princeton's twenty-two yard line, who carried the ball to Princeton's 26-yard line. Law immediately punted for Princeton out of bounds to Yale's 33-yard line. Knowles for Yale on the first down punted to Baker on Princeton's twenty-five-yard line, where he was downed in his tracks by three Yale men. Law immediately punted for Princeton to Wilson on Yale's 40-yard line, and Wilson ran it back to Yale's 43-yard line.

Law was found to be hurt and time was called, but he soon recovered and the game started. On the second down Yale had eight yards to go, and Ainsworth gained two at right tackle. Knowles then punted for Yale to Princeton's 25-yard line, to Law, who was downed in his tracks by Avery. Law immediately punted for Princeton out of bounds to Yale's 23-yard line.

Yale was unable to gain anything on two downs, and on the third down Knowles failed to round left end, and then punted out of bounds to Princeton's 47-yard line. Princeton gained three yards on the first down, and three by a fake kick by Streit through center. Law punted for Princeton to Wilson, on Yale's ten-yard line, who ran the ball back to the 16-yard line.

On the first down Knowles punted to H. Baker on Princeton's 44-yard line, and the latter was downed in his tracks by three Yale men. Princeton lost five yards on the first down, and Law fumbled a pass for a punt, but ran five yards before being tackled by Avery. With fifteen yards to go on the third down, H. Baker failed to round Yale's right end, and Law then punted to Wilson on Yale's 25-yard line, who ran it back to the 37-yard line.

Yale gained six yards on the first two downs, and Knowles made the necessary four yards for a first down, and then punted to Baker on Princeton's 36-yard line, where he was downed by Avery and two other Yale men. Law punted for Princeton to Wilson on Yale's 35-yard line, who ran back two yards.

Knowles gained a short distance for Yale through tackle, and then punted to Princeton's 36-yard line but the ball was brought back by the referee Langford and Yale penalized 15 yards for holding, putting the ball on their 25-yard line. Knowles punted for Yale to Baker, who made a free catch on Princeton's 44-yard line. Law punted poorly to Knowles on Yale's 39-yard line, and the latter was down in his tracks. Yale gained three on the first down, and Dunn made three yards at right end on a fake kick formation. Ains-

"OUR HOUSING PROBLEM."

BUSINESS MEN'S ASS'N IS FORMED

A. E. Force is Chosen President of Local Merchants' New Organization.

MUTUAL PROTECTION

The Primary Object is to Guard Against Useless Advertising and Contributing—To Meet Again on November 24.

Permanent organization of a Plainfield Business Men's Association was completed at a meeting held last night at the Frost building and within the next two weeks it is expected that a constitution and by-laws will be adopted and regular meeting nights chosen. The object of the association is for the mutual protection of the merchants and business men of the city, and the idea is to divorce its action from those of such organizations as the Board of Trade and the Chamber of Commerce. One of the thing which the large majority of those present last night favored was finding some method of protecting the business men of the city from being called upon frequently to advertise and contribute to all sorts of things from which no benefit is derived.

At last night's meeting A. E. Force was chosen as president, Herman Schwed as vice- president, Allen F. Davis as secretary and M. C. Van Arsdale as treasurer. A committee consisting of Samuel Rothberg, Harry C. Marshall and Leslie R. Fort were appointed to serve with the president and secretary to draft a constitution and by-laws. This committee will report at a meeting to be held on Monday night, November 24.

When the meeting was called to order last night John J. Varley, who had been chosen as president pro tem, was in the chair, and he asked for a further expression of sentiment on the proposed organization from those present who had not been present at a former meeting. Among those who spoke were A. E. Force, James C. Hansen, Herman Schwed, Leslie R. Fort and Samuel Rothberg, after which M. C. Van Arsdale moved that such an organization be formed, and it passed unanimously. There was some discussion as to a name, and after "Merchants and Advertisers Association," "Merchants Association," and "Business Men's Association" had been discussed, it was found that the sentiment of the majority favored the last one. The officers were then selected, and after an informal discussion the meeting adjourned until November 24.

WE THANK YOU

FROM REV. WM. S. McCOY.

"Holy Cross Rectory,
"Plainfield, N. J., Nov. 14, 1913.

Editors, Plainfield Daily Press:

"Gentlemen:—Let me add my congratulations to the many you have had and will have upon the success of your 'Industrial Edition' of today. It is the right sort of effort. If the people will do their proportionate share in the 'Do It For Plainfield' movement, there is no question of the result. You are showing the way.

"Yours very truly,
"WILLIAM S. McCOY."

Editors, Plainfield Daily Press:

Your special issue, "Do It For Plainfield," was certainly a credit to your ability and enterprise in putting forth the merits of Plainfield. I believe it would be a good thing if more of this were done because I think a great many of our newcomers will make good use of it in presenting to their friends out of town the advantages of Plainfield.

You are to be complimented for this movement.

"Editors, Plainfield Daily Press:

"I thought you would appreciate a note regarding the interest to the people of Plainfield of the historical and trade supplement published in connection with the last night's issue of the Plainfield Daily Press.

"The historical section is of great value to the more recently located business and residential people and the trade section should aid in bringing to the local merchants the local business, to whom it properly belongs, and which is now going elsewhere. The public should always feel that they should carry on their business as far as practicable with the local merchant and in so doing, they will increase the good and welfare of the town and its constituents.

"Again I might reiterate the fact that the supplement was of exceeding interest to me.

"Very truly yours,
"A. B. WILSON,

Lounsbery, 302 East Seventh street, can procure seats. Those who wish to procure the subscription seats can get them from Mrs. Lounsbury today, Monday and Tuesday.

Several announcements of the Alda concert have already been made, and they have created more than passing interest among the music loving public in Plainfield. Madame Alda, whose fame as one of the stars of the Metropolitan Opera Company is well known, has established herself as a concert attraction by reason not only of her remarkably beautiful voice, but because of her personal charm and individuality. The press of New York has equally praised her work on the concert stage with that done in grand opera, and that she will have a splendid house on December 7 to greet her and the other artists goes without saying.

More than a year ago he was placed on probation, with the understanding that he would go to live with a relative in Worcester, Mass. This he failed to do.

GEORGE MANNER IS FREED OF BLAME

Elizabeth, Nov. 15—George Manner, the Westfield youth who ran down and killed a boy named Frederick Scheerer, of this place, while driving an express wagon Thursday afternoon, was arraigned on a technical charge of manslaughter in the Court of Quarter Sessions yesterday afternoon and released on his own recognizance, furnishing $500 bail.

Assistant Prosecutor Martin P. O'Connor told the court that after a rigid investigation it was found that Manner was blameless. The arraignment was merely a formal proceeding to comply with the law in such cases.

ORDER OF COURT BALKS R. H. HOOD

Estranged Husband Wins Personal Property Verdict but Can't Remove Goods.

TO ASSURE ALIMONY

Hearing on Thursday Before Vice Chancellor—Hood Given Suspended Sentence on Assault and Battery Charge.

Newark, Nov. 15.—By way of executing a flank move, Mrs. Frances Sparks Hood, of "The Roses," 541 Stelle avenue, Plainfield, yesterday, through McCarter & English, got from Vice-Chancellor Stevens an order directing her husband, Richard Haden Hood, to show cause next Thursday why she should not be safeguarded as to her prospective alimony and allowances to be made to her counsel.

In her petition she charges, in substance, that there is grave danger that her husband, unless restrained by the strong arm of chancery, will continue to "render fruitless" any alimony decree by taking his property out of the jurisdiction of the court, and himself with it.

The vice-chancellor accordingly incorporated in the rule to show cause an order restraining Hood, pending the return of the rule, "from transferring, assigning or incumbering any of his property, real or personal, now situated in Plainfield, or from removing any of his personal property now situated in Plainfield out of said State."

The petition sets out that Mrs. Hood, on October 3, 1912, filed a petition for divorce against her husband, and that her suit is still pending and undetermined. Further, that on December 3, 1912, she filed a petition for alimony and counsel fee, and that on that same day the court made an order of reference delegating the inquiry as to alimony and counsel fee allowances to Clark McK. Whittemore.

Pursuant to such order, the petitions further recites, "A great deal of testimony has been taken, both before the spcial master and de bene esse in New York, the stenographer's transcript already amounting to 526 pages.

The inquiry by the special master is not yet completed, the petition tells, and the petitioner fears that considerable time will yet elapse before a report will be made for the court to act upon.

The petition goes on to tell that from September 8, 1912, to March 13, 1913, Mrs. Hood has expended $8,237, but that that sum does not include anything paid to her attorneys, except $410 paid to Charles A. Reed, of Plainfield, "for services in protecting your petitioner's person from assaults by the defendant."

It is further told that "the petitioner has spent upwards of $4,000 for services of detectives in procuring evidence to be used by her in the trial of her suit for divorce," and that in addition to ordinary legal expenses incident to the prosecution of her suit, she was compelled to send counsel to London, England, to cross-examine the co-respondent in the divorce suit, whose testimony was taken on de bene esse in behalf of the defendant.

Continuing, the petition sets out that Mrs. Hood is the owner of the legal title to certain lands with buildings thereon at 541 Stelle avenue, Plainfield, and claims also to be the owner of divers goods and chattels contained in the mansion house on the premises; that the defendant has filed a bill in equity against her alleging that he is in equity the owner of the lands and premises in Plainfield, and praying that she may be decreed to be a trustee thereof for the defendant, which suit is also pending and undetermined.

The defendant, the petition further tells, has also filed a bill alleging that he is the owner of the goods and chattels contained in the mansion house, in which suit the court on November 13 announced a decision adverse to the petitioner. In defense of both suits the petitioner alleges she was forced to incur great expenses for legal services.

Since October 15, 1912, the petition alleges, the defendant has contributed nothing toward the support of the petitioner, whose property of all kinds consisted at that time solely of a few hundred dollars left her by the defendant, her wearing apparel and personal effects. The real and personal property in Plainfield and a legacy of $8,000.

The petition reads on: "Your petitioner shows that by reason of the necessary expenses of her maintenance, as hereinabove stated, all of her productive property, including the aforesaid legacy, has been exhausted and that she is largely indebted to her father, upon whose generosity she is now depending for her support; the Plainfield property aforesaid being wholly unproductive and being the source of great ex-

Opinion is not enough.

Here's a Plainfield fact.

You can test it.

Mrs. O. C. Moore, 57 Manning avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I endured much misery from backache which was caused by my kidneys. Many nights I was unable to rest at all and when I got up in the morning, my limbs were so stiff and sore that I could hardly get out of bed. Whenever I caught the least cold, it settled on my kidneys and any strain on my back always made the aches and pains worse. I was treated by physicians but their medicine did not help me and it was not until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's drug store that I had any hope of getting rid of the trouble. They made me feel like a different person and I have never had any serious trouble since."

JUNIOR ORCHESTRA'S PROGRAM EXCELLENT

First Concert Under Mr. Korff's Direction One of Real Merit.

The first concert of the Junior Municipal Orchestra at the Washington School auditorium on Thursday night with M. A. Korff as conductor, was really delightful, the performance as a whole being an agreeable surprise to the audience. Among the notable numbers were the soprano solo, "Because I Love You Dear," sung by Miss Evelyn Southard, who was accompanied by Miss Ivy Hargreaves. Miss Southard was in fine voice and her expression was superb. Another fine number was the violin solo, the intermezzo, Cavaleria Rusticana, by Mascagni, as played by Miss Drucilla Macauley, with Miss Marguerite Jahn at the piano; the cornet solo, "Beautiful Home of Paradise," played by Carl S. Evans, accompanied by the orchestra, and the piano solo, Rubinstein's Melody in F, by Maurice Kunzman. The orchestra numbers were:

March, "Fire Drill," Lincoln; Overture, "Lustpiel," Keler-Bela; Violin, "Intermezzo, Cavaleria Rusticana," Mascagni; Mexican Idyl, "On the MesaGrande, Maurice; March, "From Ocean to Ocean," Losey; Reverie, "Autumn Breezes," King; soprano, "Just A-Wearying for You," Bond; Idl, Mon Ange," Haack, and March, "Masterstroke," Bodewalt-Lambs.

OUR HOUSING PROBLEM.

Probably every parent feels a certain regret in seeing a child grow to manhood or womanhood, feeling that some of the simplicity and freshness of youth must be lost in assuming the responsibilities of age. It is with somewhat similar feelings, perhaps, that we witness the growth of our entire town, and we wish it were possible to maintain the individual homes and open spaces of the village while enjoying the transportation facilities and business advantages of the city.

In some parts of New York the development has been so rapid that one may see examples of every type of dwelling from the individual cottage up to the modern apartment house standing almost side-by side in the same city block.

So fast has been the growth that no type of dwelling has continued in favor more than a short time. It is but a few years since the owner of one small city lot built upon it a tenement for six or eight families. The old fashioned "brown stone fronts" were made over into apartments.

The evils resulting from this make-shift development were so serious, and the new, large buildings drew so many tenants from the older ones that owners do not now build except upon much larger lots—either two or four city lots being the usual practice.

It is characteristic of American cities that they demand of landlords whose tenements were built before the present high standards of sanitation were adopted, that they remodel their buildings, even though those buildings might just as easily have been of excellent design if the housing problem had been met in its early stages by proper municipal regulation.

Tenement owners in New York have suffered from the severe and sometimes ill-considered demands of an autocratic Tenement House Department to such an extent that houses built before the adoption of the present tenement house law (1900) are now practically unsaleable and are bought only to be torn down.

Year by year specific requirements are added to the law and year by year existing houses fall more and more hopelessly behind the time and are harder to rent or sell.

Unless there is some assurance of permanency in the type of building permitted under the law, and some evidence that this type can be made to return a reasonable income on the capital invested there is little incentive for landlords to venture upon improvements. The arbitrary requirements of the Tenement House Department have imposed such hardships upon landlords who improve their property that many have preferred to maintain their buildings just within the law, thus perpetuating old buildings which would long since have been torn down had scientific methods been observed.

There seemed to be great need of a new type of tenement which should embody the best features of existing tenments and establish a standard of light, ventilation, privacy and protection from fire and disease.

Mr. Henry Atterbury Smith, the architect, who had made an exhaustive study of housing matters here and abroad was employed to design a building which should embody the results of a scientific analysis of New York's needs. The result is the Economic Open Stair Tenement which we now know can be built and operated at a profit in New York.

Several Plainfielders supported this enterprise, among them Mr. Charles W. McCutchen and Mrs. P. V. R. Van Wyck (now of Summit). The buildings are similar to those designed by Mr. Smith for Mrs. Wm. K. Vanderbilt and which are used for tuberculosis patients except that they lack some of the hospital features.

Mrs. Helen Hartley Jenkins, daughter of the late Marcellus Hartley, has also built a tenement of this type which has probably nowhere been surpassed for sanitation and economy of plan.

No man can say for how long this design will be found to meet the needs of the metropolis. At the moment it has supplied a needed impetus toward a scientific study of the whole subject of housing.

The problem as it presents itself in Plainfield is still without an adequate answer. Old dwelling houses are being converted into an abode for several shiftless families, and cheap wooden flat houses containing a number of families have been erected at our very doors. If we are to be saved the humiliation of slums in Plainfield someone must devise a way to house the low wage earner which can compete with the kind of a home which is now being provided for him.

Multiple dwellings exist in Plainfield in large numbers and there will inevitably be more of them. Let us not deceive ourselves on this point. The economy of living in an apartment is forcing ever increasing numbers of people to adopt that type of dwelling. The only way to affect the minds of those who build tenements is to show them something better than they are now building. Plainfield cannot grapple with this problem too soon. Let us prevent today, a situation which tomorrow, when it is too late, we can only regret.

STATE TRUST CO. FOUR PER CENT. SAVING PLAN

The reader's attention is directed to the four per cent. saving plan adopted by The State Trust Company, which is fully explained by them in their advertisement on the last page of this paper.

By this plan deposits of from $1 to $25 may be made monthly, and at the end of thirty-eight months all one has paid in may be withdrawn, together with four cent interest. The plan also has borrowing, as well as surrender value features, that may be utilized in case of need.

If more people would make a practice of putting aside a portion of their income regularly, even though it be but a small portion, there would be a great deal less distress and poverty to be cared for by organized charities.

DON'T MENTION THIS TO CAPTAIN FREDERICKSON

Supposing someone gave you a fine, live specimen of a screech owl and being fond of feathered bric-a-brac about the house, you had decided to have it stuffed, then after you had travelled five miles your captive clawed its way out of its box just as you were in sight of the taxidermist's home and flew away, emitting a derisive hoot as it went—wouldn't it make you mad?

Well, that's exactly what happened to Captain Christian Frederickson, of the local police department, and it not only made him mad but jarred him so badly anyone mentioning "owl" to him stands a chance of getting throwed into jail. The nocturnal bird was captured Wednesday night by Patrolman O'Sullivan as he was pounding pavements in the Netherwood section, but not knowing anything about owlology, he decided to give his prize to the superior officer. The captain was highly delighted, remarking that it was the prettiest bird of the kind he had ever seen and the captain has looked over some owls in his day. He took the captive to his home on Leland avenue and Thursday afternoon started for Walter Sisty's taxidermy shop at Dewey Park, carrying the bird in a large pasteboard box. Just as the police officer alighted from a trolley car at the end of the trip, an old friend he hadn't seen in goodness knows how many years loomed up in front of him and a handsbaking bee followed that lasted ten minutes.

All the while the captain was travelling and talking, Mr. Owl had been on the job, picking a hole in his prison wall. He made it large enough to push through just as the two friends separated and suddenly flew across the road, hooting and screeching with delight at his captor's chagrin. The men tried to head him off but they might just as well have tried to fly themselves.

"Its hard for a fellow like me to lose a prisoner," the captain dejectedly remarked as he boarded a homeward bound car, "but I wouldn't have cared so much if he hadn't been such a pretty bird; yes sir, he sure was a pretty bird."

"PLEASE SAY ADVERTISED."

We shall inaugurate, on Monday, a Five Days'

Musical Festival

commemorating, in the Auditorium, solidly built into three floors of the new Wanamaker Building, its ceilings decorated by Frederick C. Frieseke with mural paintings, representing four movements of Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony, on its East end one of the most beautiful voiced pipe organs in America—the Thirteenth Anniversary of the Opening of the John Wanamaker Piano Store in New York

This commemoration takes the form, in accordance with our annual custom, of a tribute to the artists whose hearty cooperation has made possible the internationally known Auditorium concerts.

During the past year—following the law of progress—we have infused new life, larger enthusiasm and a broader service into the business of the Piano Salons—acknowledged to be the greatest in America.

Quietly, against the force of the tide sweeping stronger and stronger toward a commercialism which seeks volume of business at the expense of all that is fine in musical instruments, we have fortified our well-known, unchangeable policy of and definite forward steps have been taken in the improvement of the quality and durability of tone in the pianos and player pianos on the Wanamaker Roll of Honor.

We feel that we can commemorate this anniversary of the opening of the Piano Store with a deeper sense of satisfaction than ever for the greater service that store is now rendering the people, in whose best interest it was established.

The commemoration will consist of five concerts to be given daily, beginning on Monday, at 2 in the afternoon.

They will partake of the character of all the Auditorium concerts, as not mere entertainments, but as instructive of the finer music which touches a chord in every heart and should have a place in every home.

GENERAL CONFERENCE OF FRIENDS SOCIETY

Members of the Religious Society of Friends here have received notices concerning the Friends' General Conference, which will be held from September 2 to 8, inclusive, at Saratoga Springs, N. Y. The various committees are working on the details of the conference, and arrangements will be announced within a short time.

Considering the pleasant character of the environment at Saratoga, it is expected that the next conference will be of unusual interest and attractiveness. In all probability the trip from New York to Albany will be made by steamboat, and by daylight through the Highlands of the Hudson. Saratoga is 30 miles north-west from Albany, and is the oldest "watering place" in the country, its mineral springs having been noted for several generations. It differs from the seaside resorts, in that here the water goes into the visitor, instead of the visitor going into the water. Friends will do well to look for further announcements about the conference.

IN BOROUGH COURT.

Thomas Rowe, of Harmony street, was arrested by the borough police today on the complaint of Overseer of the Poor Fred Becker, who charges him with non-support of his wife and three children. Mrs. Rowe recently applied to the borough authorities for aid. Henry Nolan, colored, wanted for a gambling charge, was also apprehended today. John Boyle was released on a suspended sentence when arraigned this morning before Recorder Gano for being intoxicated.

DR. WOOD TO SPEAK.

Rev. Dr. Harry Wood will speak at the Park Avenue Baptist church tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock on the subject of "The Irrepressible Conflict Between the Church and the Liquor Traffic." In the evening, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire will preach on "Shall We Know Each Other in Heaven? Is it a Guess, a Myth, or a Whim?"

INSECT ANAESTHETICS.

Wasps and Beetles Paralyze Their Victims Before Killing.

That the sting of the wasp, which punctures the nerve centers of a captured caterpillar or spider, usually paralyzes the creature into helplessness rather than kills it is well known. The victim remains alive in the burrow or cell in which the wasp stores it as food for the larva which will emerge from the egg laid in the same cell. Therefore the newly hatched grub finds ready for it a provision of living meat instead of decayed carrion.

That "wizard" among entomologists, the venerable Fabre, has discovered a similar yet even more extraordinary fact in the history of the glowworm beetle (lampyris—namely, that it anaesthetizes the prey upon which it itself feeds, so that it may consume it at leisure and predigested. This beetle, whose brilliant phosphorescence attracts the eye in the dusk of the summer evenings, habitually hunts and seizes upon a certain small snail in order to eat it.

The curious thing is that the beetle anaesthetizes the mollusk at the first attack, preventing it from escaping by withdrawing to safety deep within its shell. Upon finding the snail the beetle dashes forward and, thrusting out its sharp, curved mandibles, repeatedly stabs the side of the body of its prey. After a few punctures the snail becomes insensible and remains in that deadened state for three or four hours—a time more than sufficient for the beetle to complete its meal.—Independent.

CAUGHT THE CAPTAIN.

He Was Not on the Early Morning Job, but the Kaiser Was.

Some time ago the kaiser heard that a captain in one of the guards regiments at Potsdam had fixed the regulation hour of schooling for his men at 6 o'clock in the morning. The kaiser, though doubting the fitness of such an early hour for the lesson and the ability of a popular young officer to keep up to this rather exacting standard of early rising, said nothing, but one day walked into the barrack room at 6 o'clock.

The captain was not there, but the emperor showed neither annoyance nor surprise. He asked where the lesson was to be found in the books, and without more ado, to the mingled anxiety and delight of the men, he took the lesson in hand and explained the passage in history which was the subject of the day. It was nearly 7 o'clock when the captain showed himself. The kaiser returned his salute and made no allusion to his crestfallen countenance, but handed him the lesson book after pointing out how far the class had got and then left the room.

Nothing more was said or heard about the incident until a few days later, when the captain received a handsome alarm clock, evidently from the kaiser. What the officer wrote in his letter of thanks for the gift is not recorded.—"Ireland's Own."

LITTLE TALKS BY THE WANT AD MAN

Copyright, 1913, The Int. Syndicate, Baltimore.

No. 32.

SUPPOSE you put a piece of cardboard in your window reading something like this: "Boarders Wanted" or "Rooms for Rent" or "Fore Sale or Rent" or "Good Table Board."

How many people see that sign?

Just as many people as happen to be passing that way and who glance toward your window.

Now put a little WANT AD. in the CLASSIFIED columns of this paper—under the head, say, of "Boarders Wanted" or "Rooms for Rent," or some classification that best suits the accommodation you wish to offer.

How many people see that ad.?

Thousands! People who are looking for it. People who want the accommodations you offer.

Classified advertising is concentrated advertising. It goes straight to the people you want to reach. The people you want to reach go straight to it.

The proof of advertising's power is in its results. The WANT AD. columns are result producers. Try them, and you will discover for yourself the truth of this statement.

Dancing Lessons for Children.

Dancing lessons for children can be made either a most helpful part of their education—or a waste of time.

The thing of first importance, of course, is to find a good teacher—a man or woman who understands children as well as dancing. The lessons should be so given that the children really learn to dance, and learn to hold themselves healthfully and gracefully, to walk easily and without awkwardness and to conduct themselves with courtesy and gentleness.

The lessons should also be so given that the children enjoy themselves. They should form a part of the child's recreation, although they do form a part of its education.

A School Clothes Class.

The matter of appropriate dancing class clothes is an important one. The clothes should never be elaborate. A simple white wash frock, with colored sash and hair ribbons if the child does not look well in all-white dress, is the best choice for the small girl. The small boy's suit should always be fresh and clean. The shoes, of course, should be especially chosen with dancing in view. If the child's ankles are weak, the shoes may be high, with either kid or cloth uppers.

In one town where some of the children one winter had worn clothes so elaborate that they filled the other children's hearts with envy, and their mothers' minds with disapproval, a school clothes dancing class was started. It proved to be a great success, and one like it might be started in any community.

The children were required to come in school clothes, with the exception of shoes, which were to be dancing pumps—or high dancing shoes if there was any objection to pumps. The clothes worn must be fresh—the next day's school dress, if it was a wash dress. At any rate that was one stipulation—that the clothes must be fresh and clean. The children were told that their hands and faces and hair must be as carefully attended to as if they had worn their best dress-up clothes. Those were the only requirements.

The children, unhampered by unusual clothes, were at home, had a better time and really behaved better than they would have done had they been dressed in "party clothes."

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by Plainfield Branch New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

Mrs. Selden, in her article on "Votes for Women" in the Daily Press for November 12, says:

"It is true that the gravest charge that the Antis bring against the franchise in the hands of women is that it has not yet redeemed the world or even that particular section of it where women share in the making of the laws," which statement shows a state of lamentable and I am sorry to say, inexcusable ignorance on the part of the writer. No anti-suffragist denies that excellent laws regulating social conditions and particularly dealing with women and children have been passed in equal suffrage States. The point that has been insisted on again and again and which is calmly ignored by suffragists is, that equally good and in some instances better laws on the same subjects have been on the statute books of non-suffrage States, and that in many instances they have been passed in non-suffrage States before they became laws in equal suffrage States. As, for instance, the equal guardianship law which was passed in New York a year before the same measure became a law in Colorado. Again, Massachusetts has a maternity law statute that has a very direct bearing on the health of both mother and child.

Pure food laws are by no means confined to suffrage States. The eight-hour law for women in California was passed by a Legislature elected before women voted. Here in Plainfield our schools are being used as social centres—witness the discussion now going on as to whether they should be opened for dances. We have laws in New York and New Jersey regulating the sale of pure milk and drugs. Our Board of Health inspects our dairies and publishes the results of their investigation.

Fifty years ago, the law in New York compelled the father of an illegitimate child to provide for that child's support, and I fancy that law has not been changed.

Here in New Jersey there are strict laws, as to the killing of diseased cattle or other stock. Most cities and villages, whether in suffrage or non-suffrage States, have the right to regulate and suppress prostitution. Their power to do so is a different thing—witness Denver.

Massachusetts and New York have the best child labor laws in the Union, and great efforts are being made to improve them. In an official map published by the W. C. T. U. it is noteworthy that the suffrage States are painted entirely (or almost so) black, indicating that they are what is politically called "wet," against many of the non-suffrage States, which show a greater or less degree of "wetness."

These are things in which a great part of the States make much the same showing. Let us turn to another side of the question—not a consideration of laws but of facts. The following figures furnished by the Russell Sage Foundation give food for thought. Before giving them let me give one or two items from some correspondence published in the Congressional Record for October 30, 1913:

"Department of the Interior,
"Bureau of Education,
"Washington, July 1, 1913.

"Hon. Henry W. Blair,
"Colorado Building, Washington, D. C.

"Dear Sir: In compliance with your request, I am sending you a number of statistical tables relating to the State common schools.

"It is difficult to select the 'ten best' school systems, but to obtain a fair average per capita of expenditure, based upon school population, I have taken the 10 States in which the child 5 to 18 years of age receives the greatest number of days' schooling in the school year. The following States in 1911 showed an average attendance of from 101 to 107 days for every child 5 to 18 years of age: Maine, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Utah, Washington, and California.

"These 10 States had a school population of 3,509,117 and expended in the aggregate $96,005,239 for the common schools, or very nearly $28 per capita of this population 5 to 18 years of age. * * * *

"ALEX SUMMERS, Statistician."

Mr. Summers also gave tables showing the States which expended twenty-eight dollars per capita for education. In this table the suffrage States make a very good showing in this column, which makes the following figures from Colorado, compiled from official and unbiased sources by the investigators of the Russell Sage Foundation the more astonishing:

1. Colorado stands sixth in the daily cost per child in the public schools. In 1893, Colorado stood first.

2. Colorado now stands twenty-fourth in length of school year. In '93, she stood seventh.

3. Colorado now stands seventh in expense per child enrolled. In 1903 she stood third, New York standing first and Massachusetts second.

4. Colorado stands thirty-ninth in attendance of pupils enrolled.

(This would seem to bear out Owen Lovejoy's statement that in Colorado as in many other States child labor laws are evaded, as only the parents' statement as to age is required.)

5. Colorado stands seventeenth among the States in illiteracy; 3 7-10 per cent. cannot read or write.

In 1903 it was conceded by the foreign educational committee visiting this country that Colorado, in a general survey, stood first.

Is this the effect of equal suffrage?

ELIZABETH B. SYKES.

TWELVE LOGICAL REASONS WHY MINORS SHOULD VOTE.

(Suggested by "Twelve Logical Reasons Why Women Should Vote.")

1. Because there is no just government without the consent of the governed. Minors are governed without their consent.

2. Because many minors own property and therefore should have a voice in matters concerning street cleaning, lighting, policing, etc., and especially in obtaining a pure milk supply. As minors are the principal attendants at school they should have a voice in educational matters and be consulted as to the fixing of holidays, hours of study, curriculum, etc.

3. Because taxation without representation is tyranny.

4. Because children can get no justice in juvenile courts unless minors are permitted to serve as judges. There should be at least one child on every jury.

5. Because it is unjust and arbitrary to debar citizens from a share in government because of age. Many children know more than their parents and some have better brains, also many geniuses develop before the age of 21.

7. Because minors object to being classified with idiots and criminals also being governed by woman-made laws. They propose to eliminate age from politics.

8. Because a pure democracy means a government in which all are equal. Why should a whole class of individuals be disfranchised, many of whom pay taxes on property and are capable of military service in time of war simply because they are under 21?

9. Because minors represent the most progressive element in the nation and see danger in turning over the government to a lot of reactionaries, many of them over thirty.

10. Because the services of the minor in the home receive no financial compensation, yet many children help their mothers and some are entitled to full servants' wages as "little mothers."

11. Because conditions have greatly changed since the child's place was at school or in the home. Thousands of children are now forced out of the home and are helping to support the family in factories. These children need a vote in order to protect their industrial interests and in order to improve the conditions under which they live. It is folly to say that children are supported by their parents and can be represented by them. Many children have no parents and many work for themselves. Orphans at least should be entitled to vote.

12. Because children are human beings (so are idiots and criminals!) and "justice, simple justice" requires that all human beings vote.—From The Woman's Protest.

Some Cookery Suggestions

GERMAN COOKERY.

THE German housewife, asked for her favorite recipes, supplied the following. They are dishes which will add attractiveness and savor to any menu:

Kalbsrouladen.—Cut some thin slices of veal from the leg, add salt and pepper to taste. Lay thin pieces of fat bacon over the veal, also some chopped parsley, tie in rolls and fry in butter until nicely browned. Put in a saucepan with a tablespoonful of flour, one sliced and fried onion, add some stock and cook for about twenty minutes. Unbind, strain gravy over and serve with cabbage, stewed celery, noodles or macaroni.

Made With Beef.

Koche Ragout.—The points of the fillet of beef should be cut in pieces half an inch thick. Fry quickly in butter, add a finely chopped onion. When fried season with salt, pepper and a little cayenne. When ready add some fried potatoes with the ragout and mix while still on the fire. Put half a pint of good gravy to it, as well as some sour cream. Flavor with Worcestershire sauce.

Rinderfricadellen.—Put half a pound of beef from which soup has been made through the mincing machine, add a quarter of a pound of raw minced pork, the inside of two rolls which have been soaked in milk, two eggs, salt and pepper, one small onion chopped fine and a little nutmeg. Mix well together and form into rounds, being careful that the edges are as thick as the very middle. Fry until brown and serve with vegetables or warm potato salad.

Stuffed Cabbage.

Cefulter Wirsing.—Wash two good sized savoy cabbages and put them whole in boiling water and blanch. When sufficiently blanched put into cold water; then take out and let drain. Make a forcemeat composed of minced veal, two eggs and two rolls soaked in milk. Season with salt and pepper. Now take all the leaves of the cabbage off, put three or four on top of each other and fill with two tablespoonfuls of forcemeat; then take a clean napkin and put the cabbages, with meat, inside it. Make the four corners, hold tightly together and press so as to form a ball. Now place them in a saucepan with a little piece of bacon on top of each ball, add a little stock, place lid on saucepan and steam in oven about twenty or thirty minutes. When cooked add some good gravy to it.

Jennie Could Answer.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Jennie Knew How to Make Stew.

DADDY smiled sweetly as Jack and Evelyn leaned over the arm of his chair.

"And, now, what may you two be wanting?" he asked in his most provoking manner.

"We want our story, of course," was the severe answer. "It's our bedtime, and you know you said that little boys and girls always go to bed on time."

"Did I say anything so mean as that?" exclaimed daddy guiltily. "Well, I'm likely to forget many things that I've said.

"But, of course, we'll have tonight's story right away. And let me see what I'll talk about. Oh, yes, I know; I'll tell you a little story about our friends Johnny and Jennie, the twins.

"You know, Johnny and Jennie are the same age. They look so much alike that if Jennie wore knickerbockers you would take her for Johnny, and if Johnny wore skirts you would think he was Jennie.

"They are both in the same room at school, and when Johnny misses a question Jennie is always tickled to be able to answer it.

"It has never been quite settled which is the cleverer. Johnny can spell better than Jennie, and Jennie is a little quicker than he in numbers.

"One day Miss Small, their teacher, gave Johnny a little sum in addition. He had often solved harder ones, but there was something about this question Johnny just couldn't work out.

"Miss Small believed in making the lessons interesting for the children, so she said:

"'Now, Johnny, suppose your mother sent you to the store to buy two pounds and a half of beef, two pounds and a half of potatoes, a pound of carrots, a pound of turnips, a pound of tomatoes and half a pound of onions, what would you have?'

"Johnny sighed and shook his head. Really he could not tell.

"Jennie had been watching her brother eagerly, and when he gave up the problem her little hand went up in the air and was waved wildly until Miss Small saw it.

"'Well, Jennie, can you answer?' she asked. And she smiled, for she knew how one twin liked to get ahead of the other.

"Mary smiled back. She was quite sure she knew the right answer. She had just begun to take cooking lessons, and she felt that here was a question which a little girl could answer better than a little boy.

"'Yes'm; I know,' Jennie replied breathlessly. 'Beef stew is what he would have if he added these together. And be sure to put in the pepper and salt, Miss Small, or you'll spoil the stew.'"

Practical Fashion Hints

By Alice Gibson

HERE a smart little coat model is shown with diagonal closing, a round collar extending into revers and a small pointed over-collar. The lines are straight and simple, and there is nothing at all difficult in the fashioning of it.

Contrasting materials are being used for coats at the present time quite a little and it is a becoming as well as a practical idea. For instance, if you have a skirt of plaid and one of serge, would it not be convenient to have a coat that would serve for both? Make this model in blue serge or a color that repeats one of the shades in your plaid and harmonizes with the plain skirt. The result will be pleasing and very smart.

There is a shaped band for the back of this coat at the bottom, which is effective and may be used or not as desired.

To make this model in size 36 it requires 2¼ yards of 42 inch material.

COMPANY K OUTPLAYED

Donald Conroy's Playing One Brilliant Feature of Uninteresting Contest Last Night in Saengerbund Hall.

The North Plainfield High School basketball team added another "win" to its string of victories last night, by trouncing the representatives of Company K, by the score of 58 to 12, in an uninteresting contest played at Saengerbund Hall. The result was never in doubt, the sterling team work and shooting of the "Canadians" far exceeding any efforts of the soldiers to triumph. By a consistent round of scores the winners made enough points in the first few minutes of play to capture the game. Donald Conroy, substituting at forward for the disabled Roy Love, made 24 points for his team, thereby establishing a record for the season for individual effort in the scoring line among the borough players. While Conroy was sending the sphere through the iron ring from all angles and all parts of the slippery court, the soldiers found it possible to secure but four tallies, the half ending 35-4.

Opening the second half with a rush, the losers performed in clever style for several minutes and then settled down to the same indifferent defensive tactics they employed in the initial part of the contest. Burner and Van Mater scored heavily for the High School five and Trotter and Nolan garnered a few points for Company K. Warren Townley took Van Mater's place at forward and the latter went in at centre, Dunning retiring in the latter part of the half.

The Kearny quintet will be the opponents of the borough five next Wednesday.

"RUBE" WADDELL ILL.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 15.—In spite of his belief of a week ago that he was suffering only from a slight attack of bronchitis, "Rube" Waddell, well known as a baseball pitcher, left Minneapolis last night to begin a battle with tuberculosis at his sister's home in San Antonio, Texas. A short time ago a story was current that he had fallen a victim to the white plague, but he scoffed at the idea, and said he was suffering from a severe cold. Since then he has been growing steadily weaker, and has been in bed for several days at his home here. His physician said last night that Waddell's chances for recovery are slight.

LOCAL K. OF C. TEAM TRIMMED ELIZABETH

Dinner Follows Opening of Knights' Bowling League in This City.

The Elizabeth Council team opened its bowling season in this city, last night, against the Plainfield Council quintet in a Knights of Columbus League contest and lost two games out of three. The bowling of Block and G. S. Taylor, of the Plainfield team, featured, the former turning in a score of 232, while the latter rolled 213.

Coughlin, who took Donahue's place on the Elizabeth team in the last game, was probably the main factor in bringing about the one win for the Elizabeth team. Donahue rolled 147 and 127 in his two games. Coughlin, however, when he took his place tallied 188.

H. Coleman, of the defeated quintet established the highest score on his team, displacing 221 pins in the last game. A dinner to the Elizabeth team given by the Plainfielders followed the match.

Following are the scores:

AID TO GOOD ROADS.

Motorcycles, twelve pairs of them, hitched to twelve large wagons, were one of the leading features of the Good Roads Day program in East St. Louis, Ill., recently. A number of members of the East Side Motorcycle Club offered to help in the big road making campaign and also suggested that a great deal more could be accomplished if the wagons carrying material for the work were drawn by motorcycles instead of mules. Mayor Chamberlain accepted the offer of these riders, and all day long the two-wheelers, two abreast, pulled the heavy wagons up and down the highway, delivering material to the volunteer road makers.

YALE FOOTBALL CAPTAIN HAS NO USE FOR THE PUBLIC.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 15.—In explaining why he does not wish Yale football players numbered, Captain Ketcham said:

"I thoroughly disapprove of the practice of numbering football men and we have decided not to depart from our former system. In the first place, this new step has been invented by the newspapers for their own purpose. Football is not being conducted here for the newspapers, but for the college and the players are not working to win recognition by the public, but are playing for themselves and the university."

LOCAL GUNNERS OUT FOR COUNTY TITLE

Terry Brothers and Dick Randolph Will Represent the Queen City.

The title of amateur trap shooting champion of Union county, which has been kicking around without an owner for some time past, will find a home on Thanksgiving Day when the crack wing shots of this vicinity will compete in the big tournament to be staged at the traps of the Tremley Gun Club, Elizabeth. Invitations will be mailed in a few days to leading amateurs of the county and a big field of entries is expected.

A silver loving cup, emblematic of the championship of Union county, will be presented to the gunner attaining the best average. If challenged, the winner must defend his trophy at least once a month and annually the trophy will be put up for competition among all the gunners of the county. Under these conditions, Frank Glaser, donor of the cup, belives that the sport is due for a big boom in this vicinity.

Among the Elizabeth gunners who may be expected to make a bid for the prize are the veterans Peter M. Kling and Walter Manning, Joe Jacobus, the Blake brothers, Artie and Charley; Wally Laing and Frank Glaser. Jim and Lou Bogart will probably be strong representatives from Roselle, while Rahway will have Joe Rochetti, Charley Lentz, Spencer, Harriman and Charley Miller. George Everett and Arthur Roden will look after Linden's interest. Dick Randolph and the Terry brothers are among Plainfield's best. Cranford, Westfield, Springfield and other towns in the county all number among their citizens able gunners who may be counted on as real contenders for the championship.

In addition to the trap shooting championship, another event billed for Tremley on Thanksgiving Day will be the shooting for game prizes. On Christmas Day a Bull Shoot will take place. The bullock, a member of the Holstein family, has already been purchased and he's some "critter."

BASKETBALL PROGRAMS ARRANGED BY LOCAL MANAGERS FOR TONIGHT

A basketball program of unusual interest is offered to the fans of this vicinity tonight, a number of good attractions having been arranged by local and suburban managers for the week-end bill. Each week the number of contests on the program has increased since the inauguration of the 1913 season and at the present time there are a number of good teams going full blast in this section. Games have been arranged for the west end and central portions of the town and for the followers of the sport in Scotch Plains.

The Y. M. C. A. for the first time this season will be the scene of a double header of the court game, the first five lining up against a speedy aggregation of Newark high school and preparatory school boys and the Marathon A. C., of North Plainfield, appearing in the preliminary bout as opponents to the sturdy little Grace Church quintet. The two juvenile combatants have long been the closest of rivals and things are bound to fly when they meet in the preliminary appetizer. The first contest, that between the Marathons and the church boys will be sent underway at 8:15 o'clock and the big attraction is down to start at 8:45 o'clock, after the first half of the preliminary. This change in the game time has been necessitated by the fact that players on the association five are planning to take in one of the intercollegiate games this afternoon and connections are such that they will not be able to arrive in Plainfield before 8:30.

The main game will be participated in by the following array of talent:

Y. M. C. A.	NEWARK.
Moulton	Brommer
forward
McNamee	Menke
forward
Gavett	Scott-Czina
centre
Glover	Sobo-Green
guard
Brynairski	Rubin
guard

The Newark team rung up a record on New Jersey courts last year of seventeen victories and four defeats, playing some of the fastest teams in the metropolitan district and this season has won all the games it has played.

HOPE CHAPEL CARD.

Two games are also planned for Hope Chapel, the first team taking on the Good-Will Fife and Drum Corps five, of Perth Amboy, and the boys' club quintet lining up against some team from the borough, the identity of which has not as yet been revealed.

The lineup of the teams:

GOODWILL.	HOPE CHAPEL.
Frigon	J. Heron
forward
C. Looser, Bagger	T. Heron
forward
Miller	Doig
centre
Holzheimer	Leighs
guard
Schultz, G. Looser	G. Snyder
guard

SCOTCH PLAINS' GAME.

Coach Batterson, of the Scotch Plains Parish House basketball team, has arranged the opening game of the season with the strong Summit Chapel Club five, opponents of last year and also rivals of Hope Chapel and the Y. M. C. A. This game is a good one for an opener and should prove interesting to those who follow basketball in that village. Although nothing definite has been announced it is quite likely that a preliminary game will be booked for the Parish House second quintet to be played previous to the main attraction.

GREAT HORSE SHOW OPENS IN NEW YORK

Smart Gowns and Blue Ribbon Equines vie for Honors at the Garden.

New York, Nov. 15.—The thirty-ninth annual exhibition of the National Horse Show Association, the famous "Horse Show," which is looked upon as the beginning of the winter's social season, opened today in Madison Square Garden, which was gorgeously dressed up to represent a Roman amphitheatre.

In all its essential features the big annual exhibition is much the same as in the many years of the show's earlier history, with the only difference that this season there is to be a little more variety in the character of the ring contests than in former years, and some few additional classes will stir to enthusiasm the horse lovers and horse owners in the boxes and around the tanbark arena.

The harness horse, which lost much of its popularity with the advent of the automobile, has apparently been restored to favor, for the high-steppers are more in evidence at the present show than at any exhibition of the past half-dozen years. The saddle horse classes, also, have filled this year better than ever. It seems as if the women have striven to outdo the men with saddle horses, and many new exhibitors have come to the front.

But, most interesting of all, are the jumping competitions, for it is this feature of the program that gives the big show its international flavor. These competitions are to be more representative this year than ever before. No less than seven countries are to be represented, and as the conditions require that the officers shall ride in the uniforms of their own country the scenes in the ring are expected to be very attractive. This year Russia and Norway are entered, together with England, France, Belgium, Canada and the United States.

Among the largest exhibitors this year in all classes are Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Judge William H. Moore, Hon. Clifford Sifton, E. T. Stotesbury, William Zeigler, Jr., Miss H. D. Atterbury, F. Ambrose Clark and William Du Pont.

COURT BALKS HOOD

pense, your petitioner having paid the sum of $642.25 for taxes upon the same."

The petition goes on to tell that in August, 1912, Hood declared under oath that he was worth $480,000, inclusive of the Plainfield property which he claimed to be worth $145,000, leaving a balance of $305,000, which he admitted was made up of stocks, bonds and cash.

It is further stated that Hood also admitted that on August 22, 1912, he "set over and transferred to one Charles Meads and one Grant Rohrer securities to the value of $240,000; the said transfer being, according to the defendant, in discharge of obligations owing by him to the said Meads and Rohrer."

On May 2, 1913, the petition further tells, Meads commenced a suit against Hood in the Supreme Court of the State of New York claiming damages in the sum of $144,770.70 with interest, upon an alleged account stated. Hood, the petition states, made no defense to the action, "and such proceedings were had that judgment by default was entered against the defendant on May 26, 1913, for $152,000.72."

Thereafter Meads commenced an action in the Supreme Court of New Jersey on his New York judgment which resulted, July 10, 1913, in a judgment by default for the sum of $153,064.72, plus costs. On this judgment Meads caused execution to be issued, directed to the sheriff of Union county, pursuant to which levy was made upon the Hood homestead premises in Plainfield and upon the goods and chattels contained in the home as Hood's property.

The petition goes on to tell that the petitioner believes the claim of Charles Meads to be absolutely without foundation, and that the judgment he obtained is fraudulent, and that the suit was brought with Hood's connivance for the purpose of putting his property in such a position that any decree for alimony obtained by Mrs. Hood will be fruitless.

Besides the Plainfield home, the petition further recites, Hood owns a few acres of land in Plainfield, the exact description of which is unknown to Mrs. Hood, but for which he paid "a few thousand dollars."

Under examination before Special Master Whittemore, the petition states, Hood "refused to state the whereabouts of his safe deposit box, containing such securities as he owns, and consistently claimed to be unable to state his present financial worth.

"Your petitioner, therefore, charges," the recital runs on, "that the defendant is making every effort to make any alimony decree obtained by her incapable of collection by her. She fears that if the goods and chattels situated in the mansion house in Plainfield, hereinabove mentioned, should be decreed to be the property of the defendant he would forthwith take them out of the jurisdiction of this court.

"Your petitioner avers that undoubtedly some substantial sum will be decreed her for alimony pendente lite, and counsel fee.

"The defendant has at times stated that he himself intends, upon the termination of the divorce suit, to depart from the State of New Jersey. Your petitioner fears and charges that he intends to do so in order to put himself beyond the jurisdiction of this court as part of his scheme to render fruitless any alimony decree."

The petition prays that the defendant be made to give reasonable security for the observance of any alimony decree, both pendente lite and permanent, and for the payment of such counsel fee as the court may fix, and that upon his neglect to give such security "there may be issued out of and under the seal of this honorable court a writ of ne exeat reipublica to restrain the defendant from departing out of the jurisdiction of this court, and that upon defendant's neglect or refusal to give such security, this court may award and issue process for the immediate requestration of the personal estate of the defendant, and of the rents and profits of his real estate within the State; "and that he may be restrained from in any way disposing of or encumbering his estate, real or personal, until he shall have given such security.

Elizabeth, Nov. 15.—Richard Haden Hood, the wealthy Plainfield civil engineer, whose family affairs have figured much in the courts, was arraigned in the Court of Quarter Sessions yesterday afternoon before Judge James C. Connolly, for assault and battery on his wife, Frances Sparks Hood, and escaped under suspended sentence.

In suspending punishment, however, the court told Hood that it was only because of his high standing, and the fact that the attack was not premeditated, that leniency would be shown. The court, explained that in the event of a repetition of the offense Hood would also be sentenced under the charge for which sentence was suspended.

When Hood was arraigned Assistant Prosecutor Martin P. O'Connor told the court that the assault took place when Hood went to his home in Stelle avenue, Plainfield, where he quarreled with his wife from whom he had been separated. He struck her on the head with a telephone receiver, Mr. O'Connor said, and as the assault was unprovoked there were no extenuating circumstances which might be cited for the defendant's benefit. His intelligence, too, the Prosecutor said, should have made him hold a higher regard for law and decency.

William R. Codington, counsel for Hood, and Chauncey Parker, of Newark, made pleas for him, saying that the assault was not premeditated and that Mr. Hood had provocation. The court stated that he would not humiliate the defendant with a prison sentence. Several Plainfield wommen were in the court at the time.

Hood's suit against his wife to recover personal property worth $50,000 in the Court of Chancery was successful. A suit to recover his realty holdings, valued at about $100,000 is still pending. His wife's action for divorce is also pending.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA COMING

One of the big musical events of the season will be the appearance at Proctor's theatre on Monday of Schubert's New York Symphony Orchestra of twenty-four musicians, with a well-known soloist. This musical organization has just returned from a successful tour of the big theatres in the west and it is through personal friendship for Harry Sanderson that the orchestra comes here. The program will be a popular one. The soloist possesses a fine soprano voice. The Mildred Jewel Company will present "The Empress of Mysticism;" Chapelle and Moose, a colored team, will offer a skit entitled "At the Race Track;" Reed and Hilton will present "The Doll and the Soubret," and Kershaw and Ivine "Those Komical Scotch Kids," will complete a high-class bill.

COLORED CHAUFFEURS BALL.

Local colored chauffeurs will enjoy a social Thursday night, Dec. 4, at the Nonpariel Club, in St. Mary's avenue. The committee in charge of the arrangments is composed of Albert Shipley, chairman; John Hedgeman, John Stewart, William Jones, Jr., William L. Pearce, Robert Lee, Henry Peterson, William Mays and Robert Peterson.

SUFFRAGISTS GET A GREAT OVATION

New Jersey's Delegation Are Warmly Greeted at the National Capitol.

MEET THE PRESIDENT

Led by Mrs. E. F. Feickert They Participate in Mass Meeting at the Columbia Theatre—What the Speakers Had to Say.

(By Mrs. E. F. Feickert.)

Washington, Nov. 17.—The New Jersey delegation of women which has come to ask the President to make the Woman Suffrage amendment to the National Constitution a government measure by including a recommendation in its favor in his messtage to the next session of Congress, arrived in Washington, Saturday afternoon. Fifty-eight women are in the party, thirty-nine of whom are delegates from the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association, seventeen from the Woman's Political Union and two from the Equal Franchise Society.

On its arrival the delegation was met by a number of prominent Washington suffragists and members of the Congressional committee of the National Suffrage Association and taken to a reception and tea at the home of Mrs. John Jay White on Massachusetts avenue.

Yesterday afternoon there was a wonderful mass meeting at the Columbia theatre. Miss Lucy Burns, of the Congressional committee, was chairman, and the first speaker was Mrs. Rheta Childe Dorr, the author of "What Eight Million Women Want." She was followed by Miss Melinda Scott, president of the Cap Makers' Union, of Newark, and a well know labor union organizer and worker. She told of the low wages received by the sweatshop workers, who are paid only seven cents for making a pair of pants and one dollar for pressing seventy women's skirts.

Mrs. E. F. Feickert, of Plainfield, then told of the increase of suffrage sentiment in New Jersey and emphasized the fact that the women of New Jersey even though they are confident of winning the vote for themselves in 1915, will not be contented with that and wish to help the work for the enfranchisement of the women of the whole country, which can be most quickly accomplished by the passage of a Federal amendment. Mrs. Van Winkle, president of the New Jersey Women's Political Union, spoke on the United States constitution, pointing out that its provisions should logically be considered to give women the franchise as well as men.

Charles Edward Russell had come into the meeting during the speaking and he was now invited to come to the platform and speak for the cause. Mr. Russell dwelt on the handicaps put upon the work of the suffragists by the opposition of politicians of the worst type, by the ignorance of the women opposed to the movement and by the attitude of that part of the press which is controlled by the Big Interests. He said that the reports of the recent Pankhurst meeting in New York given by some of the local papers were so untrue that some of the people who had attended the meeting felt obliged to protest. He said he called up the city editor of a New York paper and objected to the untruthfulness and unfairness of their report and was told:

"Oh, you can't expect a suffrage meeting to be reported seriously."

The last speaker was Mrs. Eugene Boissevain (nee Milholland), who looked as charming as ever and made a forceful and compelling address. She was greeted with very hearty applause, as it was one of her first public appearances since her return from her honeymoon.

At the conclusion over $700 was collected in money and pledges. This morning the delegation expects to interview the President and also to call upon all the New Jersey representatives in Congress, Representative McCoy, from Orange, arranging for the interview with the President.

Among the women comprising the delegation are: Mrs. E. F. Feickert, president N. J. Woman Suffrage Association; Mrs. Abram Van Winkle, president of the N. J. Women's Political Union; Mrs. Harry Compton, president of the N. J. Equal Franchise Society; Mrs. Reinemann, Montclair; Mrs. F. Gordon Smith, Montclair; Mrs. William Reilly, Newark; Miss Elizabeth Coningsby, Newark; Mrs. E. B. Ballantine, Newark; Miss Emma Richards, Newark; Mrs. H. S. Day, Paterson; Miss Jennie Pierce, Paterson; Miss Susanne Pierce, Paterson; Dr. Mary G. Cummins, Paterson; Mrs. C. K. Hammitt, Trenton; Mrs. William Gutchins, Glen More; Mrs. C. F. Adams, Trenton; Miss Corinne Manh, Trenton; Mrs. T. H. Tittensor, Trenton; Miss Anna E. Dunn, Newton; Miss A. Josephine Vermilye, Plainfield; Mrs. E. F. Feickert, Plainfield; Mrs. Hooper,

APOPLEXY IS FATAL TO WM. E. GARDNER

Aged Man Suddenly Attacked by Stroke Early This Morning.

William Estil Gardner, aged about 77 years, one of the best known citizens of Plainfield, died suddenly at 2 o'clock this morning at his home, 129 West Second street, following a stroke of apoplexy. Although he had not been in good health for some time no alarm was felt especially regarding his condition. The attack this morning was without any warning and Mr. Gardner's death was a great shock to the family.

Mr. Gardner was born in this city and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Gardner. His father was a well-known hatter in his day. Mr. Gardner was engaged in the grocery business practically all of his life. For many years he was employed by the late James E. Dunn, when he conducted a grocery store on Park avenue, about where Mrs. L. J. Denton's florist store is now. Afterward he was associated with W. B. Vail and at the time of his death was engaged in business for himself on Church street.

Mr. Gardner is survived by a wife, two daughters, Mrs. Joseph F. T. Fuller, of this city, and Mrs. Arthur Heath, whose husband is employed by the Cincinnati Inquirer; two sons, Louis V. Gardner, of New York, and William Gardner, who lives at home, and one sister, Miss Mary Gardner, of this city. The announcement of the funeral will be made later.

MISS KARR'S PUPILS GIVE PIANO RECITAL

Younger Ones Among Them Provide An Exceptional Piano Entertainment.

The younger pupils of Miss Grace Powell Karr gave a piano recital at her studio in the Babcock building, on Saturday afternoon. A special feature was the exhibit of class work for beginners in which was shown how music is divided into different subjects and each subject thoroughly understood before combined in the art of execution.

The tone production of the children who have taken music for the first time this fall as shown in the melodies played was melodious and ressonant. The class of a year ago showed its mettle in the spirited rendition of prize pieces which they won last spring for playing in all the recitals during the past year.

The following pupils took part:

The Misses Mary Heidloff, Alice Simons, Kenneth Burtis, Ruth Schwartz, Beatrice DeCamp, Madeline Hughes, Marian Rose, Josephine Hanlon, Helen Almy, Mary Roth, Gertrude Rittenhouse, Gladys Davis, Margaret Endress, Ruth Carver, Amy Hughes, Eleanor King, Charlotte Fowler, Edith Shotwell, Margaret Martin and Albert Monck and Harold Kirchner and two of Miss Schuck's pupils, Miss Catherine Brennen and Jerome Leary, both of whom played splendidly.

The studio and hall were crowded with an enthusiastic and intelligent audience that was greatly encouraging to those who took part in the recital. Prizes for the best practicing during October were awarded to Josephine Handon and Gladys Davis.

REV. EDWARD KELDER AT NETHERWOOD REFORMED

Rev. Edward Kelder, of Coytesville, Bergen county, who preached at the Netherwood Reformed church, two weeks ago, as a candidate for the pastorate, and who made a favorable impression, will have charge of the mid-week prayer meeting at the church on Wednesday night. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance of members.

While no official announcement has been made it is considered quite likely that Mr. Kelder will receive a call to the pastorate of the church to succeed Rev. Royal A. Stout. Rev. C. W. F. Attlee, of this city, has been the temporary supply.

A WISE JUDGE.

George Blake, of Spooner avenue, and Walter Holliwell, of Laramee road, both 16 years old, will work for William Colburn, of South End avenue, a mason contractor, until they have earned $30 by their labor to pay for two automobile tires they stole from him. This is in accordance with an order of City Judge DeMeza.

AUTO BUS BURNED; LOSS ABOUT $4,000

Back Fire Cause of Destruction of Plainfield Transit Company's Car.

Auto bus No. 2, operated between this city and Warrenville by the Plainfield Transit Company, was destroyed by fire Saturday night, entailing a loss of about $4,000. There were no passengers aboard. William Seal, the driver, escaped without injury. The mishap occurred near Watchung while the car was making its last trip from Warrenville to this city.

Mr. Seal says he believes that the fire was caused by the breaking of the gasolene pipe allowing the oil to run into the carburetor, producing a back fire.

The celluloid curtains only helped in the rapid destruction and Mr. Seal being alone did not have the slightest opportunity of extinguishing the blaze. The car was fully covered by insurance and a new bus has been ordered to take the place of the old one.

A telephone message to R. W. Campbell, manager of the company, brought him with a physician, Dr. M. L. Clawson, to the scene of the fire, but when they arrived there was nothing left for them to do. Mr. Campbell in receiving the message considered that possibly some one might be burned and for that reason thought it advisable to have a physician accompany him.

Until the new car arrives the runs to Warrenville will be curtailed by cutting out the trip leaving here at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, the 9:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. trips from South Plainfield for Plainfield and the 9 a. m., and 6:30 p. m. trips from this city to South Plainfield. The 4:30 o'clock afternoon trip to Sterling is also cut out for the present.

WOMEN MISSIONARY FEDERATION PLANS

Three Sessions to Be Held This Week—the First Tomorrow Afternoon.

The Plainfield Federation of Women's Missionary Societies will hold three meetings this week, the first of which will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the First M. E. church, and the speaker will be Rev. Frank Higgins, the "Sky Pilot" of the lumber camps. His subject will be "Missionary Work in the Logging Camps."

For the past year Mr. Higgins has been carrying on his work in the Adirondack forests. All told there are about 100,000 of these lumbermen in the United States. They are a rough set, their work is hard and they are beset with many temptations. "I love these fellows," says Mr. Higgins, "it pays to lift them up. A good meal and a little love has made many of them Christians."

The second meeting will be for prayer and will be held in the rooms of the Y. W. C. A., at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. Mrs. Martin I. Cooley will be the leader. On Friday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, there will be a meeting for young people at the Y. M. C. A., when Rev. Dr. Peter Roberts, secretary of the Industrial Department of the International Committee of the association, will speak on "Our Comrades in Other Lands." This will be illustrated with moving pictures.

TOMBS CHAPLAIN TO SPEAK.

Rev. Charles R. Tinker, chaplain of the Tombs, New York; Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York, and Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church will be the speakers at the annual banquet of the Men's Conference Class of the First Baptist church to be held at the church on Thursday night. It is expected that covers will be laid for more than one hundred men.

Thanksgiving Thought.

"Faith, hope and charity" are the greatest things in the world, so Henry Drummond said quoting highest authority. But, then next to these is public confidence. Our business was built and is conducted on sound business principles. We do not understell on one article and make up the loss on another article. We deal fairly. There we differ from New York stores. That's why you save money in the end by buying your wines, liquors, beer and ales, imported and domestic, at Frank Linke's, West Front street. PUBLIC TO SEE HOSPITAL BLDGS.

Inspection of Private Ward Pavilion and Memorial Pathological Laboratory.

ON NOV. 29 AND 30

Membership of Enlarged Medical Staff to Be Announced Tomorrow—A Description of the Buildings.

An inspection of the new Private Ward Pavilion and the Chaig A. Marsh Memorial Pathological Laboratory will be held on Saturday and Sunday afternoons, Nov. 29 and 30, at which the public will be most cordially welcomed. This has been decided upon by the Board of Governors in order that the public, and particularly the thousands who contributed so liberally to the Campaign Fund last year, might have an opportunity to see the splendid result of their generosity. The new buildings may not be absolutely finished in every detail, but the Board, realizing the widespread interest of the public in the progress of the work, decided not to defer the inspection until a later date.

The new Private Ward Pavilion in every way is a model hospital structure. Not only is it architecturally attractive but it is finished and will be appointed throughout in accord with the most modern practices of hospital sanitation, and convenience. There are tile floors throughout the building, the trim is selected oak, and the wall finish is in buff, pleasing to the eye and readily kept clean. A system of electric calls obviates entirely the noisy jingling of bells throughout the building. Facing the South commodious solariums are located on each of the three floors for the benefit of convalescing patients. Taking the building as a whole it is one of which the Board of Governors and the public of Plainfield may well be proud.

In order to provide fully for the increase in business which is bound to come to the institution because of its enlarged facilities, the Board of Governors considerably increased the medical staff and also appointed an auxiliary board including physicians from the communities surrounding Plainfield. A full list of the new appointments will be published in tomorrow's paper.

At the board meeting the splendid work of the Woman's Auxiliary Board was given proper recognition by the appointment of Mrs. John Gray Foster and Mrs. Frank B. Warren to fill the vacancies occasioned by the resignation of two of the Governors. The names of these ladies were presented by their associates of the auxiliary and the Board of Governors voted unanimously for their election.

The Board was much gratified by the large attendance of the public at the opening of the Edgerton Memorial Maternity Pavilion a few weeks ago. This pavilion has already been of service to the public and is now regularly occupied.

The board also discussed the report of the Women's Committee having in charge the details of the "Linen Shower" which will be given for the purpose of providing the necessary blankets, towels, sheets, spreads and other necessary linen for the hospital. Details of this "shower" are given in another column.

UNION THANKSGIVING SERVICES PLANNED

Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong Will Preach the Sermon—Special Music.

Arrangements have been made by the pastors of the First Baptist, First M. E., Trinity Reformed and First Presbyterian churches for the annual Thanksgiving Day services to be held Thursday morning, November 27, at the First M. E. church.

LINEN SHOWER FOR NEW WARD PAVILION

Novel Three Days' Sale for Benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital.

Schwed Bro.'s store windows will blossom with a new kind of merchandise, Wednesday afternoon. Lest it be imagined that the Front street and Park avenue clothiers are going into the dry goods business, it should be added that the attractive array of blankets, sheets, pillow cases, bed spreads and towels which will be displayed and on sale at the store Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week is all intended for use in the new private ward pavilion at Muhlenberg Hospital. This splendid three-story building, the largest of the hospital group, is now nearing completion, and will be opened for public inspection on the afternoons of Saturday and Sunday following Thanksgiving.

Of course no hospital pavilion is complete without the necessary linen, and a committee of women, consisting of Mrs. J. P. Stevens, Mrs. Hermann Schwed, Mrs. A. V. Healey, Mrs. H. C. Irons and Mrs. F. C. Ard, assisted by members of the Woman's Auxiliary Board of the hospital, decided upon a "Linen Shower" as the best way in which to give everyone who so desired an opportunity to share in the pleasure of outfitting the new building.

As it would be manifestly impossible to secure the necessary uniformity if individual contributions were made, the committee ordered the quantity and quality of goods desired. These have all been appropriately marked with the hospital monogram, and can be purchased by the public during the three-day sale. The assortment consists of over 200 sheets, about as many pillow cases, nearly 500 towels of various sizes, blankets, spreads and other necessary linen to a total of over 12,000 pieces.

The women will be present during the days of the sale to assist purchasers in making their selections. These may either be taken to the hospital by the buyer when he attends the public inspection of the new private ward pavilion, or delivered for him with his card attached after the sale is over. Already the women of the committee have received a number of orders, and the success of the "shower" is assured. There is no restriction whatever on the sale, and the order for a single pillow case will be as welcome as the one for a dozen blankets.

The women desire to have as many individual purchases as the limited quantity of the offering will allow, and they suggest as large an attendance as possible on Wednesday, while the assortments are unbroken and selection will be easy.

HIS DAUGHTER GONE; FATHER SEEKS HER

E. L. Rodeur Hears Missing Girl Went to New York to Be "Movies" Actress.

According to the story told by the local police, Edward L. Rodeur, of 730 Austin street, Westfield, on returning home after an absence of several days found both his housekeeper and his daughter gone. Today he notified the local police of the latter's disappearance. The housekeeper, Miss Anna Sutphen, of 214 West Second street, this city, said she knew nothing of the whereabouts of Miss Rodeur other than that she had gone to the Metropolis to seek employment as a "movies" actress.

When informed of the case, Chief Kiely assigned Patrolman Kelly to investigate. Miss Sutphen said after Mr. Rodeur had left his home in Westfield and remained away several days she had a quarrel with the daughter and rseigned her position. Rodeur went to New York this morning to seek his daughter.

MARTINE BESIEGED; DON'T YOU PITY HIM?

Senator's Office Looks Like a Jewelry Shop All Because of That $1,000.

Herein is a real Martineesque epistle and therefore no preface is needed, however, be it said that as the writer is and always has been an ex-officio and honorary member of the Daily Press and in and at all times has considered it his privilege, when not running for office, to make the newspaper office his office and do as he pleased therein, we have no compunctions about printing a private letter to the editor:

"I have undertaken to collect in the United States Senate a sum with which to purchase a wedding gift for Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson. I will have about $1,000, and will get a silver service.

"As a result I am fairly overrun with silversmiths and jewelers from New York, Newark, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. Their samples and photographs cover my desk and my office is transformed into a veritable treasure shop.

"The gift will be a silver service with inscription engraved thereon: 'Jesse Woodrow Wilson from the Senate of the United States, Nov. 25, 1913.'

"Newspapers far and wide from the Atlantic to the Pacific telegraph me for information. My telephone is busy all the time. Don't you pity me.

"Sincerely,

"Jim."

LUMBER JACK SKY PILOT'S NARRATIVE

Rev. Frank Higgins Tells the Story of the "Parish of the Pines."

Rev. Frank Higgins, known as the "Sky Pilot" of the lumber camps, occupied the pulpit of the Crescent Avenue church, yesterday morning when he related an intensely interesting account of his work, telling of the conditions in the lumber regions of the Great Northweast, especially in Northern Minnesota. He said that there are today not less than a half-million men engaged in cutting forests, and he has approximately named his work the "Parish of the Pines."

In some respects the conditions today are worse than a few years ago, said Mr. Higgins, for railroads connect the various towns making it easy for the men to go from one place to another, whereas before they were obliged to walk and oftentimes for this reason did not make the long journeys.

However, Mr. Higgins presented a hopeful side, when he said that most of the towns in that section of the country are what is known as "closed towns" on Sunday and there is practically no disorder. Mr. Higgins said that he was raised among these lumber jacks and thus prepared for his gospel work among them. He has eighteen missionaries associated with him, but says he could use 118.

Describing his work, Mr. Higgins said that when he first began holding meetings the men would sit with their hats on and smoke, but now they are very different, having a high regard for the gospel and they are very reverent and it is a real pleasure to preach to the men.

There are numerous instances where churches have been established and these today are self-supporting, and the work is progressing favorably. Mr. Higgins will speak tomorrow afternoon at the First M. E. church, under the auspices of the Plainfield Federation of Missionary Societies and tomorrow night at Hope chapel.

VIOLATED LIQUOR LAW OF STATE?

New York Department Store Wagon Driver Held in Bail to Answer Complaint.

MADE BY MRS. LINKE

A Local Wholesale Concern Paying Big License Here Renews War on New York Concerns Delivering Here.

Another step in the local crusade against the sale of liquors in Plainfield by New York department stores was made this morning when Lewis Moore, 24 years old, of Newark, a driver for the Siegel-Cooper Company, was arrested on a charge of violating the Interstate Commerce act in accepting money for goods governed by municipal license and ordered from another State. The complaint was made by Mrs. Frank Linke, of West Second street, after the driver had accepted $1.50 from her in payment for a bottle of gin and a bottle of whiskey sent out from the New York store C. O. D.

Arraigned before City Judge De Meza, Moore waived examination and was held in $300 bail for a hearing Wednesday morning. He was still at police headquarters at 2:00 o'clock this afternoon, pending the arrival of legal representation from his firm.

In her statement to the police, Mrs. Linke said she had ordered the liquor by letter, with the understanding it was to be paid for in Plainfield. The procedure was carried out in full, resulting in the alleged violation. Mrs. Linke's husband is himself in the wholesale liquor business and pays the city $1,000 annually for the privilege which the New York concern, it is alleged, usurps. Moore was arrested on Madison avenue by Patrolman Kelley shortly after the complaint was made.

The arrest of today is similar to several made four years ago by the local police in an effort to prevent the sale of liquor in Plainfield by C. O. D. packages. The Siegel-Cooper firm was one of the concerns implicated. Chief Kiely, with the aid of the county authorities, secured convictions and fines of $200 were imposed. The defendants carried the cases to the Supreme Court, where the convictions were set aside on technical ground.

Nothing further was done in the matter until another move was made by Mrs. Linke this morning.

DUNELLEN COAL CO. TO BE A BANKRUPT

Voluntary Petition to Be Filed Today After Creditors Withdraw Petition.

Indebted to creditors to the amount of $500, the Dunellen Coal and Supply Co., of Dunellen, will go into voluntary bankruptcy today, according to Michael T. Moynihan, vice president and treasurer of the concern. The papers will be filed with Judge Steele at Somerville.

Creditors of the company petitioned the United States District Court at Trenton to adjudge the concern bankrupt, alleging that the firm had failed to pay $500 debts. Mr. Moynihan when asked if this was true, replied that the petition had been filed, but that it had been withdrawn by the petitioners, the name of whom he did not divulge. He explained further that the company would go into voluntary bankputcy, a move which had been contemplated for some time.

Raymond E. Smith, of Newark, is the president of the company. He was recently arrested in that city in connection with the failure of the Roseville Trust Co., of which he was treasurer. Released on bail he was again apprehended by the Newark authorities. Bankruptcy proceedings against him are pending.

Miss Nellie Carter has returned to her home after spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thornton.

Somerville

Alois Herter, who is employed in the Somerville Iron Works, had the end of his small finger of the left hand cut off while working there one day last week, since which time he has been compelled to remain at home. He expects to resume work within a few days.

An alarm of fire was turned in from box 24 about 10:15 last night, caused by a small blaze in the barroom of the Waldorf Hotel. This was put out by an extinguisher in the hands of Harry Vanderveer before the arrival of the firemen, and it was hardly necessary to call out the department. It is supposed that the fire was started through defective wiring leading to the electric beer pump. The flames were seen from the street, and when the room was entered it was found full of smoke, indicating that the fire had been smouldering for some time. The damage was but slight, principally to the varnish of the bar.

The Rev. F. J. Soule, pastor of the Baptist church, together with J. B. Losey, will attend the installation exercises of the Rev. J. Lewis Evans as pastor of the Washington Baptist church tomorrow.

A meeting of the Home Mission Society of the Baptist church will be held tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. D. Brady, on South street.

The union Thanksgiving services will be held this year at the First Reformed church, and the sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. William S. Cranmer, the pastor.

Miss Bertha DuMont is a guest this week of the Misses Wise, in New York city.

A. Gell has moved his family from Central avenue to North Gaston avenue, taking the house vacated by Francis Decker.

Raritan

The trolley company is rigidly enforcing the rule against smoking on the cars, and the practice of indulging in this habit on the rear platform has been broken up, much to the relief of the patrons, especially women.

The Y. L. B. C. of the Reformed church will give an entertainment in the chapel on Tuesday evening of next week. It will consist of Mother Goose and her children at the Gooseville School. Musical selections on the piano will also be rendered, and a good time is guaranteed.

VAN WYCK BROOKS ABROAD.

Van Wyck Brooks, formerly of Plainfield, who has been a professor in Leland Stanford University, is now visiting in England, being granted a leave of absence. Since going abroad, Mr. Brooks has been doing a great deal of magazine work, and it is possible that he may decide to make his home permanently in England, where he has many friends.

IN THE CITY COURT.—

George and Charles Curtis, John Long and Andrew Bonozzi, were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza Saturday on the complaint of Alonzo Terry, of Leland avenue, who charged the boys with shooting one of his chickens. The court ordered the youths to pay Mr. Terry 50 cents each for the dead fowl.

STANFORD'S NEW PRESIDENT

Dr. John Casper Branner Is the Second Head of the University.

At the recent installation of Dr. John Casper Branner as the second president of Stanford university the students presented a "presidential chair" to the university in commemoration of the event. The photograph shows President Branner seated in the chair. This massive seat of state is of dark oak, upholstered with red plush, the Stanford color being cardinal. In design the carved posts and arch at the back are suggestive of the famous pillared arcades which form the distinctive feature of the Stanford architecture. The seal of the university in carved and gilded oak gives the chair an additional touch of academic dignity. Dr. Branner has been at Stanford since the opening of the university and was inaugurated president exactly twenty-two years after Dr. David Starr Jordan, now chancellor of the university, became its first president in 1891.

He is best known as a geologist, and his standing in that science is shown by the fact that he is the most recent recipient of the Hayden medal, which is conferred every three years upon the man making the greatest contribution to the world's knowledge in geology and paleontology. While he was still an undergraduate at Cornell in 1875 he went to Brazil as a member of the imperial geological survey and since that time has made many trips to South America as the leader of scientific expeditions for the government of the United States and more frequently for the government of Brazil. As a result of his South American experiences he is the author not only of many books and scientific papers, but of a Portuguese grammar as well. Dr. Branner has been professor of geology at Stanford since the opening of the university and since 1899 has been vice president.

VERSATILITY IN THE ARMY.

Both Officers and Men Are Often Qualified For Other Professions.

General William H. Carter, U. S. A., who is in command of the troops on the Mexican border, can steer an aeroplane as well as guide an army. This is an illustration of the versatility which is so often met with in army officers and which is also to be found among the enlisted men.

There are few professions or trades that are not represented in the rank and file of the United States army. There are butchers, bakers, carpenters, bricklayers and electricians galore. Even college professors are sometimes to be found in the ranks as well as clerks and sometimes ministers. Some of them have entered the ranks in a spirit of adventure; some of them have gone "broke" in strange towns and have enlisted as a matter of need. Often it is some trouble—domestic or otherwise—that causes men to enlist. Once in the army it is difficult to break away. True, many serve their enlistment period and go out better equipped than ever to battle for bread, but to the majority, soldiering becomes a profession, and they stay with the army.

GENERAL CARTER AND LIEUTENANT MILLING READY FOR A FLIGHT.

FOR THE BUSINESS MEN.

The Plainfield Business Men's Association, formally started on its career on Friday night, should prove of inestimable value to the merchants and business men generally. The need for such an organization has been felt for a long time. While there are several civic bodies devoted to the welfare of the community at large, since the old Merchants' Association was merged into the Chamber of Commerce there has been none having for its object the mutual interests of the storekeepers.

It seems that one of the major purposes of this newly-formed association is to protect the merchant from being mulcted by useless advertising and from being compelled as it were to contribute to all sorts of things from which he derives no benefit. This abuse has grown to alarming proportions and only through organized effort can it be abated. Not only is the merchant asked to donate some of his wares to fairs, bazaars and the like, but he is asked to go down in his pocket and help some given undertaking by advertising in a program or pamphlet. Everyone knows this sort of advertising is simply throwing so much money away. Even the person soliciting it is fully aware of that fact. But the "club" is held over the head of the merchant; if he refuses he may lose trade for as a rule some good customer is sent to "work" him for the "adv." The whole thing, however practised, is a hold-up pure and simple.

The Business Men's Association has a mission to fill. It is needed in the community. With the right sort of men directing its efforts, and a glance over the list of those on the role shows that it is fortunate in that respect, the organization will be of real service.

Brander Matthews is in grave danger. Why, do you know he has had the impertinence to mention four women as eligible to the "Immortals" and he has ignored both Dr. Anna Shaw and the former Inez Milholland. The mean thing.

Will the American Associatian for the Study of Infant Mortality, in session at Washington, take up the pathetic case of the young Bull Moose party?—Boston Transcript.

Entirely unnecessary; it's an eugenic child.

We wish to acknowledge with sincere appreciation the generous comment of our contemporary, the Courier-News, to our "Do It For Plainfield" special edition.

In the Mexican situation, the President may be able to bluff Mr. Huerta, but when it comes to the high cost of living problem he can't intimidate Mrs. Hen.

Acting Governor Taylor finds that he is being put to the test in more ways than one for just now he is undergoing an examination for counselor's papers.

Whatever helps Plainfield, helps you and you should help it. Make it a point to see the poultry show some day this week.

The hen can't be indicted as a grafter for she doesn't get any part of the rake-off.

Charles Murphy must have tipped Yale off that it was a bad day for tigers.

It will soon be time for the Good Fellows to reorganize their army.

"Do It For Plainfield" every day in the year.

KIND WORDS.

(Plainfield Courier-News).

Yesterday's issue of the Daily Press was a forty-eight page paper, containing much of interest concerning the city and its mercantile affairs. We congratulate the editors upon the literary style and general typographical excellence of the issue. This issue is the kind that Plainfielders will send to their friends in other places. Business men will circulate it widely, and the slogan used in collecting matter for the edition, "Do it for Plainfield," indicates that the Daily Press made a worthy effort to live up to its ambitions.

(Newark Sunday Call.)

A special edition of the Plainfield Daily Press was issued on Friday. It contains forty-eight pages and in addition to the news of the day, accurately and pleasantly detailed, the issue contains many pages, printed on fine calendered paper describing Plainfield as "the Queen City of New Jersey," with many portraits and views; a reduced fac-simile of the first issue of the Daily Press of May 10, 1887; the industries and business interests of the city; its churches and synagogues. It is an issue that reflects much credit on its editors and proprietors. Leslie R. Fort is the manager.

(Camden Post Telegram.)

Under date of yesterday the Plainfield Press published an industrial edition of 48 pages, 32 pages being printed on calendered paper, illustrated with half-tone cuts showing the principal buildings and leading officials and business men of the town, and containing interesting "write ups"—historical, biographical, business. Under the management of Leslie R. Fort and Ralph L. Morrow the Press has taken on metropolitan airs, is serving its growing constituency better than ever and the industrial edition furnishes evidence that its value as an advertising medium is appreciated by the progressive Plainfielders.

(Orange Chronicle).

In yesterday's regular edition of the Plainfield Daily Press was included a thirty-two page historical and trade supplement, calculated to boost Plainfield, "the city of opportunity," and its numerous and diverse industries. It is profusely illustrated, the pictures being accompanied with appropriate text and business write-ups. It is an exceedingly attractive number and reflects credit on all departments of the Daily Press organization, of which Mr. Leslie R. Fort, formerly of East Orange, is the manager.

"If not too late, may I add my congratulations to others upon your latest achievement in the publication of "An Industrial Number of the Daily Press."

"Both in method and matter this publication has proven you capable of a highly creditable effort in journalism. It should be of value to Plainfield and do justice to your enterprise.

CHURCH ALONE CAN SOLVE THE PROBLEM

Dr. Wood Says Prohibition Party and Anti-Saloon League Are Profitless.

Stating that the liquor question will never be solved by organizations outside of the church, Rev. Dr. Hervey Wood, secretary of the Temperance Committee of the Baptist Conference of North America, speaking yesterday morning at the Park Avenue Baptist church, rebuked the Prohibition Party and the Anti-Saloon League, as worthless organizations spending enormous sums of money and accomplishing little good. He asserted that the latter body spent from $20,000 to $50,000 each year in New Jersey, and that despite the organized effort against the drink evil, no effective law had ever been passed through its influence or effort.

The various denominations throughout New Jersey and New York, have appointed a temporary committee which is noting legislative proceedings in Albany and Trenton, and endeavoring to have laws passed dealing with the liquor problem.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD FAIR NETTED FIREMEN $750

The three days fair and dance held last Thursday, Friday and Saturday by the Middlesex Volunteer Fire Co., of South Plainfield, netted that organization over $750. One of the features was a voting contest to determine the most popular fireman in the company, and the honor was accorded Chief William Hamilton, who had 150 ballots cast in his favor. Assistant Foreman John Thornton ran second with 95: President P. F. Kaine received 76, and M. Saverd and H. J. Manning ran fourth and fifth with 60 and 66 votes, respectively.

During the affair dancing afforded the chief amusement for the crowds that attended.

The complainants petitioned the court to wind up Cowling's business in order to preserve their claims. The liabilities are scheduled at $4,500 and the assets at $1,500.

WILSON DISCREDITS ALARMING REPORTS

Has Not Recalled O'Shaughnessy and Lind is Not Aboard Battleship.

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press.)

Washington, Nov. 17.—President Wilson has not directed the recall of Charge de'Affairs O'Shaughnessy at Mexico City and knows nothing about the report that he has been handed his passports. President Wilson doubts the story that Envoy John Lind has gone aboard a United States battleship. No offer of mediation has been made to General Carranza. The administration had no announcement to make this morning of any definite step in the Mexican situation.

It is evident that it is the purpose of the United States Government to let matters drift for the present, and to put the responsibility for the future upon Provisional President Huerta.

New York, Nov. 17.—Although the Mexican situation takes a new turn nearly every day, chiefly because of the attitude of President Huerta and General Carranza, thereby postponing the long expected break, those who are following the developments most closely and who are intimately acquainted with the Mexican people believe that developments of the greatest importance must now come within the next few days. Those who entertain this opinion are not saying, however, that shortly thereafter satisfactory conditions will prevail in Mexico. On the contrary they are confident that some time will be required to restore and establish peace and order.

Rapid Political Rise In New York State Of Present Executives

THE new governor of New York state and the lieutenant governor are quite young men when the importance of their respective offices is taken into consideration. They were both poor boys, who made their own way in the world and made it steadily and quickly.

Martin H. Glynn is physically and temperamentally the direct opposite of Mr. Sulzer. Of small stature, with twinkling eyes, a good natured face and a well developed sense of humor, he is utterly lacking in all bombastic qualities.

Martin H. Glynn was born forty-two years ago in the town of Kinderhook, in Columbia county, near the homesteads of Martin Van Buren and Samuel J. Tilden. He was educated in the public schools of his native town and as a youth was employed as an assistant bookkeeper in a cotton mill, where he earned sufficient money to defray the cost of his college education. In 1890 he entered Fordham university and was graduated at the head of his class in 1894.

For a time Mr. Glynn chose journalism for his life work. He joined the staff of the Times-Union in Albany and advanced in a few years to the post of managing editor. In the meantime he had devoted himself to the study of law and was admitted to the bar in 1897. By reason of his forceful editorials and speeches the young editor had become a figure in politics in Albany and had acquired considerable prominence in the councils of the Democratic party. In 1898 he was nominated and elected to congress, where he served two terms and made an enviable record. During his service in congress he was the youngest member of the house.

In 1906 both the Democratic and Independence league conventions nominated Mr. Glynn for state comptroller, and he was elected with all of his running mates except William Randolph Hearst, who headed the bipartisan ticket. His administration as comptroller won the warm commendation of Governor Charles E. Hughes. He divorced politics from the administration of his office and was especially active in searching out individuals and corporations that were evading their taxes and compelling them to pay up.

At the Syracuse convention last fall when he was nominated for lieutenant governor Mr. Glynn was seriously considered as a candidate for governor.

Robert F. Wagner, who has been president pro tem. of the senate and now becomes lieutenant governor, represents the Sixteenth district. He was born in Germany on June 8, 1877, and came to this country when he was eight years old. He attended the public schools in New York until 1893 and sold papers in the streets. He was graduated from the College of the City of New York in 1898. Then he went to the New York Law school, from which he was graduated in 1900. He was admitted to the bar the same year.

Mr. Wagner served in the assembly in 1905 and was renominated in 1906. He received 6,510 votes that year to 2,165 cast for his opponent. He was elected again in 1907 by a good majority. He was elected to the state senate in 1908 and served on several important committees. He was reelected for every term since and was twice elected by the Democrats as president pro tem. of the senate and then became Democratic leader of that body.

NETHERWOOD HOTEL AS A LOCAL ASSET

Editors, Plainfield Daily Press:

I notice in the paper some time ago that the value of the Netherwood Hotel property was being aired in court at Elizabeth. I heard on good authority that according to the views of different business men as to value under oath was from $150,000 down to $14,500. Some difference! I believe all our real estate dealers valued it at about $80,000. I ask myself, What is the matter here in Plainfield when such a valuable piece of property is sold for taxes? Can it be rectified Would other towns near New York allow such an ideal hotel to be torn down? I answer, No!

How many residents living here now first saw Plainfield when at the Netherwood Hotel? How many could be induced to locate here if they could be drawn to the hotel in some way and sit on the front piazza and get a view of the nicest little city in the United States. The view from that point is the finest anywhere near New York. Suppose they should motor over Belvidere avenue! I think quite a number would be so taken with the view and the good air that they would want to come again; possibly buy one of the empty houses along the avenue, or possibly build one. Several years ago I was out on Long Island with some New York real estate men who were trying to sell lots on what looked to me to be good farming land but for town lots it had no value. Among the crowd was one man who was just going to buy a lot or two. I got next to him. I gave him a nudge. Got him to one side and told him not to pay anything down until he saw a certain town over in New Jersey. I got him out here the next Sunday. One of our leading real estate men took him around the town, and over Belvidere avenue. I asked him what he thought of the town. He said he had been over a good part of Europe and quite some in the United States, but he had never seen such a beautiful place in all his travels.

That's what one man thinks. There are others who would think the same way. According to my way of thinking, the best way to help Plainfield real estate is to get people to motor out from New York and surrounding towns to the Netherwood Hotel. There never was a better time than now. Automobiles have revolutionized the mode of travel. Have signs like other hotels do. Say, in Newark have one in a conspicuous place where automobilists can see it. Have on it "18 miles to Netherwood Hotel, Plainfield—good accomodations for automobile parties," etc. Some up in the Bronx read so many miles via Lackawanna ferry at 23d street; some in New Rochelle, some in Mt. Vernon, Bronxville, Tuccahoe and Yonkers. They are all along the Boston Post road, where there is lots of travel.

I have been asked several times in New York, "What's the matter with Plainfield?" The answer to that is, "It is not advertised." See Westfield in the past three or four years how it has built up. The cause of the boom was advertising Every elevated station and I think every subway station had Westfield advertisements. How much better place Plainfield is for everything, if people outside only knew it was on the map. Almost anywhere in town there is a good gravel bottom to start the foundation on for any ordinary building—natural drainage. Supposing Westfield had that gravel bottom, it would be noised about from one end of the State to the other. Years ago people used to rent furnished houses here for the summer. Doctors use to send people here to get some of our good air. Nothing doing in that line now. No better equipped railroad goes out of New York than the Jersey Central. No strap-hangers and no under-ground system (people will be under-ground long enough if they only wait their turn). Everybody has a seat.

Advertise the hotel and the hotel will advertise Plainfield more than any other system of advertising that can be devised. I heard a prominent real estate owner say he would be one of six to buy the hotel if it could be got at a fair price, and incorporate a company and operate it. I think he meant business. Are there five other men of means in Plainfield who would go into such a deal? It has been demonstrated that the hotel can be run as a hotel, but not as a family boarding house. When the late John H. Breslin ran the business, I'm told by one who was there that sometimes on Saturday nights when people would come out from New York for week-ends, cots would have to be put in the halls to accommodate the guests. Then there were billiard tables, livery and a bar attached to the hotel. Why couldn't the same be done now if there was a garage attached instead of a livery? Just as many people would come out here in automobiles as they did with horses and coachmen. At that time, I'm told they employed forty or more waiters. Stages ran from the hotel to Plainfield's business section. Our merchants profited by it. Everything was booming. That's the time Plainfield got a big boost. Many of the guests liked the city; some bought houses, some built homes. Looks to me to be the best means of advertising Plainfield in the outside world that could be devised.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

JAMES T. MacMURRAY,
City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., Nov. 3, 1913.

AN ORDINANCE

To Regulate the Use of Sewers in the City of Plainfield and the Making of Connections Therewith.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. The Committee on Sewers shall have the direction and control, subject to the orders of the Common Council, of all the sewers and house connections in the city, and of the construction, maintenance, repair and use of the same.

Sec. 2. No person shall make any connection with any sewer in the City of Plainfield, or open any manhole, lamphole or flush tank, or clean or repair any sewer connection, except with the written permit of the "Engineer in Charge of Sewers" or his authorized representative and no such permit shall be given to any applicant unless said applicant is properly registered at the office of the Department of Health as a Master or Foreman Plumber. The applicant for a permit shall at the time of making application, deposit with the City Treasurer or with the said Engineer (by him to be deposited with the City Treasurer), the sum of six dollars. If the street surface over the connection is maintained by the applicant in proper condition for a period of one year from date of laying the connection, five dollars of said deposit shall be returned to the applicant, but if the street surface over the connection should require repair during the year, and the plumber should neglect or refuse to make the necessary repairs within 24 hours after receiving notice to make such repairs, then the Engineer shall cause such repairs to be made, and the cost of the work done and materials used shall be deducted from the amount on deposit. One dollar of said deposit shall be considered to be the charge for the connection permit and for inspecting the work.

Where openings are made in brick or similar permanent pavements, an additional charge of three dollars and seventy-five cents ($3.75) shall be paid for each square yard of such pavement actually replaced by the City. This fee to be paid upon completion of the repair, when five dollars of the amount deposited in securing the permit will be returned to the plumber.

Sec. 3. No more than one building shall be connected with the sewer through one connection without a special permit from the Department of Health.

Sec. 4. No trap shall be placed on any connection between the sewer and the building. All sewer connections shall have free ventilation through the soil, waste and vent pipes of the building.

Sec. 5. No surface, underground or rain water shall be allowed to enter any sewer or house connection, and no vault or cesspool shall be connected with any sewer or house connection.

Sec. 6. No person shall permit any substance to flow into any house connection or sewer which shall injure said house connection or sewer or shall tend to form deposits or obstruct them.

Sec. 7. Every garage shall be provided with a properly constructed gasoline and oil separator to intercept the gasoline and prevent it from entering the sewer, the separator to be provided with a vent pipe to carry off the gasoline vapor.

Sec. 8. All stables, garages, ice cream factories, milk depots and similar establishments, where floor drains are to be connected with the city sewers, shall be provided with catch basins or sand traps to receive and retain all sand, dirt and other refuse which would tend to clog the house drain or sewer. The catch basin or sand trap shall be made water tight and the outlet pipe shall be turned down to a sufficient depth to prevent the sand or other refuse from being washed out into the sewer. The catch basin or sand trap shall have a cover which can be easily removed and the sand and refuse must be removed at sufficiently frequent intervals to keep the deposit below the bottom of the outlet pipe. The entire construction shall be made under the direction of the Plumbing Inspector of the Health Department

Sec. 9. All work done in making connections from buildings to sewers and all materials furnished therefor shall conform to all the requirements of the specifications annexed hereto and adopted herewith and entitled "Specifications for the Construction of Drains or Connections from Buildings to Sewers in the City of Plainfield, N. J."

Sec. 10. Any person or corporation violating any of the provisions of this Ordinance shall, upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding ten days for each offense, or both such fine and imprisonment.

M. on the day in which any work is to be inspected during the forenoon of that day, and not later than 1:30 P. M. when the work is to be inspected in the afternoon. All work and materials shall be subjected to the inspection of the Engineer or his representative, and all improper work shall be reconstructed, and all materials which do not conform to the requirements of the specifications shall be removed from the work. In no case shall any work be covered until it has been inspected and approved by the Engineer or his representatives.

Location.

The proper location for the connection will be given at the time the permit is issued and no deviation from this location shall be made and no opening shall be cut into a sewer under any circumstances by plumbers or their employes without special permission from the Engineer or his authorized representative.

Precautions.

All excavations, piles of materials and other obstacles incident to the work must be protected with barricades and lights to prevent accidents. All ordinances relating to such precautions and safeguards must be observed by the plumber and his employees.

Excavation.

All macadam stone or other paving material removed in excavating the trenches shall be piled by itself, and after the completion of the work shall be relaid and the street left in as good condition as before being disturbed. In case the stone is wasted, or if the trenches settle, the plumber shall furnish new stone at his own expense.

Excavations shall be made in open trenches and no tunneling will be allowed except by permission of the Engineer

In each the ground in the bottom of the trench is soft or spongy, it shall be excavated to such increased depth as the Engineer may direct, and shall be refilled with gravel or other suitable material, thoroughly rammed.

Cast Iron Pipe.

House connections shall be constructed of four inch cast iron pipe, strong, tough and of sound even grain, weighing not less than 12 pounds per linear foot, and coated inside and outside with hot coal tar varnish.

Cement.

Only Portland cement of some standard brand of good reputation shall be used in the work. It shall conform to the requirements of the recent specifications of the American Society for Testing Materials.

Mortar.

Mortar, unless specially ordered by the Engineer, shall be composed of Portland Cement and sand in the proportion of one of cement to two and one-half of sand.

Sheeting and Shoring.

Sheeting and shoring shall be of sound material and of sufficient dimensions to properly and safely withstand the pressure from the sides of the trenches, and shall be used wherever, in the opinion of the Engineer, it is necessary.

Grade.

No connections with the sewers shall be laid with a less inclination than one quarter of an inch to the foot except by special permit at owners' risk.

Laying Cast Iron Pipe.

In laying the iron pipe, gaskets of clean, sound, hemp yarn, braided or twisted, and tightly driven, shall be used to pack the joints. The best quality of pure, soft lead, suitable for calking, shall be used, and the depth of lead shall not be less than one inch. Before running the lead the joints shall be carefully wiped out, and shall be run full at one pour. If the gasket becomes wet before time for pouring, it must be removed and dry oakum or jute inserted in its place. No calking shall be done except by competent and experienced men. In all cases the calking shall be toward the place of the gate and other points where the lead is likely to be porous. The joints shall be thoroughly calked and when finished, the lead shall be flush with the face of the socket and the joint shall be absolutely tight.

Pipes to Be Clean.

All earth and rubbish must be removed from the pipes before they are laid, and the open end of the pipe must be protected with a tight plug.

Pipes to Be Plugged.

When the pipe is laid into a building before the soil pipe is in position, the end of the house connection shall be closed with a cemented or leaded plug.

Refilling.

The lower part of the trenches shall be refilled with the best of the excavated material, and in refilling under and around the pipe, only fine material, free from stones, shall be used. No filling shall be done above the pipe until the material around it shall have been thoroughly tamped. The remaining portion of the trench shall be refilled in horizontal layers not exceeding nine inches in depth, each of which shall be well rammed. The plumber must see that the earth is not thrown into the trench faster than it can be distributed and properly rammed, and in filling, the number of men ramming shall not be less than the number of men filling. All extra material and rubbish must be promptly removed after the completion of the backfilling.

LITTLE TALKS BY THE WANT AD MAN

Copyright, 1913, The Int. Syndicate, Baltimore.

No. 32.

SUPPOSE you put a piece of cardboard in your window reading something like this: "Boarders Wanted" or "Rooms for Rent" or "Fore Sale or Rent" or "Good Table Board."

How many people see that sign?

Just as many people as happen to be passing that way and who glance toward your window.

Now put a little WANT AD. in the CLASSIFIED columns of this paper—under the head, say, of "Boarders Wanted" or "Rooms for Rent," or some classification that best suits the accommodation you wish to offer.

How many people see that ad.?

Thousands! People who are looking for it. People who want the accommodations you offer.

Classified advertising is concentrated advertising. It goes straight to the people you want to reach. The people you want to reach go straight to it.

The proof of advertising's power is in its results. The WANT AD. columns are result producers. Try them, and you will discover for yourself the truth of this statement.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

The Housewife's Daily Economy Calendar

FRANCES MARSHALL

The Comfort of Your Pets.

A good many persons look on pet animals as convenient toys that need little attention. When these persons go away for the summer they turn the cat out-of-doors to care for herself. They forget that a draught hurts the canary and leave the window open all night near his cage. They let the dog's water dish go unfilled through a warm summer day, and they let the water in the goldfish tank stand unchanged until some of the fish die and remind their owners that fresh water is essential to their life.

Pet animals are delightful possessions for those who like them. They give companionship and protection to mankind, according to their dispositions and training. They form pleasant play-fellows for children, and teach them many lessons of kindness and consideration. But pet animals ought not to be owned by persons who have not time and inclination to care for them properly.

Dogs.

The owner of a dog should remember that most dogs have very sensitive dispositions, and that the making of a good friend and obedient follower of a dog rests with the master. If dogs are teased from puppyhood, if they are punished undeservedly, if their food is irregularly given, or if their food is of an insufficient or unsuitable kind, they will probably be irritable and disobedient. Never punish the dog unless he has some idea of what he is being punished for. Feed him regularly and rather sparingly. Have his food palatable to him and free from sweets. Keep his water dish full always of fresh, cool water. Make the dog stay out of doors most of the time, if possible. If he must stay in the house at night, let him sleep in a cool, well-ventilated room. Keep his hair clean. Don't make a mollycoodle of him; let him bark occasionally and take him for long tramps in the woodrs and fields to harden him.

Canaries.

The canary should be kept always in a clean cage that is scalded once a week. The botom of the cage should be covered with clean sand or gravel. The water dish should be kept clean and the bird should be given fresh water daily. A daily bath should also be supplied. The only food that a bird should have is seed and greens—celery tops, chickweed, lettuce, or some other salad green. Keep the bird out of a draught and cover it loosely at night. Give it a sun bath every day—that is to say, put its cage in the sunshine.

Cats.

Cats need care, in spite of their nine lives. They should always be given access to a dish of clean water to drink. Their food should be simple and regularly given. A little raw meat every day or two, and a little cooked meat, with bread and plenty of milk between times, keeps them in good condition.

USEFUL GIFTS FOR EVERYBODY

Pretty and Well Equipped Pincushions Never Come Amiss.

WHEN in doubt give pincushions, said a very astute young woman. Well, when one considers the matter it is really a wise piece of advice, for who does not need pins of all kinds, both early and often? If the said pincushion is generously supplied with a good variety and quality of pins, no matter how many other pincushions may be received, yours will be of use, for pins, like time, seem to have wings. They are here today, and tomorrow who knows where?

Each season, too, brings out new and attractive designs in which to fashion the useful pincushion. The pincushion of yesteryear can be easily recognized by the expert in fancy work.

The hanging pincushion illustrated is a dainty and useful trifle that will be appreciated by the traveler. It can be hung on the dresser, where it is always conveniently at hand and adds to the attractiveness of the barest hotel room. This pincushion is made of satin ribbon. It has a puffed border of inch wide ribbon made double by having two pieces of the ribbon sewed together and having cases on each edge through which cords may be run for drawing it up. The odd looking pendants with the ivory rings attached for the safety pins are gathered by running a few stitches first on one edge of the ribbon, then to the other, and drawing up the thread. In the center of the flower rows of small fancy pins are neatly inserted.

Baskets are used in many ways in fashioning fancy articles. A charming use of a miniature wicker basket is illustrated here. This pincushion form was bought or made to fit the basket. This one was covered with satin and then with a layer of gold net. Two satin ribbons were woven in and out of meshes of the basket, and satin ribbon roses were used as decorations. The pins were arranged in the basket in carefully shaded rows.

The flower pincushion is very popular this year. When making one of these try to select for it the favorite blossom of the person for whom it is being made.

One of the new kinds of pincushions is made to represent a wild rose. The center is a circle of cardboard thickly padded and covered with yellow velvet. Five large pink satin petals surround it, while, instead of a stalk, a loop of green velvet is attached with which to hang it on the wall.

Pincushions of embroidered linen are always nice and are easy to make, as almost every one can do a little simple embroidery.

A Delicious Pastry.

Orange Meringue Pies.—Take the yolks of three eggs and beat them until light. Add one scant cupful of sugar, the grated rind of half an orange, the strained juice of two oranges and one cupful of scalded and cooled sweet milk. Pour into a pie dish lined with rich paste and bake until firm in the center. When done cover with a meringue made of the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Brown in the oven.

Chocolate and Fruit Pie.—Take the yolks of four eggs, beat them and add one full cup of sugar. Stir well together. Add eight tablespoonfuls of grated chocolate and beat again. Put into a saucepan, and as it heats stir in slowly two tablespoonfuls of flour dissolved in a quarter cupful of cold milk. As it begins to thicken take from the fire and add one large cupful of chopped figs. Line two pie pans with pastry and bake. Then put in the filling and return to the oven a few moments to "set." Add meringue and brown in the oven.

Toothsome Dainties.

Lemon Cream Pie.—Take one tablespoonful of flour, two-thirds of a teacupful of water, one teacupful of sugar, yolks of two eggs and one lemon. Grate the rind of the lemon and squeeze out the juice. Mix flour and sugar and grated rind of lemon. Then add yolks of the eggs well beaten and the water. Cook over a slow fire until it becomes thick. Make the pie crust. Line the pie plate with it and bake for ten minutes. Take out and put lemon filling in. Return to the oven for five minutes. Beat the whites to a stiff froth with one-half teacupful of sugar. Spread over the pie and brown nicely.

Prune Pie.—This is made with an uncooked crust. Fill this with stewed prunes and bake it. Make a stiff meringue of three egg whites beaten with three tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar. Bake the pie until the crust is brown, then add the meringue and brown.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Mermaid's Dinner Party For the Fishes.

She Sent Out the Invitations.

"ONCE upon a time," began daddy, and Jack and Evelyn looked very happy, for daddy's best stories always began with "once upon a time," "there was a beautiful mermaid who lived way down in the bottom of the sea. She wasn't lonely, for she played with all the little fishes who live down in the sea, and she had a lovely private park of her own with the most wonderful shells and plants growing in it. In this park she used to give fine dinners. One day she had been hearing from a crab who had almost been caught in a trap that the people living up on the earth often had 'fish dinners.' The mermaid cried for days and dried her eyes with her long hair, and then she'd cry again as she would think of the cruel earth people. She decided one evening she would give a dinner, so she sent her messenger, the tortoise, out with invitations written on moss with sea blue ink. Of course all the fish came to the dinner. There were the Crab family, the Oyster family, the Turtle family, the Lobster family, the Trout family and the Salmon family and ever so many more. The mermaid had a novel menu, for her dishes were named after the names she had heard were given to the earth people as her best method in comforting the families who had lost their little fish because the people had caught them for their parties. They had 'Jones broth,' 'Johnston fish,' 'Whitman meat,' 'Brown potatoes,' 'Green salad' and 'White ice cream.' The little fishes clapped their fins together and said, 'Oh, dear mermaid, you are so good and your parties are such fun and different from all other parties!' Just at that moment a crab who had been expected earlier came rushing in and cried: 'Oh, mermaid, I am dreadfully sorry to be late, but I was listening to the most delightful talk I ever heard! Two men were rowing above me and trying to catch fish. One of them said he had been fishing all day and hadn't had a bite. The other replied that he thought it was useless to fish in that part of the water any more, for it had risen so during the past few days.'

"Whereupon the mermaid and the little fishes realized it was the mermaid's tears that had made the water so high, and then they all wept some more for joy and to add to the water.

"All the people who went out to fish there could not catch any fish and went home wondering what could be the matter with the water. They tried very hard to find out what had happened to make it so high, but they could not do so, for they couldn't have understood what the fishes said if they had met one, and you may be very sure that the clever little fishes kept out of their way."

"How silly of a fish to cry!" said Jack.

Practical Fashion Hints

By Alice Gibson

THE schoolgirl can never have too many frocks and the mother who sews for the little miss must appreciate the straight lined designs of this season that are so quickly and easily made.

7904 has a straight plaited skirt attached to an underwaist. The blouse shows a drop-shoulder, a small sailor collar and a low belt. There is also a removable shield. A folded girdle of ribbon may be added if the dress is intended for other than ordinary occasions.

There is a wide choice of materials for small folks' clothes this season as well as designs in which to make them. Among the wash fabrics, cotton crepe leads, as it launders very easily and requires no ironing. Serge is very durable for schools. Ratine and wool corduroy are other satisfactory fabrics.

Ratine in one of the new rich reds, with collar and belt of white, would be charming used with this design.

This little dress may be copied in size 8 with 2⅝ yards of 42 inch material.

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

"Nearly Married," which is at the Gaiety theatre, is a farce by Edgar Selwyn, the chap that wrote "The Country Boy," you know. "Nearly Married" is an awfully funny farce. It comes nearer keeping its audiences in constant laughter than any play produced on Broadway in a blue moon or so. The story of "Nearly Married" is funny, but to see it acted is funnier. A man and his wife decide that they want a divorce. When it is about to be granted they decide to make it up. Then they start on their second honeymoon without telling their friends of their reconciliation. A meddlesome brother, who is also the wife's attorney, arrives with the decree five minutes after the couple have left for parts unknown and the race to overtake the wife who is no wife and the bridegroom who can't be one, is on. Talk about funny situations and hearty laughs; "Nearly Married" is just one roar after another from the time the curtain goes up on the first act until its final fall on the third, when the audience is in a veritable laughing panic. Stop being a grouch. Resolve to be happy. And in order to get a running start go and see "Nearly Married" at the Gaiety. You haven't an idea how it will buck you up and make the whole world look brighter. Selwyn's farce is a better tonic than any dope your doctor can prescribe for a lazy liver.

JEWISH FARMERS MEET.

New Brunswick, Nov. 17.—At the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station here Wednesday there will be a session of the Federation of Jewish Farmers of America, which began its fifth annual convention in Manhattan Saturday night. At the session here from 10 a.m. to 12 m. there will be an address by Dr. Jacob Lipman, director of the station, on "Of What Help Can the Experiment Station Be to the Farmers of the State."

Prof. F. C. Minkler will lecture and give demonstrations on "Judging Dairy Cows." From 1 o'clock to 4:30 o'clock visits will be made to various departments of the station and explanations of their work will be made by the professors in charge and by their assistants. The sessions to be held here on Wednesday will be held at the Educational Alliance building, East Broadway and Jefferson streets, New York. Tonight there will be a discussion of co-operative credit unions.

SAVED FROM POTTER'S FIELD.

Elizabeth, Nov. 17.—Because of the generosity of friends with whom she had become acquainted since leaving home, Viola B. Orts, also known as Beatrice DeFerrier, will not be burried in Potter's field. The woman died at the Elizabeth General Hospital ten days ago under suspicious circumstances, and although her husband, mother and other relatives were notified by John F. Martin, the morguekeeper, they failed to claim the body. The body was buried Saturday in Rosedale and Linden Park cemetery. The Somerset county authorities have intimated that a Somerville man would be arrested in connection with the case. Mrs. Orts has relatives in Somerset, Warren and Hunterdon counties. Her last residence was the Shady Point Hotel, in Newark.

REFERENDUM ADOPTION VOID.

Westfield, Nov. 17.—Asserting that the requirements of the law were not complied with before election, opponents of the Town Planning and Art Commission law, which referendum was carried by one vote November 4, now claim the adoption was illegal. The law requires a petition signed by five per cent. of the voters before it can be submitted to the voters and this, the critics point out, was not done.

HOPE RESUMES ITS FAMOUS WIN HABIT

After Mid-week Reverse the Chapel Basket Tossers Trounce Opponents.

PILE UP A BIG SCORE

Final Count Was 41 to 11—Visitors Scored But One Field Goal in the First Period of Play—Good-Will Players Put up a Good Contest.

Playing rings around their rivals from Newark, the Hope chapel quintet ran away with another victory Saturday night on their home court, pulling down the colors of the Good-Will aggregation with a count of 41 to 11. The chapelites showed up especially strong in this contest, their fast team work and excellent shooting asserting itself with brilliancy throughout the entire contest. In the first half a single field goal comprised the sum and substance of the Newark team's tally card but they took on a decided brace in the second half and although at no time did the visitors appear dangerous, they rolled up a count of nine in this session.

The home team's card of ten was more than tripled in the final period of play and the ball was in the Hope team's possession during the greater part of the time in this period. Every man on the winning side took an active part in bringing the game to the chapelites and those who were inconspicuous in the shooting covered themselves with glory in the guarding department.

Although not a week aggregation the Good-Will five appeared to be bewildered by the lightning work of the home basket tossers and took a one-sided beating during the evening. The visitors presented one of the best appearances of any team that has thus far played on the Hope court, their playing regalia making a decided hit with the basketball enthusiasts who attended the contest and their work against the chapelites brought forth a great deal of favorable comment from all sides.

The Heron brothers, as usual, were the leading point-getters for the winners, Tommy getting ten and his younger brother amassing a total of thirteen in this contest. For the losers, Holzheimer was the leading point winner, getting a trio of field goals and two fouls, making a total of eight for him.

WENZ FINISHED THIRD IN INTERCOLLEGIATE MEET

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 17.—The University of Maine won the New England intercollegiate cross-country run here Saturday with a total of 40 points. Dartmouth was second with a score of 44, and the other colleges finished in the following order: Colby, 69; Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 79; Brown, 124; Massachusetts Agricultural College, 163; Amherst, 178, and Williams, 268.

Marceau, of Dartmouth, was the first of the runners to finish, covering the 4.7 miles in 17 minutes 37 seconds. He was closely followed by Ball and Pretiz, of Maine, and Wenz, of Colby. The course was in excellent condition, and all of the runners finished in good physical form.

Wenz is the little Roselle runner who represented the Elizabeth Y. M. C. A. in the dual five-mile run with the local association's track team here last spring and won second place, being beaten by Willie Webber by a matter of inches.

WATCHUNGS WON ON RIVAL'S OWN COURT

Company K Proved Easy for Speedy Mountain Clan Who Ran Away With Game.

Company K basket cagers submitted to a defeat on their own court Saturday night at the hands of the strong Watchung A. A. outfit, the final tally card reading 22 to 14 in favor of the visitors. Speedy team work and the ability to cage the ball when chances presented themselves won the game for the mountaineers who put up an excellent article of the court game.

As basket cagers, Bodin and Underhill monopolized the honors, and Thompson and Trotter were the chief point winners for the soldier boys. The Co. K outfit was plainly experiencing an off-night and the Watchung contingent played rings around their rivals the greater part of the game, especially in the second half when the military defense grew weaker as the rival's work began to strengthen as the contest progressed. Armstrong, Herrman and Fetherstone, the winning guards, put up excelent games and it was largely due to their close work against Co. K's forwards that the latter team went down to defeat with such a low score rolled up.

NEWARK TEAM PUT UP A STIFF FIGHT

Visitors Threw a Big Scare Into the Y. M. C. A. Camp Saturday Night.

LOCAL'S CLOSE CALL

Final Score 49 to 34—Result Always a Matter of Contention—Losers Led the Scoring in the First Game.

Putting up an inferior game against a strong foe on the association court Saturday night, the Y. M. C. A. basketball team had another narrow escape from a drubbing at the hands of the Newark team that was scheduled to play on the local court at 8:15 but failed to show up until 9 o'clock. Although the final score was 49 to 34 this card falls far short of showing just how close the battle was waged and the association five was in constant danger from beginning to end. Many times the visitors came within four points of tying the score and for a time led the goal getting the first half by a considerable margin. In the middle of the second period the visitors brought the score up to 27 to 25, but the pace was evidently too fast for them and they soon fell back.

While the locals managed to win out in the long run, they put up one of the loosest games yet played on the association court and the basket caging prowess of Gavett was the only thing that separated them from defeat. Time and again Gavett caged the sphere from a vantage point under the basket with his little rival hanging on to his shoulders and it was practically impossible for the visitors to stop him when he once got the ball in his clutches.

Despite the fact that Frank Dunning did some clever work as a referee the game soon resolved itself into a rough and tamble fight and fouls were numerous on the part of both aggregations. Close guarding by each set of goal preventers encouraged fouling to some extent and many penalties had to be levied by Dunning during the course of the game.

Gavett and Brynairski were the leading scorers of the game, while L. Fagan and Silvers did the best work for the visitors. Glover's guarding and Moulton's all-around playing were also brilliant features of the contest.

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL'S BIG GAME RESULTS IN SCORELESS TIE

(By William Peacock, captain of the Plainfield High School Football Team).

Plainfield High School, playing their best game of the season, held the strong Phillipsburg team to a scoreless-tie Saturday afternoon at the latter place. Although outweighed by fifteen pounds to a man, the Plainfield boys outplayed their opponents in every quarter and failed to score twice by a margin of inches.

Phillipsburg won the toss and Plainfield received the ball, Rosenson running it back to his own 35-yard line. On several end runs and smashes through tackle the ball was brought to Phillipsburg's 20-yard line where I tried a double pass but sent the ball too soon and Rosenson was thrown for a loss. This made the fourth down with about five yards to go.. Instead of trying to gain the distance on a run I tried a drop-kick. I kicked the ball a little low and it hit the upright post, then bounced over and hit the cross-bar and rolled out for no goal. The ball was put in play on the 20-yard line, hovered around centrefield the rest of the quarter. At no time in the game was Phillipsburg dangerously near scoring except at the end of the second quarter. With the ball on their 30-yard line, Bellie dropped back for a drop-kick but McKenzie broke through and blocked it, the half ending here.

Plainfield received the kick-off in the second half, the ball going to Butler on his 40-yard line. In this quarter the ball sauntered around mid-field never getting within the 20-yard line of either team. In the fourth quarter Gavett punted to Nolun on his 15-yard line and Mann tackled him in his tracks. Phillipsburg made big gains through their right guard and end bringing the ball to Plainfield's 30-yard line, where Snyder fell on a fumbled ball. Plainfield then tried an end run. This was followed by a long forward pass across the line by Rosenson. It was a perfect pass. At the start Mann was interfered with by Phillipsburg's right end. By this he lost a foot or so and the ball struck his hands, but he was unable to hold it and it fell to the ground. He had a clear field and no man within five yards. If he had caught the ball he would have had an end run but the whistle blew, ending the game. White starred for Plainfield, time and again breaking through and getting the man before he could start.

HUNTSMEN LOSE MOUNTS IN TWENTY MILE CHASE

The heavy going did not stop the Watchung Hunt from holding its run Saturday afternoon, as many riders met the hounds at Melrose Manor, they being cast in nearby. The hounds set a merry pace for at least eight miles going toward and checking at Iselin, where they were taken up and cast in again on the other side of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, crossing numerous farms and checking at Potter's Crossing, a distance of about twelve miles. The final run lasted about thirty-five minutes.

While crossing the Force farm a number of riders lost their mounts, but none were injured. Among those seen in the field were Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H., L. B. Smith, H. A. Bourne, H. Stuart Hollis, J. J. O'Donohue, C. H. Barron, Miss Gertrude Noe, Beverley Brown, Miss Margaret Brown, Col. C. E. S. Bellows, William Walters, S. D. French, R. H. Towner and Huntsman Harrison.

NETHERWOOD DEFEATED.

Cranford, Nov. 17.—The eleven of the Cranford Boys' Club defeated the Netherwood Athletic Club here Saturday at the Boys' Club grounds, 21 to 3. The victors scored all their points in the last quarter. Babbitt, Lenz, Toole and Jeandy starred for Cranford, while Dewey and Bellows were Netherwood's shining lights. A return game will be played Saturday.

—Nine-tenths of the merchants would advertise honestly and frankly, whether or not that were the best policy. But the tenth one will always be wise enough to do so whether it is a principle with him or not.

HOLY CROSS SMEARED ST. STEPHEN'S ELEVEN

Locals Piled up a Score of 66 to 0 Against the New York Crew Here.

Battling against the St. Stephen's Field Club eleven, of New York, on Cricket Field, Saturday afternoon, the Holy Cross warriors administered another walloping to a rival foe, this time piling up the biggest count of the season, 66 to 0. The rival aggregation put up an inferior article of football and never had a lookin with the locals who rushed the ball up and down the field apparently unhindered by the opposing forces.

Numerous attempts to gain ground through the North Plainfielders' line proved futile and the visitors soon resorted to their repertoire of tricks and open plays to gain whatever ground they did. Their total number of gained yards was exceedingly small, however, and the Holy Cross eleven had the pigskin in its possession during the greater part of the four quarters. Soon after the contest opened the odds swayed in favor of Holy Cross and from the middle of the first quarter until the final chirp of the referee's whistle there was nothing of interest to the spectator but to watch for the heighth to which the Holy Cross tally card was soaring. The backfield of the locals tore the opposition up as like so much paper and many long and sensational gains were made on straight, old fashioned football. Intermingled with the line smashing of Holy Cross was a plentiful supply of forward passes and trick and series plays.

MISS MARGARET WEYHER—ONE OF THE YOUNG WOMEN WHO WILL RIDE ASTRIDE—A NEW DEPARTURE AT THIS YEAR'S HORSE SHOW

MR. ALFRED G. VANDERBILT

Classic in its surroundings and yet so modern that it lifts its prohibition for the first time against women riding astride, the National Horse Show of America is in full swing at Madison Square Garden, New York city.

New owners have made debuts with strings which have been the talk of the summer; six nations sent cavalry steeds, among which Russia and Norway made their initial appearance, and the greatest and possibly the smallest of the equine breed can be seen on the yielding tanbark.

This, the twenty-ninth annual exhibition, is cosmopolitan in tone, for European nations sent some of the finest examples of their studs. There are 1,750 entries, fifty less than last year.

MR. F. GOODBODY'S BEAU SABREUR

MR. E. B. McLEAN'S HIGHBALL

With twenty-five classes to be judged today the officials of the Horse Show in Madison Square Garden will have their first real day's work and from now until the show closes on Saturday night there will be no let up in their labors. The opening on Saturday was just a preliminary canter and only a few classes were judged. By the middle of the week the going will have quickened into a brisk trot and the speed will increase day by day until a rousing gallop brings the exhibitions to an end with the championship classes.

Though the championships in the regular divisions are reserved for Saturday, the hackney breeders will anticipate this line of competition and the title for this breed of high steppers will be awarded this morning when mares will be judged for the championship after four previous classes of hackneys have been passed on. The judging began at 10 o'clock and the morning visitors were treated to a lively display of speed and action by the hackneys, which were shown on leading lines. The morning session also introduced the foreign officers in the preliminary contest for officer's chargers. The entries for the Plaza cup are so numerous that only a portion will be held in the morning, the remainder going over until the afternoon. For this event there are entries from Russia, Norway, England, France, Belgium, Canada and the United States.

There is a varied program for the afternoon, ranging from harness horses to hunt teams, the latter appearing in the regular hunting uniform.

SCENES CONNECTED WITH THE CAPTURE OF JUAREZ BY CONSTITUTIONALISTS.

CONSTITUTIONALIST SOLDIERS IN THE FIELD.

STUART PHOTO.

INTERNATIONAL BRIDGE BETWEEN EL PASO, TEXAS AND JUAREZ, MEXICO.

Three Americans were killed in the brief battle which resulted in the capture by the Mexican constitutionalists of the city of Juarez, on the Mexican border, a pivot upon which has hinged the success of the Madero revolution against the Diaz régime.

Three thousand rebels took part in the sudden attack upon Juarez. The total loss of life to both sides is estimated at twenty-one. While the short battle was in progress bullets fell thick in Pioneer Plaza, in the centre of El Paso, shattering many windows and causing a panic.

Charles Sergerson, an automobile dealer of El Paso, Texas, was killed in his car in Juarez. Two other Americans, who have not been identified, were killed in a raid upon a Juarez gambling house.

Hundreds of residents of El Paso watched the flash of the field guns from a safe distance. United States troops stationed at the international bridge across the Rio Grande prevented Americans from crossing to Juarez while the fighting was in progress.

The rebel forces boldly entered Juarez on a troop train which passed unchallenged through the federal outposts, who thought it a government train with reinforcements for the garrison. The rebels detrained without discovery, placed their artillery and in a few minutes were ready for action. The first volley was the signal for their arrival.

The government troops, asleep in the barracks, fell into line half clad, and attempted to make a stand. After two hours' fighting they had to retire from their position to reassemble near the race track. In the capture of Juarez the rebels have seized the most important northern border port which has fallen into the hands of the constitutionalists. Its capture transcends in importance the fall this week of Culiacan, capital of Sinaloa, which probably will be made the headquarters of the Carranza forces.

The capture of the city was the result of clever strategy of the constitutionalist leaders. Villas and Herrera were reported to be attacking Chihuahua city in force. As soon as the federal troops were despatched to reinforce the Chihuahua garrison Villas and Herrera withdrew their troops from about Chihuahua and proceeded to Juarez with all possible despatch. Taken by surprise, the weakened garrison was not able to make more than a brief resistance.

SCOTCH PLAINS WON OPENING COURT GAME

Summit Chapel Club Five Beaten by a Small Advantage in First Contest.

Scotch Plains Parish House representatives won their first basketball game of the season on the Parish House court Saturday night, defeating the Summit Chapel Club five by a score of 23 to 17. The contest was a close and hard fought one from start to finish and it was anybody's game up to the time the final whistle blew and Scotch Plains led the scoring at the end by the slim margin of six points or three field goals.

Practically the same lineup that represented Scotch Plains on the court last year did duty Saturday night and some good team work and excellent shooting was evidenced in the opening contest.

PARISH HOUSE SECOND TEAM TRIMMED THE W. F. A. QUINTET

A team of Parish House players defeated the W. F. A. basketball quintet on the Scotch Plains court Saturday night in the preliminary game by a score of 30 to 16. The home basket cagers had little trouble in overwhelming their visiting rivals and romped away with the game in easy fashion.

Throughout the entire contest Scotch Plains led the scoring and at no time did the visiting quintet appear really dangerous.

DARTMOUTH'S STAR PAIR.

Llewellyn and Ghee at Quarter Showed All American Form.

Much of the success of the Dartmouth football team this year should be credited to its star quarterbacks, Llewellyn and Ghee. The former has starred for several seasons on the gridiron and practically defeated Princeton single handed by a brainy play at a crucial moment in the game.

LLEWELLYN.

Ghee's best play is the forward pass, and, with Captain Hogsett on the receiving end, the Big Green team used this means of offense for substantial gains.

Coach Cavanaugh says that he considers Llewellyn to be the quickest thinking quarterback on the gridiron and boosts him for an All American berth.

WANTS SPRING SERIES.

Huggins After Mack For Pre-season Games.

As the result of a report that the Athletics intend to do their spring training at or in some town near St. Augustine, Fla., Manager Huggins of the Cardinals is likely to accept an invitation from that city for his men to train there.

He says his decision depends on the answer he receives from a letter written to Connie Mack asking the latter to arrange a series of ante-season games between the Athletics and Cardinals in the south. If Mack says no the Cardinals will use Columbus, Ga., where they went last year.

MANY FINE BIRDS ON DISPLAY HERE

"Great Quality Poultry Show" Opened in the City Market Last Night.

EVERY CLASS FILLED

Barnyard Fowls Are on Display in an Enclosure in This City and the Exhibition is Attracting Much Attention.

With a galaxy of poultry numbering over 1,200 rare birds, the second annual show held under the auspices of the New Jersey Association of Poultry Improvement was opened in the city market last night and a steady stream of chicken financiers viewed the exhibits constantly since the doors were opened to the public. Birds of every type and representing every poultry farm of importance in the State and many from other parts of the country were placed on display and this exhibit will undoubtedly set a precedent for shows of this nature in New Jersey.

Among the attractions causing considerable favorable comment are the entries from the Endicott Farms in Randolphville and small but representative exhibits shown by numerous local poultry raisers. There are hundreds of chickens, a number of turkeys, ducks, and bantams and several pens of pigeons. The City Market affords an excellent place in which to hold the show. The pens are arranged in rows and tiers so that it is an easy matter to identify any pen of birds and the name of the owner as well as the breed of the exhibit. Numerous specimens of birds of unusual weight and rare in this section are here this week and a number of the chickens on display are kept for show purposes alone.

For tonight the committee in charge of the show has arranged for a parade headed by the Dutch Arms Band, which will march through the principal streets of the city and afterwards assemble in the interior of the market and render music during the evening.

Although the show is yet in its early stages it is conceded a far greater success than the remarkable exhibit held in Sebring's auditorium last year and poultrymen from all parts of the country were present to look after their birds this morning and expressed much favorable comment on the manner in which the exhibit was being conducted by the New Jersey Association's committee. The judges are: M. L. Chapman, of Brown's Mills, N. J., and F. G. Bean of Collegeville, Pa.

The show committee comprises George W. Endicott, chairman; W. J. Trembath, Frank Legge, George Apgar, William Iseman, A. R. Morehouse and L. W. Rosebault. The executive committee is made up of W. H. Tavernor, chairman; Rufus Delafield, D. S. Daudt and R. H. Armstrong.

The judges started work at 9 o'clock this morning and have been busy ever since in selecting the prize winners. All of the classes are well filled with exceptionally fine birds and it was stated by a poultry authority at the show this afternoon that the local exhibit is probably second only to the Madison Square Garden display. Although the prize winners have been tagged in a number of cases it is impossible to establish the identity of the birds until the committee compiles its entry list and numbers of each entrant. This work will be concluded tomorrow morning and full account of the winning specimens and their owners will be available tomorrow.

SKY PILOT TO TALK.

Rev. Frank Higgins, widely known as "The Sky Pilot of the Lumber Jacks," will address the meeting of the Men's Club, of Hope Chapel, to be held tonight at 8 o'clock at that church. No admission fee will be asked of those who wish to attend and no collection will be taken. Rev. Mr. Higgins has addressed several Plainfield audiences recently and his talks have always proved interesting and instructive, as well as being highly entertaining.

"HOW TO DIVIDE THE INCOME."

Dr. Benjamin R. Andrews, of Columbia University, will speak at the Y. W. C. A., tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock on the subject of "How to Divide the Income." The meeting will be held under the auspices of the housekeeping department of the association and all persons interested are invited. The admission fee will be nominal. Dr. Andrews is an authority and his talk will be very practical.

ILLUSTRATED TALKS AS HEARD BY WOMEN

Monday Afternoon Club Enjoys a Rather Novel Entertainment.

The art department of the Monday Afternoon Club met at the Hartridge Auditorium, yesterday afternoon, and enjoyed an attractive program, which included two papers, illustrated by songs, violin and piano. Mrs. Duncan W. Taylor, chairman of the department, was in charge of the meeting.

The first paper on the "Reforms of Gluck," was read by Mrs. William C. Hubbard, and was illustrated by Miss Grace Carroll, who sang, with Miss Mabel Maxson at the piano. The second paper by Mrs. Cornelius B. Tyler presented, "Opera Buffa in Italy," and "Opera Comique in France," and the illustrations were given on the violins by Miss Maude VanBoskerck and Mrs. J. R. Evans. There were about thirty members of the department present.

The literature department met yesterday afternoon at the Plainfield Public Library, when interesting papers on characters in Greek tragedy were presented as follows: "Prometheus," Mrs. J. Sperry Hanson; "Aedipus," Mrs. Edward G. Read; "Alcestis," Mrs. Edmund J. Lee. An informal discussion followed the reading of the papers. Mrs. Lee, as chairman of the committee, presided.

2ND REGIMENT'S FEUD BECOMES SERIOUS

Efficient Major Wm. B. Martin May Resign as a Result.

Some of the internal affairs of the Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., which had their inception in Co. F stationed at Roselle and of which Harry Kitchell, formerly of this city, was the captain, will probably be aired this week, when it is expected that either Major W. B. Martin or Col. Horace M. Redding may leave the National Guard. Major Martin, it is understood, is the aggrieved party.

Captain Kitchell and Lieut. G. V. Weir, of Co. F, have been at odds, and Major Martin thought it advisable that both resign, but Col. Redding is said to have advised the officers they would not have to resign, this without consulting Major Martin, who is in command of the battalion. This is not the first time the Col. Redding has had trouble since he became a colonel. It is said that two years ago the question of asking him to resign was considered because he had not built up the regiment.

MISS HIGGINS' PARTY IN HER GUESTS' HONOR

Miss Alice Higgins, of West Fourth street, gave a party at her home Saturday evening, in honor of Miss Carlotta and Margherita Frazzo, of Paterson. The evening was spent in dancing, playing games and enjoying a fine program of vocal and instrumental music. The dining room was decorated in pink and the halls and living room in green foliage and yellow chrysanthemums. Supper was served at a late hour. There were guests from Paterson, Orange, New York, Somerville, New Brunswick, Bound Brook and Philadelphia.

The Misses Frazza have won a number of swimming contests and prizes for high and fancy diving. Last summer at Atlantic Highlands they were engaged to do some fancy swimming and diving "stunts" for a motion picture concern.

Goodrich; vice-president, Donald Updike; secretary, Harold Tomlinson; treasurer, Miss Helen Newell; chairman social committee, Miss Elizabeth Martin; chairman prayer-meeting committee, Miss Florence Neilson; chairman music committee, Miss Lilian Whitall; chairman good literature committee, Miss Marguerite Rice.

THEY ENJOYED CARDS.

Bailey had charge of the event. She was assisted by Mrs. Thomas Meaney, Mrs. Patrick McDonough, Mrs. Hillaire Blatz, the Misses Katherine Conshay, Elizabeth Day, Mary Riley, Irene Duschene and Anna Willis.

HEPTASOPHS HOLD ONE GREAT BANQUET

Fraternal Organization Has a Big Time at Somerville—Speakers Prominent.

Somerville, Nov. 18—Somerville Conclave, No. 476, Improved Order of Heptasophs, gave a banquet last night in the new Forester Hall in honor of Emil Schneider, supreme provost, of Newark; L. A. Cowles, supreme warder, of Paterson, and J. V. E. Vanderhoef, of the Supreme executive committee, of Plainfield. Seated at the guests' table on either side of Judge Nelson Y. Dungan, of Somerville, who was toastmaster, were the three persons mentioned above and also M. G. Cohen, of Pittsburg, supreme archon; Frank E. Pleitner, supreme secretary; Charles H. Ramsay, supreme treasurer; Dr. Charles H. Bubert, supreme medical examiner; Edward Sheffield, of Brooklyn, supreme organizer; Olin Bryan, of New York, supreme counsel; H. H. Heath, of Monmouth county, deputy supreme archon; Edward Dancer, of Trenton, deputy supreme archon; Jacob Rosen, of New York; James C. Miller, of committees on laws and appeals, and Sheriff Charles P. Sebring, of North Plainfield. Interesting short addresses were delivered by a number of the guests following the serving of an elaborate menu.

During the serving of the dinner excellent music was rendered by Jungmann's orchestra. The dinner was served principally in honor of Mr. Vanderhoef, who formerly resided in Somerville, and who is principally responsible for the order being so strong in that place. It was through him that Judge Dungan was prevailed upon to join the order, and the addresses of the evening were in a happy and congratulatory tone over the success achieved by the officers of the Somerville Conclave in building up such a strong organization in a town blessed with so many orders as Somerville. The dinner was served in excellent manner, the speeches were short and to the point, and altogether it was a brilliant social success.

SOME ITEMS CULLED FROM POLICE BLOTTER

Using stones as their weapons, George Jackson, of Elk street, and Clinton Johnson, of East Fourth street, both colored, figured in a fight last night in Watchung avenue. Hostilities were stopped when a missile penetrated the large plate glass window of S. Hersh's tailor shop. The men were arrested and this morning when arraigned before City Judge DeMeza were ordered to pay for the broken glass. The damage is estimated at $15.

Samuel Fields, for being intoxicated and disorderly, was fined $5, which he paid. Frank Ludlow, of St. Mary's avenue, will be arraigned before Judge DeMeza, Friday morning, on a charge of assault and battery preferred against him by George Beneski, a neighbor.

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICA FAIR IS A BIG SUCCESS

The seventh annual fair of Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Daughters of America, had an auspicious opening last night in Sebring's Auditorium where several hundred people purchased useful and fany articles and and enjoyed the program of terpischore that had been arranged by the committee. The decorations were elaborate and consisted mainly of American flags and red, white and blue bunting. Beginning tomorrow night the event, which will continue until Saturday night, inclusive, will be made unusually attractive by the presence of an augumented orchestra and several vocalists, who will render a pleasing musical program each night.

The general committee in charge of the affair is composed of George Ballen, F. W. Walsh, treasurer, and Harry Wolte, secretary. The floor committee comprised Arthur Joy, Mrs. George Allen, Miss Idabelle Conover, Mr. and Mrs. George Mobus and W. F. Walsh. Mrs. Mary Walsh and Mrs. Elizabeth Drake were in charge of the fancy counter and John Goodman sold refreshments.

HOSPITAL STAFF MUCH ENLARGED

Change Makes Sphere of Institution's Usefulness Considerably Greater.

PROMOTIONS ARE MADE

Better Facilities for Serving the Public in This Section Prompts Increase in the Corps of Physicians.

The greatly enlarged facilities for serving the public which will be made possible by the completion of the Edgerton Memorial Maternity Pavilion and the new three story private ward pavilion at Muhlenberg Hospital, soon to be thrown open to the public for inspection, have made it necessary to considerably enlarge the medical staff. In order to provide for the increase, the board of governors has appointed a new auxiliary staff, including not only Plainfield physicians but several who practice in Westfield, Metuchen, Cranford, Fanwood and Dunellen. A number of changes, promotions and additions were made to the regular staff of senior and junior attending physicians and surgeons in the present departments of the hospital work.

The changes and additions to the medical staff of the hospital follows:

Dr. J. H. Carman is transferred from the department of general medicine to the department of dermatology and radiology as senior attending physician and surgeon.

Dundon, now a clinical assistant, is appointed junior attending physician in the department of general medicine and Dr. Edward Krans, a newly elected member of the staff, is also appointed as junior attending physician in the general medical department; both Dr. Dundon and Dr. Krans are appointed also to serve as juniors in the department of pediatrics.

Dr. P. B. Cregar and Dr. H. D. Corbusier were appointed as junior attending physicians and surgeons in the department of dermatology and radiology in the out-patient department; Dr. D. H. Pratt, Dr. Sidney Titsworth, Dr. Thomas Blair and Dr. Frank Cornwell were appointed as clinical assistants.

In order to more efficiently serve the public and take proper care of the increased business which will come to Muhlenberg Hospital because of the greater facilities afforded by its new buildings, a new auxiliary staff has been appointed, consisting of the following well known practitioners:

Dr. Edmund Rushmore, Dr. Clara Krans, Dr. Bernard Levinson, Dr. Grace Powell, Dr. R. Yood, all of Plainfield.

"Faith, hope and charity" are the greatest things in the world, so Henry Drummond said quoting highest authority. But, then next to these is public confidence. SALESLADIES WILL BE SOCIETY WOMEN

There Will Be a Novel Sight at Schwed Bros.' Store This Week.

Everything is in readiness for the exhibition and sale of linens for use in the new private room pavilion at Muhlenberg Hospital. This sale will open tomorrow morning at Schwed Bros.' store, and will continue for three days. Mrs. J. P. Stevens and her enthusiastic committee of women having the linen shower in charge have already received a number of orders, and the affair is an assured success. Contributions are desired from as many as possible, and as there are only 1,200 pieces on sale it is suggested that as many as possible attend the sale on the opening day. The names of all purchasers will be listed, in order that they may be recorded later with those of other donors who contribute to the various requirements of the hospital.

The women will have entire charge of the sale, and the following committees will be in attendance on the morning and afternoon specified. Wednesday morning Mrs. J. P. Stevens, Mrs. A. A. Tilney, Mrs. M. Mellor and Mrs. N. C. Barnhart will preside. In the afternoon Mrs. Augustus Kleinecke and Mrs. Stuart Patterson will be in charge. The committee for Thursday morning includes Mrs. A. V. Heeley, Mrs. E. H. Ladd and Mrs. Jabez Gilbert. Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard, Mrs. Charles Titsworth, Mrs. Allen Laing and Mrs. Hutchinson will supervise the sale in the afternoon. On Friday, Mrs. H. C. Irons, Mrs. Jabez Gilbert and Mrs. F. C. Ard will direct affairs in the morning and Mrs. Isaac Schwed, Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney and Mrs. Marion Ackerman will have charge Friday afternoon. Whether your purchase is large or small you may take it with you when you attend the public inspection of the new private room pavilion on the afternoons of Saturday and Sunday, November 29 and 30, or ask that it be delivered for you with your card attached.

JEFFERSON DEMOCRATS WILL ENJOY A FEAST

Meeting at its headquarters last night, the Jefferson Democratic Club made tentative arrangements for a banquet and entertainment to be held Thanksgiving eve. The affair promises to be an auspicious one and accommodations will be provided for the sixty members and many of their friends.

Although the present membership has now passed the half-century mark, the membership committee reported last night that by January 1, 1914, the roster will number seventy-five. When this is accomplished larger quarters will be secured. The house committee is contemplating the leasing of a dwelling which will be converted into an up-to-date clubhouse, complete with pool tables and other attractions for the members.

A large number of invitations were issued for the affair and throughout the afternoon the house was thronged with society folk, including many of the younger set who joined in congratulations to Miss Ginna.

The house was lavishly decorated with flowers, there being a profusion of roses, lilies of the valley, American Beauty roses, Bavaria and chrysanthemums. The debutante received a large number of floral gifts.

AN AUCTION BRIDGE AT THE PARK CLUB

Spirited Play Among the Ninety Guests in a Progressive Game.

Under the auspices of the entertainment committee of the Park Club, of which Mrs. Wilbur H. Rogers is the chairman, an "auction bridge" party was given at the club last night. There were about ninety guests and the play was spirited throughout. The committee introduced a new system of progression, which assisted materially in promoting sociability and affording an opportunity for all to get better acquainted. Those playing north and south retained their seats while those playing east and west progressed.

The prizes for the women were rhinestone slipper buckles and they were awarded to Mrs. John T. George, Mrs. Peter B. Cregar, Mrs. Stephen H. Voorhees, Miss Kate Barlow and Mrs. William Bentley. The men received seal bill folders and they were presented to A. M. Morrell, Dr. Peter B. Cregar, Stephen H. Voorhees, William Strong and Frank H. Smith. During the evening refreshments were served and after the play there was a social hour. This is one of many entertainments arranged for the winted season.

Dunshee, formerly of Plainfield, who was for several years pastor of a mission chapel at Elizabeth, is now pastor of the Cedar Avenue Presbyterian church at Montclair, and he preached his first sermon there on Sunday. MARTIN SEEKING HEAVY DAMAGES

Plainfielder Blames New York Drug Concern for His Physical Disability.

VICTIM OF A MISTAKE?

Former Wealthy Automobile Man Alleges Firm Made Grave Error in Prescription and He is Permanently Injured.

Claiming that he has suffered excruciating pains and has been at the point of death to say nothing of the wreck of his financial fortune as a result of the mistake made in compounding a prescription, F. L. C. Martin seeks to recover damages from Van Horn & Sawtell, a drug concern at No. 307 Madison avenue, New York. The well-known automobile man is a physical wreck and he alleges that his physical condition is due to the grave error on the part of the pharmacists.

According to report, Mr. Martin, about a year ago, experienced sharp pains in his kidneys. The theory was that perhaps it was stones in his kidneys. A physician, especially expert in such matters, was employed to make an examination and for that purpose ordered from the New York drug concern a local anaesthetic composed of a certain drug mixed with distilled water. This, as received, so the story goes, was injected into the bladder to deaden the pain before an electric device with a mirror was placed in that organ in order to allow the physician to see it.

Martin claims that instead of having used water in the mixture pure alcohol was used, permanently injuring the lining of the bladder. The physician, it is reported, did not test the compound before using it, but did so after the sharp cries of pain from his patient. Since then at times, Martin has been in a critical condition though at present he is able to talk about his affairs, but is unable, however, to engage in his usual business.

Rumor has it that Martin will sue the drug firm for $50,000 damages and may also bring an action against the doctor. Both of the latter, it is said, carry liability insurance.

Reed & Hetfield represent Martin and Nadel & Jones, of New York, are counsel for Van Horn & Sawtell. It is alleged that the drug concern is anxious to settle the claim, but Senator Reed could not be found by the Daily Press' reporter this afternoon and Mr. Hetfield declined to discuss the matter saying that it was his professional duty in all cases not to be interviewed before any suit was brought.

During Mr. Martin's illness his business suffered to such an extent that the F. L. C. Martin Company, dealers in automobiles, was forced into bankruptcy and the owner lost a fortune gained after thirty years' effort.

FANWOOD MAN ENDED HIS OWN LIFE TODAY

John Burns, aged about fifty years, ended his life this morning by hanging himself in a stable on a Fanwood estate. He was highly a respected resident and it is supposed that dementia caused him to do away with himself.

When John Hammond, the gardener on the estate, opened the stable doors he spied the lifeless body of Burns, the caretaker of the place, dangling from a rope suspended from a harness hook and he immediately notified Dr. F. W. Westcott, the county physician. A burial permit was granted by the latter.

Burns came from Yonkers, N. Y., where his parents live. He was an industrious man and his work was appreciated by his employers.

MO-JO White Chewing Gum

Talk No. 1

THIS is the first of a series of MO-JO Chewing Gum talks.

They deal with dirt, dirt that people actually put in their mouths and swallow. Perhaps this will startle you, but we assure you we shall present nothing but facts.

Dirt chewing and gum chewing have gone together because no one ever took the trouble to make a clean, white, pure Chewing Gum.

The Chewing Gum with which you are familiar is muddy in color and filled with black specks because it is not clean.

The dirt in Chewing Gum originates in the crude gum from which it is made. This crude gum is the sap of a tropical tree and the dirt collects in it while it is being gathered in the forests.

We had an idea that the public would appreciate a clean Chewing Gum. The result of this idea is MO-JO Chewing Gum, which to-day is the only CLEAN, pure, white Chewing Gum made, delicious in its flavor, dainty in its packing, delightful in its texture—a confection through and through.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

DUTCH ARMS BAND LEADER GETS GIFT

Silver Baton for E. D. Young, Pastor Making Presentation Speech.

The Dutch Arms, men's association, of Trinity Reformed church, held a business and social session in the Sunday-school room of the church, last night, there being a large attendance of members and friends, including those comprising the Dutch Arms Concert Band. During the business session eight new members were elected.

A pleasant surprise, especially to E. D. Young, leader of the band, was the presentation to him of a silver baton by members of the Dutch Arms. Rev. J. Y. Broek presented the baton with a few well chosen words, to which Mr. Young made a happy response.

One of the features of the evening was the entertainment provided by Harry Webber, the Dutch comedian. He appeared in a characteristic Dutch make-up and in addition to an amusing monologue, he entertained with selections on various musical instruments.

Refreshments were served during a social hour. The band is now making arrangements for its first public concert to be given on November 28. Announcement of the place will be made within a short time.

CONSERVATIONISTS MEET IN WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—In view of the generally recognized fact that the conservation problem has reached a critical stage in its development the Fifth National Conservation Congress, which convened here today for a session extending over three days, promises to be the most important ever held in this country. Every State in the Union is represented by delegates appointed by the respective governors and in addition to their number there are many other delegates representing State and National organizations in some way interested in the subject of the conservation of the national resources.

The address of Charles L. Pack, of Indiana, president of the Congress, at the opening session today clearly pointed out that the conservation movement is facing at present its greatest danger in the opposition to the Federal control of the National resources, which is active in many States. Certain corporations and private interests have started a movement to remove conservation from the control of the Federal Government and to transfer it to the State governments and it seems that, for purely selfish reasons, many members of State Legislatures strongly favor the plan and are determined to make a strong fight, basing their opposition upon their interpretation of the principle of States' rights. The real motive, however, on the part of the timber and water-power interests and of the legislators working hand in hand with them has nothing to do with the sovereign rights of the States. The big timber and water-power interests, realizing the difficulty of obtaining concessions from the Federal Government, want the forest and water conservation removed from the control of the National Government, believing that it will be easier for them to obtain what they want from the legislative bodies of the various States. The Legislatures favor the plan which would open the door to extensive grafting opportunities.

President Wilson, who delivered an address on the occasion of the opening of the congress, strongly favors national control of the natural resources of the country and it is evident that he will lead his full support to the Conservation Congress in its fight against the opposing elements. One of the problems to be considered by the congress is the question of more strongly and better organize the national conservation movement throughout the country so as to establish perfect harmony in the work.

The congress this year will revert to the consideration principally of forestry and water power subjects. At the first meeting of the conservation congress at Seattle, in 1909, these subjects were taken up. When the second congress met at Sa. Paul the following year, the public land question was the principal issue. The Kansas City meeting in 1911, was devoted to the subject of soil fertility, and human life and vital resources were the issues of the convention at Indianapolis last year. At the session begun today the congress will revert to the consideration of forestry and water power questions.

In connection with the congress an exhibition is held under the auspices of the National Conservation Association and of the Department of Agriculture, which shows by photographs, maps, models and actual objects and appliances the various methods used in guarding the great national forest reserves, preventing forest fires, removing dead timber, protecting wild game, etc. Special exhibits will show scenes on the great grazing reservations in the West, which are growing of greater importance every year.

The question of increasing the area of the grazing lands under the control of the National government will come up for consideration during this congress and among those who will deliver addresses upon that subject and will take part in the debates will be Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior; David F. Houston, secretary of agriculture; Lindley M. Garrison, secretary of war; Senators Burton, Newlands and Hoke Smith and probably other government officials. The question of rural credits will also form the subject of discussion at one of the sessions and will be discussed by speakers of national reputation and experience in financial matters. Another subject which will be brought to the attention of the congress will be the enormity of the losses by fire not only in the country where fire protection is always more or less primitive, but also in large and small cities. The taking up of this subject has been seriously urged by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

AS TO CREDITS.

The subject of credit and general part referring to the collection of long standing accounts was discussed last night by Harold Kellner, of Newark, before the members of the Plainfield Credit Men's Association. The speaker described thoroughly the system of the Newark Credit Reporting Company, whom he represents and said it would be impossible for a family to move from one municipality to another and get credit unless they had left a good record among the merchants in the city they moved from. "Under our plan," he said, "all our clients learn immediately the standing in every town in which a new resident lived, before making his or her home in another town."

DO IT FOR PLAINFIELD.

In yesterday's issue was a communication from Charles H. Hand, the second heaviest taxpayer in the city. Mr. Hand's tale of woe concerned the closing of the Netherwood Hotel. Evidently, he appreciated that whatever benefits Plainfield benefits him and so whatever hurts Plainfield hurts him.

Mr. Hand voiced the opinion of many, many citizens who are interested in the welfare and upbuilding of our fine town. These citizens agree that the Netherwood Hotel has been of great help in adding to our population many fine people. In times gone by, guests temporarily located at the resort have admired Plainfield for its attractions and advantages. They liked the municipality and they liked its people. So much did they admire the place that they decided to make it their permanent abode—if you are a "Doubting Thomas"—we can supply the names.

We have faith in the Netherwood Hotel as an investment from a financial standpoint and we hold that our belief is shared by many affluent Plainfielders.

The point that we are driving at is just this—why don't some men of means obtain control of the resort and engage a competant hotel man to run it? Wealthy ones seek interest on their money. They can get it and handsomely too by engaging in this proposition. And at the same time, let them be mindful that they are "Doing It For Plainfield."

If you wish to spend a profitable evening go to the Board of Trade meeting tonight and hear Lawson Purdy, secretary of the New York Tax Reform Association. Mr. Purdy is a recognized authority on matters of taxation and you are bound to learn something by listening to his remarks. No. 109 Park avenue is the place and 8 o'clock is the time.

The Orange Daily Chronicle on Saturday did a good public service. It issued a superbly printed and choicely selected pictorial supplement of the Oranges. As an advertisement of the attractions of the Oranges, it would be hard to surpass.

One thing for which the new Federal administration i sto be congratulated on is that there are not the leaks in the State, War and Navy departments that have been so apparent in other administrations.

When they are honest about it and run a fashion show the crowd doesn't flock there, but when they run it under the guise of a horse show Madison Square Garden is packed. Funny world, isn't it?

By her actions a former White House girl gained the nickname of "Princess Alice," but it is to be observed that the press has nothing but the kindest words for Miss Jessie Wilson.

It has always been said that Bryan talks too much, but it is quite the contrary these days. So far as official business is concerned he's as dumb as the Sphinx.

We reprint more of "them kind words" today. As George M. Cohan says, we thank you and all our relations thank you.

The New Jersey suffragists saw President Wilson all right and now they know just as much as they did before.

Pretty soon that commodity will be so precious that the storekeeper will lock his eggs up in the safe at night.

It's rather unkind for Huerta to crowd Roosevelt off the first page.

"Dear Sirs: The 'Do It For Plainfield' edition of the Plainfield Daily Press last Friday was a really notable achievement of Proprietors Fort and Morrow. The close fraternal relations I have had with both of you, greatly multiplied the pleasure I took in that splendid manifestations of your enterprise and progress.

"That you emerged from the task with so creditable a proof of your effort, is ample justification for the pride you must feel in it. Surely your accomplishment has made it plain that the Plainfield Daily Press must ever be counted upon as a prop for Plainfield of sturdiest fibre.

"Not that what follows is any news to you, but as a matter of record, let me set forth that your publication of the 14th instant, regarded typographically and pictorially and considered as to its write-ups and general arrangement and scope, has won a very high place in the ranks of newspaper endeavor.

"With my warmest congratulations accept best wishes for the future.

"Very truly yours,
"A. L. DUNPHY."

BOOMING PLAINFIELD.

In a historical and trade supplement of thirty-two pages, printed on heavy book paper, the Plainfield Daily Press sets forth the advantages and attractions of "the Queen City of New Jersey" for residential and business purposes. The work is well done, and the fact that merchants, manufacturers and men in every line of endeavor have taken advantage of the opportunity to make their announcement, gives evidence that the Daily Press has the confidence and support of the people whom it serves. The supplement is copiously illustrated with pictures of men, public and private institutions, and scenes in Plainfield.

An interesting feature is the story of the Press, which is the successor of the weekly Constitutionalist, established nearly a half century ago. It was in 1887 that the Daily Press was "started, at first in the nature of an experiment;" but the experimental stage was soon passed, and the paper has become an influential factor, not only in the affairs of Plainfield, but throughout Central New Jersey.

About two years ago it passed into the control of a stock company, of which former Governor Fort is the president; but publishing and editing newspapers is no part of the work of judges, political leaders and lawyers. In the case of the Press those duties are attended to by Leslie R. Fort, former secretary to the Governor, and Ralph L. Morrow, both of whom drifted into the newspaper business because they could not help it, and both of whom have made good.

The historical and industrial edition would reflect credit upon a metropolitan journal. It furnishes substantial evidence of the enterprise and ability of the young editors and publishers, and is a surprise to the old-timers who can easily recall the birth of the daily, and the days when Plainfield was known as a "weekly town."—Trenton Evening Times.

BOOSTING PLAINFIELD.

Friday's edition of the Plainfield Press contains an historical and trade supplement of more than thirty pages. The supplement is given up to boosting Plainfield. In well written stories the many advantages of the city are pointed out and emphasied. Nowhere is there a knock on anything that belongs or pertains to Plainfield. And the special edition of the Plainfield Press of last Friday is consistent with the policy of that newspaper every day in the week. Its editorial and news columns are devoted to the progress and welfare of its city. It always has time to "boost Plainfield."

"Do it for Plainfield" has been the daily slogan of the Plainfield Press for a long time. If newspapers are a factor in the education of public opinion, then the Plainfield Press has certainly accomplished and is performing a great work. The Times congratulates its progressive neighbor and wishes for it a career of continued success and prosperity.—Elizabeth Evening Times.

A GREAT PAPER.

The "Do It For Plainfield" edition of the Plainfield Daily Press, bearing date of yesterday, is a really great paper. We can scarcely commend it too strongly, or the enterprise which made it possible.

There are forty-eight pages and in addition to the regular news section of sixteen pages there is a historical and trade supplement of thirty-two pages, on calendered paper, profusely illustrated and filled with interesting matter, admirably prepared, concerning Plainfield, its government, institutions and many big enterprises. The issue is of great interest to all citizens of Plainfield and to all who ever knew the place, and it is also significant of the development and possibilities of this, one of New Jersey's fairest and best municipalities. As such the "Do It For Plainfield" issue must commend itself and carry an interest to every person into whose hands it may come.

The Daily Press is published by the Plainfield Press Publishing Co., with our friend, Leslie R. Fort, son of former Governor Fort, as one of its two editors and managers.

We extend hearty congratulations to him and to all concerned in the preparation of this splendid edition.—Bridgeton Evening News.

FOR THE HOME CITY.

One cannot read the "Do It For Plainfield" edition of the Plainfield Daily Press without realizing more strongly than ever the attractiveness of that beautiful city both for residential and industrial purposes. The edition is not only a credit to the city, but to the publishers of the Press as well. It is only another example of the enormous value of a newspaper to a community. The local newspaper is so constantly at work in behalf of the home city that few people realize what a force it is in advancing the common good. Plainfield, which already enjoys a large share of this world's prosperity, cannot help but be benefited by this special edition issued by one of its newspapers. It has cost a great deal of money and involved a great deal of time and worry to produce it, but the publishers get their satisfaction from the fact that they are "doing it for Plainfield."—Perth Amboy Evening News.

PLAINFIELD GETS A BOOST.

The "Plainfield Daily Press" gave its fast-multiplying readers a delightful surprise on Friday by publishing an industrial edition telling of the growth of the city, its enterprises and a great many other facts concerning Plainfield in a 48-page newspaper of the highest merit. In the historical and trade supplement there are pictures of the leading citizens who have contributed to the development of the city, its principal buildings, banks, institutions, churches and business houses, with municipal officials and prominent merchants and individual descriptions of their marts.

The city has been well described as a "City of Opportunity," and a perusal of the industrial edition of the "Plainfield Daily Press" fully exemplifies the truth of the saying. Plainfield has especial advantages as a manufacturing and residential centre, it points out, and has a population of 32,000, is within easy access of New York city, and beyond all, has a civic pride to boom the city, which the "Plainfield Daily Press" has emphasized in its very excellent special edition.

Leslie R. Fort, manager, and Ralph L. Morrow, editor, well deserve the felicitations showered on them for their go-ahead methods, and the Paterson Press adds: "It serves them right."—Paterson Press.

PLAINFIELD DID IT.

"Do it for Plainfield" has shouted the Plainfield Press every night for the past three months. Its cry simply meant that the people of the town should get behind it in issuing a great special edition setting forth the history of the city as never attempted before. The people did rally to the support of the Press and it has just issued a supplement which is a credit to the city.

If there was ever any doubt that Plainfield is a progressive town, a place of beautiful homes, enterprising business houses and energetic men that illusion has been dispelled by the Press. By the way, the Press has been making great headway in Union county since Leslie R. Fort and Ralph L. Morrow became its guiding spirits. They are seasoned newspaper men and are giving Plainfield a taste of aggressive journalism.—New Brunswick Times.

FROM THE TRADE BOARD.

Editors, Plainfield Daily Press:

The special edition of the Press was so complete, enterprising and handsome that further comment from me is entirely unnecessary. This sort of intelligent "get at it" work should be encouraged. I congratulate you on your achievement and wish you all success. This is the reason of my writing you.

"Editors, Plainfield Daily Press:

"I want to tell you, Mr. Fort, and you, Mr. Morrow, that the 'Do It for Plainfield' edition of the Daily Press was the biggest advertisement along the right lines that Plainfield has had in many a day. The Daily Press is to be commended and the people of Plainfield to be congratulated on having so fine a booster as your paper. You are doing more than you realize for our city. OUR TWO MAYORS WILL BE SPEAKERS

Stewart and Clark Among Those to Talk at Dunellen Trade Board Banquet.

Mayor Percy H. Stewart, of this city, and Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., of the borough, will be among the speakers at the second annual banquet of the Dunellen Board of Trade, Thursday night at Stryker's garage, which will be transformed into an appropriate dining place. The list of after-dinner talkers for the auspicious occasion includes besides the local executives State Senator Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford; former Mayor Viehman, of New Brunswick, president of the New Jersey Chamber of Commerce; Judge Peter E. Daly, also of New Brunswick, and Mayor Richards, of Dunellen. Dunellen's borough clerk, William P. Deering, will act as toastmaster.

The Dunellen Board of Trade was formed several years ago. Many improvements have been secured for Dunellen through the efforts and influence of the body and the largest patriotic and civic demonstration held in this section of the State in years took place last Fourth of July in Dunellen under its auspices. The roster at present numbers nearly 200 members. The board recently joined the Affiliated Boards of Trade of Middlesex county.

THE FORUM.

AS TO NETHERWOOD HOTEL.

Editors, Plainfield Daily Press:

I want to tell you that the best thing I have read in a long time in your excellent paper was the letter of Charles H. Hand in yesterday's issue. The Hotel Netherwood is the best single asset that Plainfield has to attract desirable people to locate here. In the past, it has been the means of bringing hundreds of fine people to Plainfield for their permanent home. It is a shame that it is closed, but the only way to make it pay is to run it as a real hotel and not as a boarding house as was the case during the last six years. With a real hotel man in charge and with a liquor license privilege it will be a fine investment. I promise not only to sign an application for a license but to get the signatures of many influential residents in the Netherwood section. I believe that almost all the property owners, no matter whether they may be abstainers, will sign such an application for, they know that without a license a hotel of that kind will never pay.

GRACE CHURCH MEN DEPLORE HIS DEATH

Pass Resolutions as to the Loss of the Late John Paul Nolting.

Resolutions of condolence upon the death of John Paul Nolting, who was a member of the executive committee and otherwise actively interested in the club's affairs, were adopted at a meeting of the Men's Club of Grace church in the parish house last night. These resolutions referred to Mr. Nolting's activity in the club since its inception in 1906 and expressed deep appreciation of him as a man, his kindly address to everyone with whom he came in contact and a feeling and sense of the irreparable loss which the club has sustained. A copy of the resolutions will be sent to Mr. Nolting's family.

There was a lively discussion of the welfare of the club and plans for the coming year, and it was announced that a corporate communion would be held at the church Thanksgiving Day morning to be followed by breakfast to be served in the parish house. It is earnestly hoped that all men of the parish will be present.

Malcolm Shackelford, the humorous, entertained the men of the club with some of his best selections, and a male quartet comprising Messrs. Patterson, Sproull, Joseph C. Martin and William Tallamy sang several popular numbers, after which refreshments were served.

The Only Genuine Anatomik Shoes

Fully protected by United States patents are to found in New York City only in the Wanamaker Store, which has the sole privilege of distribution in this city.

ANATOMIK shoes are not an experiment, they have been tried out by us for the past five years. Thousands of people who formerly had foot troubles are now wearing ANATOMIK shoes and are free from any foot discomforts.

Like all good things, ANATOMIK shoes have many imitators. But the genuine shoes may always be recognized by the ANATOMIK trade-mark and date of patent which appears in every pair.

Putting a large heel on another pair of shoes will no more make them ANATOMIK shoes than putting a man's hat on a monkey will change him into a man.

There are four important features based on scientific principles which make up the ANATOMIK shoes. These only the ANATOMIK shoe possesses. They are:—

1. Proper base, with large enough soles to support the weight of the body.
2. Enlarged heels properly placed to receive the weight of the body, and prevent the over-rolling of the foot.
3. Straight lasts—a straight line from centre of heel to centre of toe—preventing the twisting of the foot.
4. Dr. Cole's special adaptation of the inside bottom of the shoes to conform with the arches of the foot.

So much importance do we attach to the ANATOMIK shoes that we have built a special section in our shoe store for them exclusively where they may be tried on and fitted any time of the day by sales-people who have been specially trained under the inventor's instructions in the proper fitting of these shoes.

Dr. COLE, the inventor of the ANATOMIK shoe will be in the Anatomik Shoe Shop from four to five o'clock on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, to advise in the fitting of ANATOMIK shoes.

Those unable to come to the store will receive free upon application a copy of the new fully illustrated ANATOMIK shoe catalogue.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys, Then the Back Hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

THINKS PANAMA CANAL INADEQUATE

PHILIPPE BUNAU-VARILLA

Mr. Philippe Bunau-Varilla, the famous French engineer, who was associated with De Lesseps on the original project and who has been called the "Father of the Panama Canal," recently said that the canal is unable to admit the large vessel of to-morrow and that the water supply is not large enough to serve increased traffic.

FATHER GREAT PIPE.

Eccentric Will of the Famous Dutch Smoker, Von Klaes.

In "Holland of the Dutch" Demetrius Boulger tells the story of the famous Van Klaes of Rotterdam, who was known as "Father Great Pipe."

Van Klaes smoked about half a pound of tobacco a day and to save himself trouble used an enormous pipe, hence his nickname. He built a mansion in Rotterdam, with a fortune amassed in the Indies, and turned it into a museum for pipes and antique instruments used by primitive man for burning hemp or weeds long before the discovery of tobacco. No man who visited his curios went away without a gift of choice cigars. He lived to be ninety-eight and made, while smoking, an eccentric will, which began by inviting all smokers in the country to his funeral.

Each person who attended was to receive ten pounds of tobacco and two pipes bearing the name of the donor, his arms and the date of his death, but he imposed the condition that they should smoke without interruption during the funeral ceremony. Finally his coffin was to be lined with the wood of his old cigar boxes, and beside him were to be placed his favorite pipe, a supply of tobacco and a box of matches, for, as the will sententiously sets forth, no one knows what may happen.

WHISTLER'S ODD WAYS.

A Portrait That Was Slashed as Soon as It Was Painted.

Lord Redesdale once gave a description of Whistler's methods to a meeting in London in support of a memorial to the great artist. The eccentric master was painting, he said, a portrait of a lady.

Whistler took up his position at one end of the room with his sitter and the canvas at the other end. For a long time he stood looking at his model, holding in his hand a huge brush full of color, such a brush as a man would use to whitewash a house. Then he rushed forward and smashed the brush full of color into the canvas. Then he ran back, and forty or fifty times he repeated this. At the end of that time there stood out on the canvas a space which exactly indicated the figure, the form and the expression of the sitter.

There was a pathetic story attached to the picture. The bailiffs were in the house when the picture was finished. That was quite a common occurrence, and Whistler only laughed, but he went around his studio with a knife and deliberately destroyed all his canvases, including this picture, which was to have been his (Lord Redesdale's).—Dundee Advertiser.

GREAT BARGAIN IN PLAINFIELD

For Sale---Gentleman's Handsome Home

One of the best residential homes in Plainfield. House is extra well built and of attractive design. Lawns on four sides, flowers, shrubs, hedges and shade trees, fifty foot front lawn. A former owner spent around five thousand dollars in substantial attractive interior alterations a few years ago, with the results that this house has all that the most fastidious owner would require.

The property fronts on two streets, number 937-939, West Seventh Street, one of the best streets in New Jersey. The foundation for the permanency of this neighborhood as being one of the best in Plainfield, was long ago established and has been maintained. The surroundings are very attractive. Lot is 60x164 connected with and a part of the property is an L lot to Hobert Avenue, 50x147 ft., with handsome barn and garage and macadamized driveway.

We operate in real estate and acquired this property in a trade which allows us to offer it to you at a bargain price much under its true value. You could not build this house and buy the grounds and put the lawns as they are at anywhere near the price that we can sell this property at. If you intend to buy a house between now and spring and want the best for the least money get in touch with us first.

The title has been guaranteed by the Fidelity Trust Co., of Newark, N. J. House is leased until May 1st, 1914, at $1,200 per annum. This will net on the purchase money price, after paying taxes, insurance, and interest on mortgage 12 per cent. net.

Be satisfied and let us prove this to you. Why keep your money out at 4 per cent. if this solid property will return you 12 per cent.? If desired terms can be made where only two thousand dollars cash would be required and the balance of purchase price may remain on mortgage.

If you wish to make yourself a Christmas present of a fine home now is your opportunity. Agents protected.

ECCENTRICITY OF GENIUS.

In the Days That Are Gone It May Have Been Due to Eye Strain.

It seems that at last genius is discovered not to be allied to insanity, but that rather all its eccentricities are due to eye strain.

Brain specialists, for instance, are asserting that if Carlyle had had properly adjusted glasses and good electric light to work by instead of a skylight over his desk, and that illumined by a London fog much of the time, he would not have been such a grumbler and dyspeptic. In fact, eye strain was the cause of all his eccentricities.

All geniuses, in fact, would have been optimistic, says science now, if they had only had bifocal glasses at the right time. The same unnormal eyesight is given as the cause of many tragic paintings. That famous artist, Turner, would never have painted the slave ship in a storm, but would rather have depicted the peaceful landscapes that so many artists paint when their eyes are properly fitted with glasses.

Wagner, too, if he had worn the correct spectacles and had had that decided tilt to one eye remedied, probably would never have written about Walkyrie and dragons, but would have written pleasant dances and even ragtime instead.

Darwin also was another victim of eye strain. Doubtless he would never have given to the world his theory of evolution which stirred society up if his eyes had been normal.

De Quincey suffered from bad eyes. Surely he would never have taken opium if he had had glasses. But then, on the other hand, the world would have missed his opium dreams. And, after all is considered, scientists conclude society could better dispense with spectacles than with geniuses.—London Tit-Bits.

COOK WITHOUT FIRE.

New Zealand Maoris Prepare Their Food In Nature's Kitchens.

The Maoris of northern New Zealand enjoy cooked food to a far greater extent than other natives, but they never bother with fire. They build their huts on the edge of some "friendly" geyser, where they may cook in nature's kitchen. The methods of this primitive people living in so strange a neighborhood are described by Max Herz in "New Zealand."

On a spot which superstition would associate with death and the devil the huts of about 200 Maoris lie scattered—the remnant of the once warlike tribe of Tuhourangi. It is lucky that these simple folk need no kitchen, for nature has built for them the best of all cooking appliances and saved them endless trouble with the stove, gas company or coal merchant.

A pond of boiling water lies in the middle of the settlement. In this the Maori woman puts her water kettle to boil or hangs the wide meshed flax bag filled with potatoes and waits until they are cooked. True, the potatoes cooked in their skins taste a little of sulphur, but that is the right flavor for a Maori palate—the haut gout for the brown gourmet.

For the cooking of meats the fumaroles, or holes through which steam escapes from the ground, are used. A box with a wooden grating for a bottom is placed on the ground over the hole. In this the Maori woman places the meat, well covered with tin or iron pots. An old sugar bag is then spread over the box, and the crude apparatus is left until the imprisoned steam has completely cooked the joint.

A Famous Lampoon.

It is handed down in tradition that the caustic comment "he never says a foolish thing nor ever does a wise one" was written in Whitehall on the chamber door of King Charles II. The wit who created the lampoon seems never to have felt it quite prudent to establish his authorship, but there is excellent reason to accord it to John Wilmot, earl of Rochester. The text of the inscription is:

Here lies our sovereign lord the king,
Whose word no man relies on.
He never says a foolish thing
Nor ever does a wise one.

—New York Sun.

Bradshaw and the Months.

Although the provision "D. V." has never figured on railway time tables, a close examination of Bradshaw reveals a trace of strong religious feeling. On the cover the months are referred to by their numerals—"1st mo." for January, "2d mo." for February, and so on. Bradshaw as a Quaker objected to taking the names of the months from heathen emperors and deities, and this prejudice has been perpetuated since the first issue of the time table in 1841.—London Answers.

Fatal Mistake.

Some years ago in a mining town a man was found dead in his hotel room hanged to a bedpost by his suspenders. The jury of miners brought in the following verdict at the coroner's inquest: "Deceased came to his death by coming home full and mistaking himself for his pants."—Argonaut.

The Fireside Diplomat.

"I don't want to be nagging at you," Mrs. Marryat began, "but it's the little things that bother me most"—

"Ah!" interrupted her husband sweetly. "I suppose you're going to tell me you haven't a decent pair of shoes."—Philadelphia Press.

Flora of the Balkans.

The Balkans, in some respects the most repulsive region of Europe, is florally one of the grandest. In Bulgaria especially it is possible to wander literally through miles of roses.

HUNTED ON "POSTED" LAND.

Five citizens of South Plainfield were arraigned before Justice P. F. Kaine, of that place, last night, charged with trespassing and hunting on "posted" land. The complaint was made by Deputy Game Warden John Vaughn, and the men were each fined $1. The land upon which the men trespassed belongs to C. W. Freeman. The men claimed that they did not see any warning signs.

LITTLE TALKS BY THE WANT AD MAN

Copyright, 1913, The Int. Syndicate, Baltimore.

No. 33.

"THE POWER OF PUBLICITY HARNESSED FOR USE IN THE HOME."

THAT is a clever writer's definiton of Classified, or Want Ad., advertising.

Pretty good definition, I'm thinking.

That's the idea—"for use in the home." This newspaper goes into the homes of thousands of people each day. People read its Classified columns. They know the news value, to say nothing of the business possibilities, of Want Ad. advertising.

There isn't a thing under Old Sol that can't be advantageously and profitably advertised in the Classified clumns.

Turn to those clumns. Suppose you do it right now. Whether you want a Position, want Help, want to buy, swap or sell—you'll find a message from somebody, somewhere in those columns, that will be vitally interesting to you.

If you've a Want, and if you would advertise that Want, in a sure, quick, inexpensive way, try a little ad. in the Classified columns.

Take my word for it—you'll not regret the result.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

The Housewife's Daily Economy Calendar

FRANCES MARSHALL

Egg Economy.

There are two kinds of economy: One is the sort that foregoes the expensive thing and the other is the sort that makes the most of it.

To illustrate with eggs: One sort of economy is to cook eggless dishes, and thereby, of course, somewhat impair the nutritive value of the dishes made. For eggs are highly nutritious, even when they are high priced. The other sort of egg economy is to make the most of every egg opened.

With Cooked Eggs.

Never throw away a left-over egg. Boiled eggs left from breakfast can be put back on the fire and boiled hard and then used in many different ways. They can be chopped and used to garnish spinach and fish and meat. They can be sliced and used on lettuce with French dressing for a nourishing and delicious salad. They can be cut in two and served with a white sauce, or covered with white sauce and sprinkled with buttered crumbs and baked golden brown.

Left-over fried or poached eggs are not so easily converted into tempting dishes. But they can be cooked hard over hot water and then chopped and mixed with chopped meat for croquettes, hash and foremeat. Scrambled eggs can also be utilized in this way, or they can be mixed with hashed potatoes and browned in a little cream and butter.

With Whites and Yolks.

When you make mayonnaise dressing or anything else requiring only egg yolks, plan also to make something requiring only whites. Likewise, when you make angel cake, plan to make something requiring whites.

A chocolate bread pudding made with a whole egg can have a meringue spread on the top to use up egg whites. They can be beaten and flavored with fruit juice and pulp and served as a whip in long-stemmed glasses. They can be flavored with chopped prunes or dates and a little sugar and baked in the oven for a pudding. They can be made into an angel cake or a white cake.

If you need egg whites, and have yolks left over use them in mayonnaise, in custard, in gold cake or in sauce for pudding.

Some Cookery Suggestions

EGGS FOR THE CHILDRREN.

CARE should be exercised in the selection of eggs for the children to eat. They must be fresh.

One egg a day may be served for breakfast. The egg should be boiled or poached or baked, never fried. Fried eggs are too indigestible for children.

Some nice ways of serving eggs for little folks are given here:

Soft Cooked Eggs.—For two eggs use three cupfuls of boiling water. Every additional egg will call for another cupful. Have the water boiling rapidly, slide in the eggs, cover and remove from the flame at once. Four to seven minutes will cook them. Take up in skimmer and dash cold water over. This loosens the skin and prevents further cooking.

Seasoned With Parsley.

Scrambled Eggs.—Break fresh eggs in a bowl. Beat them with a silver fork until the yolks are broken. Put into the frying pan a lump of butter the size of a walnut and place over the fire to melt. As soon as the butter is hot turn in the eggs and stir constantly until they are set. Be careful not to cook them too long or they will be tough. Minced parsley may be added with the seasoning just before they are set.

Steamed In Cups.

Steamed Eggs.—Butter the inside of a small cup or mold. Mix two teaspoonfuls of chopped cooked ham and one teaspoonful of chopped parsley. Put inside the buttered cup and shake it over the dish, pressing it against the side. Break an egg into the middle of the cup, cover with a piece of greased paper, stand it in a saucepan with enough boiling water to come halfway up the cup, put on the lid and steam gently till it feels quite firm when it is pressed. Have a piece of buttered toast, turn the egg on it and serve.

A Tempting Way.

Eggs on Toast.—Boil six eggs for twenty minutes. When cold remove the yolks of two of the eggs and cut the whites and the four other eggs into small pieces. Melt one tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan and mix with it until a smooth paste is formed, one tablespoonful of flour. Add one and one-half cupfuls of milk, salt and pepper to taste and let it all boil. Then stir the chopped eggs into the sauce and pour over slices of thin toast, spread over the top the grated yolks of two eggs and serve.

There Were All Sorts of Good Things.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—The Invisible Fairy and the Tree of Plenty.

"DID you ever hear," said daddy, "the story of the fairy and the Tree of Plenty?"

"No," said Jack and Evelyn. "Do tell us that story."

"Once upon a time," commenced daddy, "there were two little children, a little boy and a little girl just like you. They had an uncle who lived in India, and one day a message came that he was expected home the next week. Of course they knew the uncle must be wonderful, as how could any one living in India help but be wonderful. 'To celebrate my return,' the uncle told them, 'we will have a picnic this afternoon,' and, of course, the children were delighted and could hardly wait until the afternoon came. The uncle was away all the morning and was full of mystery when he returned for luncheon. In the afternoon the two children, with a lot of their little friends, followed the uncle to a place in the woods where the picnic was to be held. To their great surprise and sorrow they could not see a single sign of any party. Their uncle saw their surprised faces and their disappointed manners and said: 'I am not really giving this party. It is to be given by a very kind and good fairy. That is her home over there in that tree, which is called the Tree of Plenty. She is very shy, so you won't be able to see her, because as she hears voices she disappears within the tree, and no one can find her. When I came here this morning I had to talk down into the trunk of the tree, but she promised to have all kinds of sugar plums and goodies ready for you this afternoon, and, as she always keeps her word, I am sure you will find them there between those low branches.' Sure enough, there were all sorts of good things—ice cream, nuts, candy and bonbons.

"The children gathered eagerly around while the goodies from the tree were handed out to them. Then they sat down on a log to eat them. They wished that the fairy would join them at their feast, but they did not see anything of her.

"'Perhaps she's asleep,' one of the children suggested. 'You know that the fairies dance by the light of the moon, and they must be tired and ready to go to bed by daylight.'

"As they were eating these dainties numberless little rabbits, squirrels and birds came hovering around, but they were so small and the children seemed so big to them that they were afraid to go too near.

"After the children had finished eating and had made the uncle tell them plenty of fairy stories they started for home, and then the uncle said that the rabbits, squirrels and birds would finish all the goodies, as the good fairy always saw to it that they, too, had a picnic under the Tree of Plenty."

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

Anne Crawford Flexner is the authoress of "The Marriage Game" at the Comedy Theatre. Its superiority over most specimens of its kind should keep it long on view at the Comedy Theatre. Perhaps its merit should not be described in such comparative terms. "The Marriage Game" is really a delightfully amusing and refreshing view of a more or less familiar theme. The idea of the new farce is ingenius. Its three acts pass on a yacht. Its owner has heard that unhappy married couples may be cured of their distaste for each other if they are thrown into one another's society long enough to discover what their good points are. For the cruise of his yacht the bachelor invites his sister, who is drifting altogether away from her husband. His other guests include a wife devoted to auction bridge, who actually has nearly reached the breaking point with her husband, and a sadly henpecked gentleman entirely under the rule of his masterful wife, but still sufficiently independent to repel at any time and bring their married life to an end.

Practical Fashion Hints

By Alice Gibson

IN its straight lines this one-piece dress is almost severe, yet highly attractive and smart. The addition of one of the new oddly draped sashes would make it quite dressy enough for ordinary afternoon wear. In its present form it is a splendid design for the business woman or girl. Serge or ratine would be durable or one of the new dull plaids which are so popular. The collar could be of plain material in a color that repeats one of the shades of the plaid. A dull colored bone button would add an effective touch to the finished dress.

The blouse shows an effective closing, a full length sleeve and a removable chemisette. A three-piece skirt with just a suggestion of fullness at the top completes the costume. In size 36 this dress may be made with 5¼ yards of 36 inch material and ½ yard of allover lace for the chemisette. The pattern is cut in five sizes, 34 to 42.

This Is a Perfect Pattern

Design for a Braided Centrepiece.

Braided centrepieces are very effective and are exceptionally easy to make so that even the most inexperienced embroiderers need feel no hesitation about undertaking this. The braid, if soutache, should be sewed on with back stitches through the centre, and if coronation cord, should be sewed on with small couching stitches across its narrow portions.

Pattern number 14229 may be developed in braid, cord or out-line stitch and long and short stitch or French knots may be combined with the braiding.

This design is 22 inches in diameter and is suitable for embroidering a centerpiece or heavy linen or, if the scallops are omitted it may be used on a sofa-pillow of white or colored linen, silk or crafts canvas.

This pattern will be supplied to readers of the Daily Press for fifteen cents.

Paterson bowlers, who are in second place in the Elks' League, lost some ground last night when they dropped two games out of three on the Jersey City Elks' alleys. The home five had 946 in the first game and won handily. Paterson came back with 936 and showed the way by seven pins. In the final encounter the Jersey City quintet had 970 and finished ninety-seven pins ahead. Delehanty rolled 215 and 211 for Jersey City; Russell had 212. Wasserman 211 and both Wright and Corydon 204. In the first game Corydon ran into five splits and only scored 139. O'Gorman led the Paterson team with 209, but there was consistent pinning throughout by the Silk City pin-knights. The scores:

"MAC" SAYS

CONTINUOUS PERFORMANCE.

I read the sporting page each Monday night
And heave a heavy sigh,
A tale that makes my head feel light,
Forever meets my eye.

I try to duck without avail,
I try to dodge in vain:
I always see that ancient tale:
"Hope Chapel wins again."

As yet Manager Leighs has failed in all his atempts to bring to Plainfield a foe that rivals his quintet. To date Hope Chapel has romped away with every aggregation that has appeared here.

Speaking of continuous performance we also have to include the Y. M. C. A. contingent. This five has also to taste the sting of defeat.

Many have the opinion that the trick will be turned by the New York University team here Thanksgiving Day night. Well, maybe so.

It may relieve the chafed feelings of the Marathon quintet to know that they cherish the name that is significant of a long race. Smothering the scorebook to avoid publicity is a "long way around the question."

Hand in hand with the Marathon's stunt to keep their victory from the eyes of the public goes the performance of Captain Ketchum, of the Yale football team. Ketchum asserts that the only individuals or corporations benefitted by the player numbering idea in football will be the newspapers and further states that college players do not crave for publicity. We noticed, however, to our great surprise and mortification Saturday afternoon, that not in one single instance did Captain Ketchum refuse to have his picture snapped when sought by photographers previous to the Yale-Princeton clash. In fact every time we looked at the big fellow before the game started he was posing for the snappers

One consolation for basketball performers comes in the fact that they are not bothered by picture swipers.

Not that it is any of our business but we are anxious to find out who got away with that scorebook at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday night.

A study of modern football and especially that Plainfield-Phillipsburg class Saturday afternoon reveals the fact and leads us to believe that the forward pass is about as easy to make successfully as a bet on a horse race. If Mann didn't miss that forward pass by three inches Saturday he would have done something no other P. H. S. player has ever before dared to think of doing, beating Phillipsburg.

If there are many more desertions the White Sox and Giants will have to go around the world as basketball fives instead of baseball nines. In every little village some one player or another finds a roost he likes.

It was announced at Saturday's game in New Haven that President Wilson was preparing to rush the Princeton and Harvard football teams to Mexico in case of war. It might be well to remember the gridiron performers.

Dartmouth had its Beer in guard Saturday but was defeated by the redskins. Fire water had little effect on the Carlisle Indians. For a green team Dartmouth did as well as could be expected (joke).

When the much heralded Princeton backs bucked the Yale line Saturday afternoon they looked as though they had accidentally stepped in the path of a fast-moving motor truck.

A communication was received from the manager of the Manhattan College basketball team by the local Y. M. C. A. manager the other day challenging the locals to a court battle. Contained in the epistle was a demand for $25 expense money. College athletics are still operated on an amateur basis and baseball continues to be the only recognized professional sport.

We are led to believe that any team in the world will have as much success in trying to win a basketball game on the Hope Chapel court as a Frenchman will of trying to become mayor of Berlin. Why reconstruct the Hope gym when it is so advantageous at the present time.

North Plainfield High School has a game signed up with the Upsala College quintet. Having seen both of these demonical teams in action, we would suggest that an extra pair of goals be procured for use in case of emergency. The Swedes are noted for their lifting powers.

ELIZABETH HERE NEXT.

Next Saturday night the Y. M. C. A. basketball team of this city will oppose the Elizabeth Y. M. C. A. representatives on the local court in the regularly scheduled week-end contest. The local quintet will at that time appear in its new playing regalia for the first time this year.

BOROUGHITES FIRST GAME.

The first regularly scheduled basketball game of the season for the borough High School will be played at Kearny tomorrow afternoon with the High School five of that place. Kearny was North Plainfield's first opponent last year and defeated the boroughites by a score of 35 to 7.

Sporting Editor:

Query—What law is there to govern the distance a player's opponent should be from the ball at the time of taking a free kick?—L. B.

Answer—Previous to this season the law called for a distance of 6 yards. The International Board revised this to read 10 yards this season, but failed to provide for this change in Law No. 7. Therefore, it was decided that the Referees' Association of Philadelphia should recognize Law No. 10, which reads as follows:

"When a free kick has been awarded, the kicker's opponents shall not approach within 10 yards of the ball, until the kick is taken, unless they are standing on their own goal line. The ball must at least be rolled over before it shall be considered played— it must make a complete circuit or travel the distance of its circumference. The kicker shall not play the ball a second time until it has been played by another player. The kick-off (except as provided by Law No. 2), corner-kick, and goal-kick, shall be free kicks within the meaning of this law."

Query—What does the abbreviation "Xmas" mean?—C. S. A.

Answer—This is an "unmeaning" abbreviation? It does not and never did stand for Christmas. In the early history of the Christian church the Greeks used the two Greek letters, Chi(x) and Rho(p), in the form of a monogram, which became known as the "Chirho," as a symbol for Christ. The English letter (x) has no meaning in this monogram. It does not represent the Greek Chi and the use of "Xmas" for Christmas is false etymologically, theoretically and ecclesiastically.

Query—Was United States fractional currency first called postal currency?—J. T.

Answer—United States fractional currency was at first called postal currency and was authorized and issued under an act of July 17, 1862. The second issue, and all following, were under an act dated March 23, 1863, the total amount being $368,724,079.45. Much of this has been redeemed by the government and destroyed. The fifth and last issue was from February 26, 1874, to February 15, 1876.

N. P. H. S. INTERCLASS LEAGUE'S SCHEDULE

Borough High School Quintets Are Planning for a Hot Fight This Season.

The North Plainfield High School Inter-class Basketball League was started at Saengerbund Hall this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The managers of the teams have worked out a satisfactory schedule for the entire season, each team playing every other six times, making a total of eighteen games. The senior class could not put out a team because of the rule that first team men are ineligible. This class has three men on the 'varsity, leaving only three others who know anything at all about the game. The schedule is the best that has ever been put out and the contest will undoubtedly be very close throughout.

The respective managers of the three teams are Frank Fetherstone, '15; John Dawe, '16, and William Seidel, '17.

The complete schedule follows:

Nov. 18—Sophomores vs. Juniors.
Nov. 26—Freshmen vs. Juniors.
Dec. 2.—Juniors vs. Sophomores.

Dec. 10—Freshmen vs. Juniors.

RUTGERS CROSS COUNTRY TEAM WILL RACE LAFAYETTE

Led by Captain Arthur Mershon, of Rahway, the members of the Rutgers College cross country team will journey to Easton, Pa., tomorrow in order to engage in a five mile run with the strong Lafayette College Harriers. This is the first cross country team in the history of Rutgers, but in spite of their inexperience, the men are confident of gaining the victory. Captain Mershon is one of the best long distance men among the smaller colleges' representatives and holds the Rutgers records for the one and two mile runs. It was through his efforts that a team was formed this year.

The trials, which were held last week, resulted in the selection of the following men: Arthur Mershon, of Rahway; Lewis K. Wilkins, of Thorofare; Paul M. Bowen, of Shiloh; John K. Powell, of Metuchen, and Clarence C. Winchell, of Jersey City.

The men have been hard at work during the past month and expect to give the Pennsylvanians a hard fight for first honors. Manager Elliott is arranging runs with both Stevens and New York University, to be held sometime next month.

WHERE'S THE SCOREBOOK?

Members of the Grace Church boys' basketball team that trimmed the Marathons on the Y. M. C. A. court Saturday night are clamoring for recognition following their victory but have thus far failed to establish the whereabouts of the scorebook. One of the Marathon players was seen to take the book following the contest evidently with the idea of escaping newspaper publicity. SHAKE-UP PROMISED IN Y. M. C. A. LINEUP BEFORE THE NEXT GAME

According to information dealt out by Captain Albert Brynairski, of the Y. M. C. A. basketball team this morning, at least two new faces are due to appear in the association lineup next Saturday night when the locals take the floor against the Elizabeth Y. M. C. A. in the week-end contest. Weak spots that were sadly evident in last Saturday night's contest have aroused the Y. M. C. A. leader to action and he has notified several Y. M. C. A. players to be on hand at the practices to be held this week. Although it is not definitely known who will be permanently supplanted by another player, it is certain that Myrton Glover, one of the mainstays of the team, will be unable to play this week.

Glover has been having considerable trouble with his nose for some time past and an operation has been ordered which will be performed Friday afternoon at his home on East Fifth street. He will therefore be out of the game Saturday night but expects to be able to return to the game by Thanksgiving Day when the local team will need his services against the New York University five which plays here on that night.

Glover's position is not generally conceded to be a weak spot and who Captain Brynairski means to displace in the lineup remains a mystery. It was evident from the game put up by the team as a whole Saturday night that something was sadly missing in the teamwork and there appeared to be a cog lose in every department of the game. The usual amount of passing and teamwork was sadly missing and the players who are as a rule capable of caging the ball when given the opportunity failed to hold up thier portion of the work in that contest.

Brynairski stated this morning that he had several new ideas to try out and it is more than likely that shifts will be made that will materially strengthen the aggregation for the hard games to come. Contests have been booked with New York University, Trenton Y. M. C. A., Orange Y. M. C. A., Newark Y. M. C. A., Elizabeth Y. M. C. A., Belleville Y. M. C. A., the team representing the institutions for the Deaf and Dumb in Trenton, Montclair Y. M. C. A., and several New Jersey college quintets.

PLAN FOR BIG GAME.

The members of the Rutgers football team are in excellent condition after the hard game with Trinity, with the exception of Elmer Bracher, of Rahway, who received a bad cut over his right eye. It was found necessary to take two stitches in the wound after the game, but it is believed that the star halfback will be able to play against Stevens next Saturady. The Rutgers students are planning to attend the game in a body and are confident of defeating the Hoboken eleven.

NEWARK HERE AGAIN.

The Circle Five, of Newark, which was defeated after a hard fought battle by the local Y. M. C. A. five on the Association court Saturday night, wil lplay in the Hope Chapel gym next Saturday night against the chapel five.

The manager of the Hope Chapel second team has arranged a game with the Mt. Pleasant A. C. quintet to be played as a preliminary to the Hope Chapel-Circle Five game next Saturday night.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

Wilbur and Preston Danning, '06 and '10, respectively, have added to the flag collection by sending a pennant of Pratt Institute. It is made up in yellow and black with the institute seal and motto.

Addison Newkirk, '16, who has been ill at his home with tonsilitis for the past week, has recovered and is back in school. He will start basketball practise again in a few days with the first team.

Amelia Brizzie, '16, who has been unable to attend school on account of throat trouble, returned yesterday.

One of the first team basketball jerseys was given out last Friday and the lucky substitute was Ronald Conroy, who played forward in Roy Love's place. Conroy is certainly making good and deserved the place of first sub. There are still two more to be awarded and the contest for these is very close. The three most probable candidates are Addison Newkirk, '16; Warren Townley, '16, and Edson Day, '15.

At a meeting of the junior class Friday, a committee was appointed to send fruit to two of the sick members of the class. The two sick members are Elva Lippincott and Theodore Layton. The latter, who underwent an operation, is fast recovering and will return to his studies in a short time.

Miss Utter, the High School singing instructor, is rehearsing the pupils on two anthems that are to be sung at the Thanksgiving exercises. They are entitled "Ye Shall Dwell In the Land" and "To Thee, O Lord, Our Hearts We Raise." The last one is entirely new to the High School but the other one has been sung many times.

Manager "Duke" Van Mater has arranged a game with the team representing Upsala College to be played here on December 19. No return game has been as yet arranged.

STRUCK OUT TY COBB FOUR TIMES IN ONE GAME.

Duckey Holmes Tells Story How Georgian Made a Bad Start.

William (Duckey) Holmes is one of the veterans of the game who have been in the limelight for the last decade and a half.

Duckey has a fund of dope stored away in his cranium which he gathered during his sojourn about the country, and one story which he likes to tell is that relating to Ty Cobb's debut in the American league.

"I played in the first game in which Ty Cobb participated in the major leagues," declared Holmes the other day.

"It was in 1904. He had just joined the team and was playing center field and I was in the left garden for the White Sox. You never saw any one in your life who had stage fright worse than Cobb.

"He faced Doc White, one of the best left handed peggers that ever worked in a box. Doc shot them over fast and mixed them up. He struck Cobb out four times. After the game, while we were in the bus going back to the hotel, I said to Fielder Jones, manager of the White Sox, 'That Cobb kid handles himself in fine style.'

"'Yes, he looks good.' Every one joined in the chorus, 'Naw, he can't bat.'

"It's a fact that hitters are born and not made. Some players develop with practice, but they have to have it in them. You remember the White Sox were called the hitless wonders, but they were getting the runs, though they would get nosed out of many a game by about one run.

"'We need batting practice,' everybody said. 'Wait until we get back to Chicago and we'll practice batting all day long.' I had been hurt in Boston making a hard slide and had been laid up for more than six weeks. I was on the field, and Comiskey came to me and told me to put on a suit and get in the game.

"I protested that I hadn't had any practice for weeks, but I went in just the same. Al Orth, the spitball pitcher, was twirling, and he was burning them over. Of the six hits scored by the Sox that day I got a double and two triples, and I hadn't had a bat in my hand for more than six weeks."

PLAYERS WIN.

Ban Johnson Says Most of Their Demands Are Reasonable.

President Ban Johnson of the American league, on his return to Chicago from a hunting trip, said that he and the other members of the national commission received a copy of the demands of the Players' fraternity some time ago and that many of them seemed reasonable. He is of the opinion that an agreement on most of them will be reached at the coming meeting.

When asked if he would recognize David Fultz, head of the Players' union, if Mr. Fultz cared to address the meeting, Mr. Johnson said he was perfectly willing to listen to him. He added that he would rather meet a player or a committee of players.

Mr. Johnson also intimated that it was the intention of the club owners to go further toward benefiting the players than the demands ask. In this respect he referred to the transportation clause.

"SHALL WE KNOW EACH OTHER IN HEAVEN?"

A Sermon by

REV. G. R MAGUIRE

"Shall We Know Each Other In Heaven" was the subject of an intensely interesting sermon delivered at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday evening, by the Pastor, Dr. Gabriel Reid Maguire.

"Some contend," the preacher said, "that future recognition is impossible, and nothing but a myth. They say Heaven is such a large place we never can find our kindred over there. New York, London and Paris are big cities, and in any one of these cities we might spend years in our search for a friend whose street and number we did not know. Heaven is vastly larger than all our earthly cities combined—how are you going to find your father or mother in such a throng? Is this doctrine of future recognition a myth—a guess? Or is it a foundation upon which the souls of all ages can build their hopes? The object of my message is to take this theory out of the reach of surmise into that of absolute certainty. I want to prove that the kiss of reunion at the Celestial Gate is just as true as the kiss of parting at the cemetery. Just as sure as you heard the thud of the dirt poured upon your mother's coffin lid, so you will hear the voice of your loved ones singing in glory. What consolation would there be in going to our dear ones if we did not know them? David said upon the death of his son, 'I shall go to him.' Would he have been allowed to record this if not true? The Holy Ghost through his servant permitted this to be put on record. We read in Genesis that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob died and were gathered to their people. What people? Their friends comrades, loved ones. One day the Lord said to Peter, James and John, 'I want you to come for a little walk,' and they went up into a mountain called the Mount of Transfiguration; while they are there, a light falls from Heaven and strikes the mountain; Christ's garment glows and his face shines brighter than the sun; two spirits come down and light on the mountain and these spirits are recognized as Moses and Elias, who had been in the Glory Land for hundreds of years. Do you think for a single moment that if Peter, James and John could recognize Moses and Elias who had died hundreds of years before they were born, that I, a redeemed child of God, cannot recognize my loved ones who have gone only a few years ahead of me? The Bible intimates that the angels know each other! now if angels have this power, may not the redeemed, who are higher than the angels? Paul spoke about meeting his congregation in Heaven; if Paul then why not Gabriel Reid Maguire and his congregation?

"What did Christ mean in his conversation with Mary and Martha—'thy brother shall rise again;' merely this, do not weary yourselves with worrying, you'll see him again. The Bible describes Heaven as a great home circle. What a queer home circle it would be if, when you come together at Thanksgiving or Christmas, you did not know each other. If we recognize each other before we go to sleep, at night, don't we know each other when we wake in the morning? When we have our spiritual hearing and glorified body we shall know one another, for Paul says, 'Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face.' It will be my purified, glorified body gazing at you, and you at me. Oh, when the scales of material things have fallen, and the trumpet has sounded, I shall recognize my loved ones, and they me, for we shall know each other better when the mists have rolled away.'

"The rejection of the doctrine means the loss of our memory. Can we forget those with whom we have walked and talked so familiarly? Will death come and with a keen, sharp blade hew away our memory? If the exiled and lost in hell remember, will not those who are enthroned? When we look at a painting we want some one beside us with whom to exchange a glance of sympathy. The joy of Heaven is to be augmented by the presence of our earthly friends. Heaven is not a contraction, but an expansion. If I see you here, with two eyes which are imperfect, I shall surely know you when I have glorified eyes. It will be immortality gazing on immortality; victor standing beside victor. This theory is received in all lands under all forms of religion; it must have been implanted in the human breast by the architect of the world. The Indian, the Laplander, the Turk, the Swiss, the African, believes it; even the heathen in the jungles of darkest Africa believe in future recognition in Heaven. So many people have confirmed this belief on their deathbeds. In dying moments the little child sees his mother in glory. Heaven is not a formal place where people stand around with crowns on their brows; Heaven is a great home circle where they are waiting for us. The face of your child is engraved upon your soul, and even death cannot eliminate it; you could never forget the sound of your child's voice—let him call from behind some Heavenly hill, and you'll know it. Today if we only had faith enough, we could put our ear down to the grave and hear the rumble of chariots of the resurrection, and instead of wearing black, we would put on snowy white; in place of sorrow there would be joy—Glorious Heaven! Blessed Heaven!

"You whose hearts are down in the cemetery, lift them up to high Heaven, where you will forget your sorrow and tears. What a difference between Heaven and earth. On earth when a soul passes out we put palms on his coffin; in Heaven they put palms in his hand. Here we let them down, up there they lift them up, on earth it is farewell, in Heaven a welcome awaits us. I shall be there, by the Grace of God, and I shall know my congregation, my friends, my dear ones. Would that I might implant this great comfort in the heart of every child of God.

AMERICAN VILLAGES.

Here Is a Writer Who Claims They Are Positively Hideous.

No distinctively American style has arisen, and the average American home remains as ugly and as undistinguished as a Zulu kraal. In its essence it is simply a square box. And from that archetype it proceeds upward, not through degrees of beauty, but through degrees of hideousness. The more it is plastered with ornament the more vulgar and forbidding it becomes. The more it is adorned with color the more that color becomes a madness, a debauch, a public indecency.

Take a train ride through any American state and you will be sickened by the chaotic ugliness of the flitting villages—houses sprawling and shapeless, a huge advertising sign upon every flat wall, an intolerable effect of carelessness, ignorance, squalor, bad taste and downright viciousness.

But make the same sort of journey through France or Germany—say from Bremen to Munich or from Paris to Lyons—or through Austria or Italy or Switzerland, and you will be charmed by the beautiful harmony visible on all sides, the subordination of details to general effects, the instinctive feeling for color, the sound grouping, the constant presence of a tradition and a style. The design of the peasant houses changes twenty times between the Westphalian plain and the foot hills of the Alps, but in every change there is a subtle reflection of the physical environment, an unmistakable expression of human aspiration, worldly estate and character.

I don't know any ugly village between Bremen and Munich, nor even a village without its distinction, its special beauty, its individual charm. But I don't know of a village between Washington and Chicago that is not frankly appalling.—Smart Set.

NAMED IT RAVENNA.

Just When the Ohio Town Was Going to Be Called Tappan.

Shortly after the Revolution Benjamin Tappan, son of a wealthy Boston merchant and the original owner of what is now Portage county, O., entered his father's tract in the west and spent the winter there. Other settlers joined him, and a settlement was begun, which had the dignity of a town at a time when a single log cabin at each place marked the present sites of the cities of Cleveland and Buffalo. The place was one of singular natural beauty, and the question of a name soon arose.

Now, it happend that at this time a younger brother of Benjamin Tappan's and his wife were in Italy and came upon the old town of Ravenna. Delighted with the place, the young bride expressed to her husband the wish that somewhere in the new world there might arise a town worthy to bear the name of the wonderful old Italian city.

The husband immediately thought of his brother in the Ohio wilds and at once dispatched a letter in which he pictured the beauties of the Italian city and expressed the wish that the town then arising in the wilderness be named in its honor.

Many months later Benjamin Tappan, despairing of finding a suitable name for the town, was about to yield to the wishes of his neighbors and bestow the name of Tappan upon it when the letter arrived. So, instead of Tappan, the town was named Ravenna, which name it still proudly bears.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Two Meal Animal.

Breakfast with bacon (or meat) is a latter day invention, it should be recalled. Down to almost modern times man was a two meal a day animal—dinner and supper. A fifteenth century proverb bade him rise at 5 a. m., dine at 9 a. m., sup at 5 p. m., go to bed at 9 p. m., "and thou shalt be ninety and nine." The Oxford Dictionary indeed, gives 1463 as the date of the first mention of "breakfast." For centuries afterward it meant only the morning draft of ale, with or without a bite of bread. Everybody then set about his work fasting.—London Spectator.

An Interesting Exhibit.

If two great shops could stand side by side on the main street of the world and all the vices could be put in the show window of one of them and all the virtues in the show window of the other and all the people could go by all day, all night, and see the windowful of virtues as they were and the windowful of vices as they were all the world would be good in the morning.—Gerald Stanley Lee's "Crowds."

Not In His Line.

"They tell me," said the new reporter, who was doing an interview, "that you have succeeded in forging your way to the front."

"Sir," replied the self made man coldly, "you have been misinformed. I'm no forger."—London Globe.

TAXATION THEME OF LAWSON PURDY

New York Tax Commission's President Addresses Board of Trade.

OFFERS SUGGESTIONS

Advocates the Unit of Value to Secure Equitable Assessments—Says Assessors Should Always Be on the Job.

Advocating the unit of value as the only safe method in securing and equitable assessment of lands and buildings, and urging assessors not to penalize the improver of realty, Lawson Purdy, president of the New York Tax Commission, last night, gave an exceedingly practical talk on "Taxation," before a large gathering of business men at a meeting of the Board of Trade. William Jeffery, as president of the Board of Trade, introduced the speaker. Noticed among those present was Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., of North Plainfield, and several officials of the city and the borough.

Mr. Purdy declared that conditions here were not very much unlike those to be found in New York, or at least in some sections such as Jamaica and Flushing. One thing that had proved of great benefit in New York he stated, has been the publicity given to the work of assessment. He thoroughly believed that one system or method should be employed and then every taxpayer should be made acquainted with it, so that he would know the basis upon which assessments are made.

"A rule should be adopted and known," said Mr. Purdy, "and when that rule is departed from the burden of proof should be on him who departeth. First get the value of your land as near as possible, and I judge that that would be easier in Plainfield than New York, where its everybody's business to know and then have the assessments under the closest scrutiny by those who know. Good assessors should be required to give their whole time to the work for only in that way will they become efficient.

"Let the assessors explain the method by which assessments are made. It is not what a piece of property is worth to some individual that should fix the value, but a process of equalization should be employed. In New York we publish a book showing the unit value. This is a large book, but I should think that here it would be an easy matter to issue a book of that kind. Get your units right first.

"Everyone knows that the front of a lot is worth more than the rear, that there is a store value to be considered. I believe that real estate men could judge in an hour the real value of your business property on Front street. An assessor should be in a position to show why and how.

"There is a tendency nowadays to assess heavily unimproved land. This is not right. As for assessments on buildings, anyone can tell the cost of erecting a building with a little figuring, and where the cost is $1.50 or $2 a square foot per floor it is easy to reach the cost and have a basis to work on. A building is never worth more than the day it is constructed and every year after that it depreciates in value.

"In New York steel buildings are constantly being torn down because they are not suitable to the site, and it has been shown that better buildings can be erected today at one-half the cost of twenty years ago. This has to be considered in assessments. Don't fall into the error of over-assessing property that is deteriorating in value. We have been preaching that doctrine to our seventy-five deputies in New York.

"Then as I understand it you have a county tax burden. I think your mode of equalization is unfair. The county board are supposed to raise towns that are too low, but they don't. It is a case of one being penalized for another. You might better get evidence from all your towns and cities and either raise or lower the assessments on a unite basis, in this way everyone would be treated fairly."

Mr. Purdy also explained briefly the New York method of assessing land put on the market by development companies, a graduated system being employed. This was brought out through questions asked by LeRoy J. Ellis, of this city; Fred Thomas, president of the Somerville Board of Trade, and others. The informal discussion following Mr. Purdy's talk proved instructive and frequently the speaker's remarks were applauded. That some definite and lasting good will result from his talk seemed to be the belief of a majority of those at the meeting for it opened up a new line of reasoning in the matter of levying assessments on both lands and buildings. A. C Pleydell, of the borough, who is secretary of the New York Tax Reform Association, was present but did not speak.

GOATS CAUSE FIRE; LOSS ABOUT $1,300

Animals Upset Lamp in Barn and Kliver's Buildings Are Destroyed.

Fire caused by a lantern overturned by goats completely destroyed a barn and house owned and occupied by Paul Kliver in Valley road, last night, at 8 o'clock, causing damage estimated at $1,300. Kliver who lives in a house adjoining one end of the barn, had been feeding his live stock and while doing some work in the barn left a lighted lantern on the floor of the structure which was overturned by goats running about the interior of the building.

The floor of the barn was covered with a quantity of straw and the flames spread quickly to the store of hay in another portion of the building. When Kliver saw that his place was doomed he sought help from neighbors and some one notified the Watchung Chemical Company. A volunteer department did what it could in getting a portion of the goods stored in the barn away from the fire but a large quantity of lumber and farming implements were consumed in the blaze. Kliver had just purchased a large supply of lumber with which he intended to erect a new building on his farm and this was among the contents of the doomed building destroyed.

The barn and adjoining house were completely destroyed and practically the only things recovered from the flames were a number of goats and chickens. J. C. Pope & Company, of this city, had insurance amounting to $800 on the structure.

THOMAS LAPPIN WILL JOIN THE BENEDICTS

Miss Mary Florence Goeller Will Be His Bride This Afternoon.

In the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends, Miss Mary Florence Goeller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Goeller, of 740 West Fourth street, and Thomas Joseph Lappin, son of Mrs. Mary Lappin, of 438 West Fourth street, will be married in St. Mary's church at 5 o'clock this afternoon. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Father Bogan. Miss May Day, of Spooner avenue, will act as bridesmaid while Harry Goeller, brother of the bride, will act as best man. The bride will be given in marriage by her father.

Miss Goeller will wear as a wedding gown a creation of white crepe dechine, trimmed with valenciennes lace. She will also wear a picture hat to match. Miss Day's gown will be of blue chiffon. The bride will carry white roses while the bridesmaid will have an arm bouquet of carnations.

The ceremony will be followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents that will be of double significance. Today is the fiftieth anniversary of the birth of Miss Goeller's father and he will be honored by the guests, sharing congratulations with his daughter and newly-made son-in-law. The residence has been superbly decorated for the occasion. Following the serving of supper, the bride and groom will leave for Atlantic City to spend a week. On returning they will reside at 740 West Fourth street.

Both young people have always resided in this city and are widely known. They have been made the recipients of a handsome collection of presents, comprising many useful and valuable articles. Mr. Lappin is employed at the local office of the U. S. Express Company. Mr. Geoller, whose birthday will be observed at the wedding reception, has been with the Potter Press Works for over thirty years, having entered as an apprentice boy to learn the machinists trade.

THREE DAYS' FAIR.

The opening night of the three-day fair conducted last night and to be continued tonight and tomorrow night, at St. Peter's Lutheran church, the borough, by the Ladies' Aid Society, proved to be a success beyond the fondest hopes of the arrangement committee. Approximately $50 was made last night by the sale of refreshments and fancy and useful articles. The various booths were appropriately decorated and autumnal foliage was distributed about the room. The tables where refreshments were served were decorated with chrysanthemums furnished by Hugo Kultz. Mrs. Richard Moldenke was in general charge of the event.

Miss Frieda Theodora Gray Becomes the Wife of Prominent Physician.

AT 1ST PRESBYTERIAN

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring Officiates—Couples' Parents the Only Attendants — To Spend Their Honeymoon in Bermuda.

Miss Frieda Theodora Gray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Gray, of West Front street, and Dr. Arthur Hall Dundon, of the borough, were quietly married at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the First Presbyterian church. Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, the pastor, performed the ceremony. The only ones present to witness the marriage were the bride's parents and Mr. and Mrs. Richard N. Dundon, of Bridgeport, Conn., parents of the bridegroom. Immediately following the ceremony, the couple left for New York and today they sailed for Bermuda, where they will spend their honeymoon. They will be "at home" after December 1, at 55 Somerset street, the borough.

The bride was a member of the '05 Class of the Plainfield High School, and since 1910 has been an assistant teacher in the kindergarten department of the Irving Public School. CLERIC DESCRIBES LUMBER CAMP LIFE

Rev. Frank Higgins Tells the Story of His Career Among the Lumberjacks.

Addressing two audiences in this city yesterday, Rev. Frank Higgins, called "The Sky Pilot of the Lumber Jacks," told a graphic and interesting story of the life of the men who work in the great forests of the continent commenting in detail on the relationship existing between the employers and the workers. In the afternoon at 3:30 o'clock he spoke before a large audience in the First M. E. church, where a public meeting was held by the Plainfield Federation of Women's Missionary Societies, and in the evening he lectured at Hope Chapel, where the Men's Club of that church had as its guests the members of the Men's Clubs of Warren Chapel and the Monroe Avenue M. E. church.

That the lumber jacks are underpaid was emphasized by the Rev. Mr. Higgins, and he attributes this jointly to the unscrupulousness of the owners of the lumber companies and the extensive dissipating environment of a lumber camp. He said that many lumber jacks work only for the board they earn by their labors and to get money enough to satisfy their thirst for whisky, which he declared was sold in its most harmful form by the saloons near the scene of the operations. The speaker asserted that if the lumber jacks would save enough of their earnings to finance an organization or union, that they could combat the lumber interests and compel the firms they work for to pay them higher wages.

Rev. Mr. Higgins also told of his success in converting many men in the forests of Minnesota, where he has confined the greater part of his efforts to make the workers observe the teachings of the Bible. He also gave a description of the general activities of a lumber camp and of the riskiness of breaking "jams" in the stream down which the logs are floated to the wood mills.

METHODIST MEN IN CONFERENCE

Ministers and Laymen of Elizabeth District Discuss Church Administration.

HOLD THREE SESSIONS

The Upbuilding of the Work is Strongly Emphasized by Speakers at Morning and Afternoon Meetings.

"Church Administration," covering the work of the pastor and church finance, was considered at some length at the morning session of the minister's and laymen's meeting of the Elizabeth district, Newark Conference, being held today at the First M. E. church. There are about seventy-five ministers and laymen in attendance from all parts of the district.

C. M. Van Aken, of Maplewood, president of the Laymen's Conference, was in charge of the morning session, and after the opening exercises conducted by Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, district superintendent, Rev. C. E. Scudder, of Staten Island, and Walter M. McGee, of the Monroe Avenue church, presented papers on "The Work of the Pastor." They presented the question from the minister's and laymen's view, suggesting ways and means for greater efficiency.

In the discussion which followed, Rev. C. S. Kemble, formerly of this city but now of Rahway, spoke especially regarding church attendance, in which he said that one of the needs is a greater sense of responsibility on the part of the laymen and co-operation. He did not think it was always up to the pastor or preacher that the attendance was small. Pastoral work he also suggested as a great help.

Rev. Mr. Walton, of Port Richmond, said that one Sunday evening recently he heard Rev. Dr. Parkhurst preach. He gave a remarkable sermon and the music he said was worth at least $1, but there was not more than one hundred persons present. Rev. W. A. Knox, of Dunellen, suggested laymen's visitation to be one of the best helps in securing church attendance.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, of the borough, now pastor of the Scotch Plains church, said that he could speak from the point of view of a laymen and minister. He had noticed a gradual falling off in attendance at church services, which he characterized as "symptomatic," and not alone to be found in the Methodist church, but the Baptist, Presbyterian and the Disciples of Christ. He had noticed this falling off in attendance in the Metropolitan district, especially.

It was the opinion of Mr. Van Aken that the automobile and trend of the times are having much to do with the decrease in attendance and methods must be adopted to overcome these things.

Dr. James R. Joy presented an interesting paper on "Church Finance," in which he emphasized the importance of adopting the envelope system following and "every member" canvass, and he pointed out where this system had been successful, especially in the First M. E. church, where for the first time in several years there is not now a deficit. Dr. Joy went into detail somewhat as to the method, elaborating on various features.

Dr. Randolph while agreeing to some extent with Dr. Joy, thought the time ripe for believers of which the church of God is made up, to pray for the presence and power of the Holy Spirit, through which true efficiency would be made possible. Referring to the falling off in church attendance, Dr. Randolph said that one reason was that just as soon as people leave a church service they talk about everything but personal religion and do not publish Christ to the world.

Mr. Kemble speaking on the subject said that it was not the pious people who give the most, that the church is made up of praying and paying Christians.

An adjournment was taken at 1 o'clock for dinner, which was served in the basement by the women of the church. This afternoon's program opened at 1:30 o'clock with a consecration service conducted by Rev. C. C. Woodruff, followed with addresses on "Our Boys," Rev. A. G. Schatzman; "The New Program of the Epworth League," Rev. Dr. G. M. Whitfield; "How Shall We Hold Our Sunday-school Scholars for the Church," Harry Gee, and Rev. Dr. G. Franklin Ream, while the address of the afternoon will be given by Rev. Dr. C. L. Mead on "Evangelistic Passion."

The features of tonight's session will be an address by B. S. Edsall and one on "The Pastor Evangelist," by Rev. Dr. F. Watson Hannan, of Drew Seminary.

WHAT PRESS SAYS ABOUT MME. ALDA

"Sings With Feeling and Power"—Gutia Cassini to Be 'Cellist.

Endowed with charm and individuality as well as a remarkably beautiful voice, Madame Frances Alda of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has established her unquestioned success as a concert attraction. Last season, when the singer appeared at concerts in New York, she was hailed with as much enthusiasm as at her operatic presentations. In the opinions of the critics, Madame Alda measured up to the most exacting demands at the symphony concerts and in recitals. The following extracts, are culled from the press clipping book of the prima donna:

"Madame Alda's selections were by Caccini, Philidor, Purcell, Wilson, Moussorgsky, Debussy, Gilberte, Lie, La Forge, Mozart's "Il Re Pastore" and Leronx's "Le Nil" with violin obligato. Madame Alda's beautiful voice has never sounded sweeter and clearer than last night and in the Mozart aria it was especially good. There were encores of course, and Madame Alda received some lovely flowers."—New York Sun.

"An aria from Mozart's "Il Re Pastore" which Madame Alda sang with splendid feeling and power."—New York American.

"It offered Madame Alda opportunity to display the quality of her high register. Some of the notes she sang were as clear as those Ysaye played, and a number of little trills added a piquancy to the song of which the audience took more than ordinary notice."—New York Herald.

Gutia Cassini will be the 'cellist at Mme. Alda's recital.

COUNTRY'S LAWMAKERS WILL EAT HIS SAUSAGE

David C. Smalley returned last night from a trip of several days to Washington, and while there enjoyed himself immensely. He had several chats with Senator James E. Martine, saw Senator Moses E. Clapp, of Minnesota, whose acquaintance he made here a year ago, and met other Senators, including Poindexter and Chamberlain. Mr. Smalley some time ago sent Senator Clapp some of the sausage which he makes in Plainfield, and in thanks got a characteristic letter from the Minnesota solon, as follows:

"I cannot let the sausage episode pass withou a note. I tried it this morning. I am a good deal of a sausage crank and I want to tell you I never ate sausage to equal this. May you long live to serve the cause of better government and incidentally of good sausage."

While in Washington, Mr. Smalley completed plans for placing his make of sausage in the Senate Restaurant, the New Willard, Shoreham and Raleigh hotels.

LOCAL BIRDS WIN MANY SHOW CUPS

Judges Select Plainfield Fancier's Entries in Many Cases as the Best.

INTEREST INCREASING

List of Visitors Surpasses That of Last Year—Proprietors of Exhibits Here in Person—Castner and Dundas Bird Attracts Notice.

Interest in the second annual poultry show being conducted under the auspices of the New Jersey Association for Poultry Improvement in the City Market continues to grow and hundreds of chicken fanciers visited the place all day yesterday and this morning. Birds are still being brought in and placed in the pens reserved for them and some of the choicest specimens of the feathered species ever collected together under one roof are being shown in the local poultry centre.

The second annual event has already far eclipsed the success of last year and the number of guests who have viewed the entries to date now surpasses the entire total registered during the entire show last year. The City Market affords an excellent place for a demonstration such as this one and because of the central location of the exhibition many have taken advantage of the opportunity offered for poultry inspection. Representatives from all of the large poultry yards of the State are here taking charge of their entries in the local show and are acting as guides for the visitors who wish to be shown about the exhibition centre.

One of the birds which has attracted considerable notice from all who have inspected the array is the Castner and Dundas entry. This chicken is of the purest white and is perfect in form as well as in color. Local exhibitors took a prominent part in the prize winning during the opening hours of the show and the Endicott Farms in Randolphville have been the heaviest winners up to the present time. Frank T. McInerney's birds have taken four cups to date and are among the most attractive chickens in the show.

Judging will continue tonight and tomorrow and the prizes will be awarded during the latter part of the week. The large Sperry cup is now the chief award to be made and the poultry fanciers are looking forward with much anticipation to this event.

The following awards have been made by the judges:

ROYAL

The world-wide standard

Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

Royal Baking Powder is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder and its use is more economical than other leavening agents, because of the superlative quality and absolute wholesomeness of the food it makes.

Cheap baking powders, containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or advertised as pure and wholesome. Such mixtures are not desirable for food ingredients. Most persons have learned to their sorrow that a low price does not always mean economy. This is especially so in a food article. No baking powder can properly be substituted for Royal.

Read the ingredient clause on the label. If it does not show "Cream of Tartar," don't buy the powder.

White Chewing Gum

Talk No. 2

ALL chewing gum manufacturers make an effort to clean the crude gum before it is made into gum.

Some have a water-washing process, others strain it through bags, others hand-pick it.

Each takes out some of the dirt, but by no means all of it.

It took us five years to find a way to properly clean Chewing Gum. We have no monopoly; we simply would not make Dirty Gum.

MO-JO Gum is the first Clean White chewing gum ever made.

Chew mud-colored, black-specked gum if you wish, but we intend you shall do it with your eyes open.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

"CHECKERS" COMING.

Almost every one has read "Checkers," and seen it as a play on the stage. For such persons the All-Star Feature Corporation's motion picture production of the story furnishes an opportunity for a delightful renewal of acquaintance with old friends, and for those who have yet to know "Checkers" a great treat is yet to come. The novel "Checkers" was first published about ten years ago. It sprung into instant popularity, and its author, Henry M. Blossom, Jr., lost no time in putting the work into dramatic form. With Thos. W. Ross in the title role it was for years one of the most sensational successes. It is still a favorite with the better class stock companies in large cities. The scenario for the motion picture version was arranged from the book, and the play by Lawrence McGill and Eustace Hale Ball. These writers have done a most creditable piece of work, and the wonderful vividness of the production is due in no small part to their efforts. The inserts are well worded and placed. The excitement of the racetrack predominates the action of the film. The track scenes were taken at the Havre de Grace races, and the most careful attention has been given to small details, such as the posting of the scratches, the bookmakers arranging odds, and other incidents which many directors would have omitted. This careful work results in realism which is highly pleasing. The audience feels and almost irresistible desire to stand up and shout with Checkers, "Come on, Remorse! Come on, Remorse!" The All-Star management has been particularly fortunate in securing Thomas W. Ross, the original star of the play, for the title role in their production. Mr. Ross' remarkable ability at controlling his facial expressions makes him an ideal actor for such a part in a motion picture production. Katherine La Salle as Pert Barlow also does excellent work throughout. The story of "Checkers" is that of a youth left an orphan and out of work, who finally joins a gambler. In a raid on the house a man is killed, and Charles, realizing that he will be blamed, although actually innocent, escapes with Push Miller, a racetrack tout. By saving a young man from swindlers, Checkers meets his fiancee, Pert Barlow. Her father gives him work in a country store. Pert loses all her affection for her worthless fiance and falls in love with Checkers. Learning of this her father orders him from the house, saying: "When you return with $5,000 that you have earned honestly, then I will listen to you." Pert makes him promise never to gamble again, and gives him an old California fifty-dollar gold piece. At the track a few weeks later he gets a "sure-fire" tip on a 100 to 1 shot. Stung by seeing Pert at the track with her former sweetheart, he bets his $50 and wins $5,000. He goes back to Pert's town, but knows he cannot claim her because of the way in which he obtained the money. A run is started on the bank owned by the girl's father. Checkers holds back the crowd, who want their money, while he deposits his $5,000. The moral effect is so great that the run ends. Checkers turns to leave the town, but Mr. Barlow comes forward and tells him that he needs him in the family. There is also an under plot dealing with a love affair of Push Miller's. This also works out happily. At the Plainfield theatre Friday and Saturday, matinee and night, November 21 and 22.

A SUGGESTION.

The second annual exhibition of the New Jersey Association for Poultry Improvement being held at the old city market in North avenue this week is a surprisingly good show. There are entered fully fifteen hundred choice birds of a large variety of breeds. Many of them are famous as prize winners. It is an interesting exhibition and moreover it is highly instructive. For this reason every man and woman should spare the time to attend the show. As it is instructive, the school children to should see it.

Would it not be a good idea for the teachers in the public schools to call the attention of the pupils to this event? Arrangements, it is presumed, could be made to have officials of the show escort the young people about and explain to them about the various kinds of poultry on exhibition. We offer this as a suggestion to the superintendents of schools in the city and in the borough?

"Boss" Barnes spreads the alarm that Roosevelt is scheming to steal away with the Republican party presidential nomination in 1916. Possibly that won't be worth going after and you know T. R. only goes in for big game.

How much more dignified and effective was the way the New Jersey suffragists made known their wishes to President Wilson than the manner in which the English militants approached Premier Asquith.

—"Lest We Forget"—

Abraham Lincoln's Address on the Battlefield of Gettysburg at the Dedication of the Cemetery.

"Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

"Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

"But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—and that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth."

Gentlemen It is several years since the Pianola was brought to my attention, and having been, if I am not mistaken, the first one to endorse this important invention. I have since watched its development with the utmost interest.

From the first the wonderful possibilities of a piano technique immediately available to everyone, which should yet be under the control of the performer, appeared to me as the means to make music an accessible Art, - just as accessible to the great public, as literature, sculpture, and painting.

Your first Pianolas, one of which I myself own, contained this possibility in embryo, & it has remained for you, with gradual development during intervening years, to realize it. Your success with the Pianola is therefore well deserved, and I view the growth of your popularity, both in America, and in Europe, with satisfaction, as verification of my early opinion as to the future of the Pianola.

I cannot conceive of any reason why the Pianola should not be in every home. As a pianoforte, when the keyboard is used, it leaves nothing to be desired, while for acquiring a broad musical education, for the development of the understanding of good music, which modern culture demands, it is undoubtedly the most perfect, and really great medium.

There have appeared in recent years, a great many mechanical devices for piano-playing. I have heard several of them and, though not denying their certain qualities, I have to maintain my former opinion:- The Pianola is still the best, unsurpassable, supreme.

Most cordially yours

I J Paderewski

LITTLE TALKS BY THE WANT AD MAN

Copyright, 1913, The Int. Syndicate, Baltimore.

No. 33.

"THE POWER OF PUBLICITY HARNESSED FOR USE IN THE HOME."

THAT is a clever writer's definiton of Classified, or Want Ad., advertising.

Pretty good definition, I'm thinking.

That's the idea—"for use in the home." This newspaper goes into the homes of thousands of people each day. People read its Classified columns. They know the news value, to say nothing of the business possibilities, of Want Ad. advertising.

There isn't a thing under Old Sol that can't be advantageously and profitably advertised in the Classified clumns.

Turn to those clumns. Suppose you do it right now. Whether you want a Position, want Help, want to buy, swap or sell—you'll find a message from somebody, somewhere in those columns, that will be vitally interesting to you.

If you've a Want, and if you would advertise that Want, in a sure, quick, inexpensive way, try a little ad. in the Classified columns.

Take my word for it—you'll not regret the result.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

The Housewife's Daily Economy Calendar

FRANCES MARSHALL

Handkerchief News.

There is much variety in the handkerchiefs allowed today by good taste. There was a time when a woman who dressed in fashion and yet was conservative used only plain white linen handkerchiefs, with narrow hemstitched hems. Today a woman of taste may choose from a dozen sorts of handkerchiefs.

Net Borders.

Perhaps the newest thing in handkerchiefs is the net edge. Sometimes it is applied to a sheer white linen center as a hem and sometimes in the form of a little frill. This handkerchief gives a suggestion to the woman who makes her own handkerchiefs, or who makes them for gifts for others. Linen centers can be finished with a rolled hem, and the net can be whipped over this with white or colored thread. These handkerchiefs would be inexpensive and very dainty. Net ruching about an inch wide or a little wider could be used for the frill. It should first be ripped from the little band that holds it and the fullness should be pulled out. It should then be put on fulled very slightly as it is whipped in place.

Colored Handkerchiefs.

Colored handkerchiefs are increasingly used. Those with blue bands and stripes and embroidery are most useful, as the blue looks well with almost any street suit and with many house frocks as well. The color can be applied in the form of an initial embroidered with colored mercerized cotton. Or a colored hem can be put on white handkerchief-linen center. In the woven handkerchiefs the colored lines and bands are applied in many ways. Some of the handkerchiefs are checked with color, some are banded with it, in some it forms plaided corners.

Butterflies.

Butterflies are much used now for handkerchief decoration. They are embroidered in white and colors in the corners of handkerchiefs. Sometimes lace butterflies are inset in the corners.

Other Novelties.

From Paris this summer news came that silk handkerchiefs were carried and later these handkerchiefs made their appearance on this side of the water. They are not widely used, however.

Wide hems, sometimes an inch and a half wide, are seen on some of the new handkerchiefs.

Children's handkerchiefs with dancing and playing children outlined on them are sold inexpensively. Children's handkerchiefs packed in small pasteboard trunks or suit cases are sold at a small figure for Christmas gifts.

It seems as if it is easier today to buy soft, sheer handkerchiefs that are inexpensive than it used to be. The shops are constantly having sales when they offer really fine linen handkerchiefs at big reductions.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

The recent annual convention of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association was notable for two things, the splendid showing made during the past year, when the membership of the association has trebled and the spirit of determination to make an even better showing during the year to come.

One of the chief points brought out was the splendid support which is being given the suffrage cause by the newspapers of the State. The association's weekly bulletin of State news is being published regularly by fifty-four papers, and during the year special New Jersey suffrage articles have appeared in one hundred and fifty papers, in many cases accompanied by kindly editorial comment. Among the papers which have been especially helpful are the Plainfield Press and Courier-News, the Elizabeth Journal, the Jersey Journal, the New Brunswick Home News, and all the papers of Paterson, Passaic and Newark. The convention passed a special resolution of thanks to the New Jersey press.

The Montclair suffragists are planning a series of ward meetings, the city having been districted and a complete organization effected in each ward. Elizabeth, Plainfield, Passaic Paterson and other cities expect to complete their ward organizations in the near future.

The New Jersey delegation to the President was delighted with its pleasant reception at the White House The President assured them that he was pleased to see them and added that he had been discussing the appointment of a Woman Suffrage Committee in the House of Representatives with several Congressmen on Sunday. The delegation afterwards called upon Senator Martine and Senator Hughes. The former assured them that while he was personally opposed to woman suffrage, he intended to be perfectly fair and to mantain a strictly neutral attitude toward both sides. Senator Hughes was most cordial and while he did not definitely pledge himself to vote for the Federal amendment, the suffragists were very much pleased with their interview with him. Fifty-two women went from New Jersey and they were joined by a number of New Jersey women who live in Washington during the winter. In all about seventy women were received by the President.

It is interesting to read in the book review of the New York Times, that determined champion of the Anti-Suffragists, a review of Dr. H. J. Mozans' recent book, "Woman in Science." Says the Times: 'Not only does Dr. Mozans review the achievements of woman in mathematics, astronomy, physics, chemistry, the natural sciences, medicine and surgery, archaeology and invention but he discusses her capacity for these things, a capacity which has been kept from realization by a too-confining environment." Continuing the Times says: "In spite of the restrictions which the man's idea of what a woman ought to be have placed about her activity, woman has fought her way to the front with her brother chemists, astronomers and mathematicians. But the hardest blow Dr. Mozans deals is to Proudhon and his followers who claim that 'women have invented nothing, not even their distaff.' Practically all the essential comforts of home, claims Dr. Mozans, are due to the inventive genius of woman; woven cloth and the looms to weave it so, knives, flour making devices, ovens, chimneys, salt, earthenware vessels—all originated in the woman's quick mind! Then follows an imposing collection of the patents granted to women during the past few decades, when the woman inventor has come into her own—a list including not clothespins, and baby jumpers and hair crimpers alone, but cut-offs for hydraulic engines, coke crushers, processes for concentrating ores, devices for unloading box-cars, machines for driving hoops on barrels—hundreds of inventions which indicate a lively rush of women to such fields of invention as metallurgy, as civil, mechanical and electrical engineering."

And last of all it says, "Quotes Dr. Mozans, 'Woman's long struggle for complete intellectual freedom is almost ended, and certain victory is almost in sight. In spite of the sarcasm and ridicule of satirists and comic poets, in spite of the antipathy of philosophers and the antagonisms of legislators who persisted in treating women as inferior beings, they are finally in view of the goal toward which they have, through so many long ages, been bending their best efforts. Moreover, so effective and so concentrated has been their work during recent years that they have accomplished more toward securing complete intellectual enfranchisement than during the preceding twenty centuries.' Not a word during all this time about votes for women, for the writer wisely discusses science and not politics but we have our suspicions as to where his sympathies lie!"

One of the interesting points brought out at the convention last week was the fact that a number of the strongest leagues, whose increase in numbers has been most recent, are located in towns where there are also Anti-Suffrage organizations. One member of the resolutions committee humorously suggested introducing a resolution of thanks to the Antis!

LILLIAN F. FEICKERT.

Some Cookery Suggestions

NUT CONFECTIONS.

NOW that nuts are abundant they may be made into many nice candies and nourishing desserts. These are useful in giving variety to the Hallowe'en feast.

Nuts coated with sirup are made by boiling a cupful of sugar and a quarter of a cupful of water until it is brittle when dropped into water. Flavor with lemon or vanilla. Heat walnuts, almonds, pecans or peanuts, but do not brown, and dip them quickly into the heated sugar by means of the darning needle.

Fruit Sweetmeats.

Nut and fruit confections are made by chopping half a pound each of dates and preserved cherries, a pound each of figs and English walnut meats, mixing thoroughly and rolling the mixture into a thin sheet on the bread board, covering the board first with the pulverized sugar. Cut out with a small cutter and roll in sugar.

Hickory Nut Macaroons.—To one whole egg beaten light add one cupful sugar and beat well. Add two tablespoonfuls flour and one cupful nut meats chopped fine. Grease reversed tins, dust with flour, drop the macaroons on by spoonfuls and bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven.

Like Cream Candy.

Nut Balls.—Cut stale cake in inch squares; then cover with a frosting made as follows: Mix icing sugar with soft butter and a couple of teaspoonfuls of boiling water. Have ready walnuts chopped rather coarsely and roll frosted cake balls in the nuts until the frosting is almost hidden. The frosting may be flavored with vanilla. These are quite as nice as cream candy and will keep for days.

Deviled Almonds.—Blanch a half pound of almonds, throw them into cold water and then dry thoroughly in a cloth. Put the almonds into a frying pan in which two ounces of butter is sizzling. Fry until a golden brown. Drain on a sieve in front of the fire, sprinkle with cayenne and salt and serve hot.

In Reversed Pans.

Pecan Kisses.—Into the whites of six eggs put fourteen level tablespoonfuls white sugar and beat until stiff enough to stand alone. Take a small cupful pecan kernels, having them in as perfect halves as possible. Beat in lightly, drop on greased brown paper and bake in a moderate oven. It is a good plan to turn the baking pan upside down for the baking.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Lesson Bunny Rabbit Learned.

Bunny Wanted to See the World.

JACK and Evelyn heard daddy coming up the stairs and thought they would pretend they were asleep, so they jumped into their beds, and when daddy walked into the nursery there they were apparently asleep.

"Boo!" said Jack, sitting straight up in bed. "Boo!" echoed Evelyn. "Oh, dear," said daddy; "I thought, of course, you were asleep!" "No, indeed!" they both answered together. "We are all ready for our story."

"Once upon a time," began daddy, "there were three little rabbits, a daddy rabbit, a mother rabbit and their little Bunny. Now, Bunny was very old for his age—or at least he thought he was—and when Daddy and Mother Rabbit would go out in search of food Bunny would leave his little bed, which was in a hole hidden by leaves, and go out 'to see the world,' as he called it.

"One day daddy and mother had both gone out, and before they left they told Bunny to be sure not to leave his little home, for they had heard from some of the other animals that an awful fox had moved to their neighborhood and the night before had eaten up all of Mr. Jack Rabbit's children.

"But Bunny wasn't afraid of anything. He had never seen a fox, and he thought it would be lots of fun to go exploring, and if he should see Mr. Fox he would hide and be perfectly safe.

"He started out toward the river that was at the foot of the bank where he lived. He had not gone very far when he saw bounding through the woods straight for him an awful looking creature with a great long face, and, frightened almost out of his poor little wits, he thought, 'Oh, dear; that's Mr. Fox, and he'll eat me up!' Bunny turned and ran as fast as his wee legs would carry him, not daring to look around.

"'Bang, bang!' sounded through the woods. Bunny was so frightened he thought, of course, he was killed and was very much surprised to find he was still running. He kept on and on, not knowing that the 'Bang, bang!' had killed Mr. Fox. Then, very tired, he started slowly for home. He felt very timid and not at all like the brave Bunny who had gone out a few hours before. He reached home before his Daddy and Mother Rabbit, and when they came back they found him in his little bed looking very sleepy.

"He didn't say anything to them about his little trip. He hoped very much they would not find out about it.

"Just before Bunny fell asleep he heard Daddy Rabbit telling Mother Rabbit that Farmer Jones had succeeded in shooting Mr. Fox that afternoon, as Mr. Fox had been stealing Farmer Jones' sheep. Bunny then knew that was what the 'Bang, bang!' meant, and he firmly decided he would never go into the world alone again until he really became a big rabbit."

Practical Fashion Hints

By Alice Gibson

YOKE effects in waists and dresses aid in bringing about the loose unfitted appearance which is so very smart this season.

7784 is an attractive blouse design showing a yoke across the back. The body of the blouse is slightly fulled into the yoke, and there is quite a bit of fullness at the waist line. A full length or three-quarter sleeve may be used, as preferred. Crepe de chine, pongee or one of those quaint figured silks would be an excellent material for a waist of this kind. An adjustable frill of net or the material would simplify the laundering.

The home sewer will find this pattern so well designed that she will have no difficulty in adjusting the yoke if directions are heeded.

This design requires for size 36, 2¼ yards of 36 inch material. The pattern is cut in 6 sizes, 34 to 44.

This Is a Perfect Pattern

Be sure to give correct size measuring over the fullest part of the bust for dimensions. It may be obtained by filling out the coupon and inclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin to the Pattern Department of this paper.

Five Stencil Designs.

Many pretty articles may be stenciled with these designs which would make adorable little gifts for Christmas, such as bags, book-covers, desksets, curtains, pillows, table-covers, couch-covers and portieres. Crafts canvas, Russian crash, Egyptian cloth, Burlay, linen, scrim and pongee are suitable materials for making these articles.

The designs may be transferred to the stencil board, then placed upon a piece of glass or flat board and cut out with sharp knife held vertically.

Use a ½ inch flat bristle brush, cut off within ¼-inch of the ferule; fasten each part of the stencil down securely with thumb tacks, so that the medium cannot run under the edges of the pattern, before beginning your work.

If a medium of oil paint mixed with gasoline or with a preparation of turpentine one pint, ascetic acid one ounce, oil of winter green one ounce, is used, the article can be washed when soiled. The medium should be about the consistency of cream and should be rubbed well into the fabric so that no surplus paint is left on the fabric.

The essential point to be remembered in stenciling is to have a dry sheet of blotting paper always beneath the part upon which you are working, to absorb the surplus paint, also to rub your brush almost dry before applying it to the fabric.

The tendency will be to get the colors much too deep. One color alone, two shades of one color, or several different but harmonizing colors may be used for the designs. When more than one color is used, cover the parts that you do not wish to paint with a piece of stencil board and have a separate brush for each shade.

Pattern number 14225 contains five designs. The basket design 5½ by 3 inches; the book-cover, 8½ by 6 inches; the grape border, 2 inches wide; the conventional design, 8 by 6 inches, and conventional design 8 by 4 inches. This pattern will be supplied to readers for fifteen cents.

BORO JUNIORS WON FIRST CLASS GAME

Sophomores Took a Bad Trouncing at the Hands of Third Year Men.

The first game of the inter-class basketball league of the North Plainfield High School was played yesterday afternoon in Saengerbund Hall, when the Junior team trounced the Sophomores by the score of 48 to 27. Being the first of the series there was a large crowd of rooters for both sides and thus enthused, the players put up a good article of basketball.

From the start the Juniors were winners and they made most of their shots count while their opponents were erratic at times and threw away many good chances to score. The third year men took the lead at the start and retained it throughout by a lead of fifteen points. The first half ended with the score standing 28 to 14. In the second half LaPorte replaced Adams, who found it hard to follow Frank Fetherstone, the Junior's midget guard. Edson Day was the star of the game, making ten field goals and three points from the foul line. For the losers, Warren Townley, the first team substitute, was the whole show, making six baskets.

While the Sophomores were the champions of the school last year they are not as strong this season and the Juniors', from yesterday's performance, appear to be the favorites as the Freshmen are not considered strong. The next game will be played Monday, when the Freshmen meet the Juniors:

1914 BASEBALL CARD FOR LEAL ATHLETES

Manager Dale Announces His Schedule for the Coming Diamond Season.

Although the baseball season is still some months in the future and athletic attention has been shifted to basketball and the gridiron game, the athletes of the Leal Private School, who do not promote the football sport, have been busily engaged compiling a formidable baseball program and Manager Orton G. Dale, Jr., has about completed his irksome task. Owing to the fact that many schoolboy managers let the matter slip through until early spring Dale has had his troubles in an endeavor to complete his card but has outlined a formidable set of opponents who will face the locals on the diamond next spring.

Chauncey Stewart, the clever little second baseman of last year's nine, has been elected captain of this season's aggregation and he has been busy sizing up his material during the past month. There is an abundance of material in the institution this season and prospects indicate that the school will have a far superior team to that of last year. The schedule as completed to date follows:

Saturday, April 4—Trinity School, at home (pending).

Wednesday, April 8—Westfield Hight School, at home.

Saturday, April 11—Somerville High School, at home.

Wednesday, April 15—Carleton Academy, at Summit.

Saturday, April 18—Montclair Academy, at home.

Wednesday, April 22—Morristown Academy, at Morristown.

Queries, Comment and Answers

Sporting Editor:

Query—Is a college fresman allowed to play on the varsity athletic teams, providing of course, he is good enough for the team in question.—B. H.

Answer—Most of the big colleges have the three year rule eliminating a freshman from varsity competition in his first year at the college and restricting students who have to remain at the institution through inefficient work from playing an unlimited number of years for their alma mater. A number of the smalier colleges, however, allow the freshman to play during his entire course.

Sporting Editor:

Query—How many cubic feet is there in a ton of hay packed in a mow?—C. D.

Answer—Hay is a very ticklish matter to deal with and if dealt with too free is apt to bring on a fever, the cure of which is unknown to science. The grade of hay varies and both of these factors influence the result. If it rains on the day you begin your calculations, goodness knows what the result might be. The Fevered Few who attempt to answer this and who are authorities say that they are no longer on intimate terms with hay and the particular ton you speak of may be at the top, bottom or centre of the mow.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Who is the manager of the Hope Chapel basketball team or who should I go to to book games?—N. G.

Answer—George Leighs is supposed to be the game booker but we have been approached by another who claims he is also vested with the same authority. However, address Leighs at his home, 714 West Fourth street.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Who is considered the most scientific batter, Willie Keeler or Ty Cobb?—D. R. O.

Answer—Keeler was considered the greatest place hitter of the age when he was in his prime. Experts are of the opinion that Ty Cobb's work does not compare with Keeler's in this respect.

Sporting Editor:

Query—If I purchase an article for $2.50 and sell it for $5.00 what do I make, fifty or one hundred per cent.?—K. T.

Answer—You make one hundred per cent.

Sporting Editor:

Query What is the sixth wedding anniversary?—P. H.

Answer—Sugar.

LOCAL SCHOOLBOYS ON KINGSLEY LIST

Essex Fells Players Will Line-up Against Plainfield High and Leals.

Included in the schedule of basketball games for the coming season as issued by Assistant Head Master Truston, of the Kingsley School, Essex Fells, are contests with Plainfield High School, Westfield High School, Leals School and Somerville High School, the Kingsley School athletes having long been rivals of these institutions on the basketball court.

Prospects for a winning aggregation at that school this year are exceedingly bright as four of last year's best players are still in school and the only absentee will be Maxwell in center. Captain Tremaine, who starred against Plainfield High School last year being the most consistent point getter on the team, and Frost will play forwards, while Sperry, captain of the football team and who played guard on last year's quintet will most likely be moved to the pivot position.

The school opens on December 10 with Summit High School and closes March 7.

The schedule as arranged follows:

Wednesday Dec.10—Summit High School, at home.

Saturday, Dec. 13—Somerville High School, at home.

Saturday, Jan.17—Plainfield High School, at home.

Wednesday, Jan. 21—Open.

Saturday, Jan. 24—Poly Prep. at home.

Wednesday, Jan. 28—Open.

Saturday, Jan. 31—Leal's School, at home.

"MAC" SAYS

ODE TO A NUT.

Time was when I, a careless lad,
Arose with all the voice I had
And made the famous welkin ring
With "rahs" and all that sort of thing.
But now that I have older grown
And youth and ginger both have flown,
I feel a sharp and lasting pain
When on a special football train,
A lot of nuts get up and shout
And tear their larynx inside out
To let the public know of White,
Or Green, or Smith, that "He's all right!"

[redacted]

I fain would write some stuff that tells
The youthful rooter where he dwells
And take my pen in hand and scoff
And tell them just where they get off,
But when I think of days gone by
I cannot, even if I try,
For when I was a youth in school,
I hollered like a gol darn fool.

Speaking of football cranks we are forced to remark that there will be none of the gridiron stuff on Thanksgiving Day. Snow has been ordered for that holiday.

What bothers us is why some local enterprising football managers has not signed "Doc" Cook's team of Eskimos to play here next week. The Plainfield elevens would then be assured of having an inning of their favorite pastime.

Have you noticed all the "chickens" in town? The Poultry Show is now in progress and the open season for chickens is on tap.

North Plainfield High School has delegated a quintet of stars to tame the farmers of Kearny this afternoon. Last year the Queen City five came back with a drubbing on their hands but this year 'tis said matters will be different. Maybe, in some respects.

Leal School will open its court season next Monday afternoon and the private school boys will put a speedy aggregation on the court this year from all indications.

Manhattan College basketball players burst into print with a threat to unearth professionalism among those Y. M. C. A. players who refused to give them $25 for showing their ability in the Queen City. Mexico would be a great little place for these New Yorkers.

Plainfield will present the appearance of a miniature metropolis next Thursday when Holy Cross and Fordham College football artists collide on Cricket Field and Y. M. C. A. and New York University basketball players engage in a duel on the association court in the evening. New York will be represented by a delegation of its sturdyest performers in both instances.

Harvard-Yale football enthusiasts are now busily engaged trying to crowd Huerta out of the newspapers and the big question now looming up before the American public is whether or not Yale's team work can overcome Harvard's Brickley work. Much local sentiment has been expressed on both sides of the question and each team has its little band of Queen City cohorts to hold it up.

While the baseball situation may be severe at the present time and we are led to believe that it is from accounts we see published in metropolitan dailies, it is hard to get excited over baseball in the winter time.

LEAL'S BASKETBALL PROSPECTS BRIGHT

Season Will Open on the Local Y. M. C. A. Court Next Monday Afternoon.

Basketball will be ushered into the activities of Leal School next Monday afternoon when the local private schoolboys lineup against the quintet representing the Columbia Grammar School, of New York, on the local Y. M. C. A. court. Present indications point to a banner representative quintet for that institution this season and many new faces will be seen in the school's 1914 lineup.

Fred Dickerson is captain of the team and Chauncey Stewart is the game booker. Among the players who are trying for positions under the direction of Dickersen and Coach Wardlaw are Fred Krom, who managed the Plainfield High School team two years ago; Stewart, Sneider, Farber, Van Deventer, Stevenson, Lyon and Schoonmaker. Some of these men are playing their first season of basketball while several of the others have been candidates for the private school team in former years.

All of the home games will be played on the Y. M. C. A. court this year and to date five contests have been booked for that place. Games are pending with Bernardsville and Summit Academy. Bernardsville has been communicated with several times but no return letter has been received.

The schedule as completed to date follows:

December 24—Columbia Grammar School (Y. M. C. A.)

December 15—Cartaret Academy, (Y. M. C. A.)

January 12—Somerville High School, (Y. M. C. A.)

BASEBALL STARS ON FOREIGN SOIL

Johnny McGraw's Crew Will Play Exhibition Contests With the White Sox.

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 19.—After barnstorming the Canadian Northwest, the Japanese and Australian [illegible] United States ever since the close of the baseball season about a dozen baseball stars, composed of members of the Chicago White Sox and the New York Giants, supplemented by other noted players, left here on board a large party, embracing several club owners and the famous umpires and other baseball officials and a [illegible] women, [illegible] to sail from this port on one of the [illegible] Pacific Steamship Company [illegible] tour around the world.

Foreign [illegible] have been visited twice before by American major league players. The first trip was made in 1874, by the Boston and Philadelphia Athletics, of the National League, under the direction of A. G. Spalding. The teams visited only Great Britain and made an excellent impression. The second trip to foreign lands took place in the winter of 1888. The party consisted of the Chicago National League club, with the president of the club, A. G. Spalding, at the captainship of A. G. Mills, and a team composed of players selected from the National League and the American Association, under M. J. Ward. This was around the world tour by way of Australia, and home by the way of Great Britain.

For [illegible] six years John J. McGraw, of the New York Giants, and Charles Comiskey, president of the Chicago White Sox, had been in mind the plan of arranging a tour of the world for their teams, and consummating, on a much larger scale, the world tour arranged by A. G. Spalding twenty-five years ago. Last January, when Mr. McGraw was in Chicago, he met Mr. Comiskey and after they had talked [illegible] over they decided to carry out their ambitious plan. Richard [illegible], an experienced tour pilot, was engaged to travel in advance of the party and to make all the arrangements for their comfort at the various points to be touched by them. Ted Sullivan, a veteran club manager, and pilot, was made the manager of the tour and was to accompany the party on its entire journey.

The players of the party were selected by President Comiskey and Manager McGraw and they soon discovered that the difficulty was not so much in selecting those who should go but in excluding those who wished to go but who, for one reason or another, could not be taken. As finally selected the party includes the following: Charles A. Comiskey, president of the White Sox, and wife; Manager John J. McGraw, of the Giants, and wife, Manager James J. Callahan, of the White Sox, and wife; "Buck" Weaver and Morris Rath, of the White Sox; Sam Crawford, of the Detroit Tigers; Hal Chase, of the White Sox, and wife; "Germany" Schaefer, of the Washington Americans; "Reb" Russell, of the White Sox, and bride; George Evans, Ray Schalk, J. Fournier, "Red" Faber, G. Leverenz, Jim Scott and Joe Benz, all of the White Sox; Larry Doyle and Jim Thorpe, of the Giants, each accompanied by his bride; "Chief" Meyers, of the Giants, and wife; Fred Merkle, of the Giants; Sherwood Magee, of the Philadelphia Nationals; Hans Lobert, Philadelphia Nationals; Arthur Fromme, George Wiltse and "Bunny" Hearne, all of the Giants; Mike Doolan, of the Philadelphia Nationals; Ivy Wingo, of the St. Louis Nationals; Jeff Tesreau, of the Giants, and bride; Umpire Bill Klem, of the National League; Umpire Jack Sheridan, of the American League; Ted Sullivan, general manager of the tour; a party composed of guests of Mr. Comiskey, and including James R. McAleer, president of the Boston Red Sox, and wife; Louis Comiskey, son of President Comiskey, accompanied by his bride; Joe Farrell and wife, Jim Mullin and wife, Mrs. William Keough, Tom Lynch, Al Slight and Billy Leahy and a number of others, mostly friends of the originators of the tour. The fact that there are six brides in the party, five of them the brides of ball players, adds additional interest to the tour.

The first port the party will reach on its voyage will be Yokohama, where the teams will play a game on December 3. On the following day they will play at Kobe and on December 6 at Nagasaki. On December 8 they will reach Shanghai and on December 11 and 12 they will play at Hong Kong. From Hong Kong they will take the steamship St. Albans to Manila, where two games are scheduled for December 14 and 15. On their next cruise they will cross the equator for the first time on their way to Australia, where they will arrive on New Year's Day. They will play at Brisbane, Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide and Fremantle, whence they will sail on January 14, reaching Colombo, Ceylon, January 21. They will reach Suez, February 1, and after playing at Cairo and Alexandria they will sail for Europe, reaching Naples, February 7. After playing in a number of Italian, French and English cities they expect to sail from Queenstown, March 6, aboard the Mauretania bound for New York.

EDUCATION AND CHARACTER COMBINED FOR SUCCESS

Rev. Gabriel R. Maguire delivered a stirring talk to the students of the Hiers School this morning taking for his subject, "Knowledge, Liberty and Fraternity." He spoke forcefully and convincingly regarding the value of education; its relation to the development of character and the splendid results to be achieved by those who have education, plus good character.

The minister referred to the character of the Plainfield Business College in this community and the results which are now expected of those who have attended. He dwelt on the value of useful knowledge and demand for more earnestness of purpose on the part of both the parents and the young people in this age. In closing, the speaker gave a most encouraging talk to those who are preparing for the world of business and he held the close attention and keen interest of the entire school during his most helpful discourse.

PASTOR'S PREDICTION OF WORLD BROTHERHOOD

Rev. A. E. Wilson, pastor of the Unitarian church, addressed the Women's Alliance of the church at a meeting held at the home of Mrs. Stephen Haff, on West Seventh street, yesterday afternoon, on the subject of "Utopias." He gave a brief review of historical books including Plato's "Republics," More's "Utopia," and Campanella's "City of the Sun."

In the second division, Mr. Wilson spoke of the more modern methods practiced by communistic societies, including Owen's Icarian settlement on the Red River, and later at Nauvoo, Ill., the Oneida Community, referring to modern books, "Looking Backward," and Morris' "News from Nowhere."

Returning to his own ideas, Mr. Wilson ventured to predict that within one hundred years an inventory of the world's supplies will be made by a committee of the civilized nations and a careful account taken from the earth's storehouse and this will lead in a most direct fashion to world brotherhood.

Preceding the talk by Mr. Wilson, the alliance held a short business meeting during which routine matters were considered.

MINISTER SCORES THE EVANGELIST

Rev. Dr. Hannan Tells Methodists Why He Has Little Use for Professionals.

RESULTS ARE MEAGRE

Most People Attending Revival Services Are Christians—Dr. Mead and Others Speak at Closing Session.

"Neither ministers nor laymen have the burden of souls on their hearts," declared Rev. Dr. F. Watson Hannan, of Drew Seminary, in an address on "The Pastor Evangelist," at the ministers and laymen's conference of the Elizabeth district of the Newark M. C. Conference at the First M. E. church, last night, "and that is why the church is not reaping its reward. There are not even many who wet their pillows with tears over the loss of members of their own household. This is a time when men are filling the air with their opinions, and the opinion of the street is just as good as that of the church unless it is accompanied by strong convictions.

"The lack of concern, the lack of conviction and the lassitude with which the work is carried on in the church is largely responsible for present-day conditions. There was a time when there was no question as to the Diety of Christ but conditions have changed."

Turing his attention to the professional evangelist, Dr. Hannan gave his opinions in no uncertain words. "There is a logical place for the evangelist," said the speaker. "That he is necessary there is no doubt, but it is the rise of the professional evangelist that I wish to speak. Some pepole believe that a church is not able to do its work unless a helper is imported. If a church would do as much for its pastor as it does for an evangelist it would not need an evangelist.

"The evangelist oftentimes will only come to a group of churches. Some of them have a mania for statistics so that they can land another job. Some of them are taken to the 'gold cure,' getting as much during a revival as a pastor gets in a whole year. Sometimes the pastor believes that he cannot do the work alone and the board invites a strange man to come in, and after he is gone, the pastor has a work of reconstruction before him. If he lets things go he is badly informed and if he does not the people say he is jealous.

"The average evangelist is not a preacher nor teacher, but he tells stories which have been worked over and over again until they are like opiates or drugs. When they grip the speaker they act likewise on his hearers. He works a sermon around symbols. Ninety-five per cent. of the people attending evangelistic services are Christians and admit all the evangelist says.

"During the Chapman-Alexander revival in Brooklyn, a central service was held in the Claremont Skating Rink, which holds five thousand people. The place was packed with people and it would have been impossible for a sinner to even squeeze himself into the building.

"I believe in the decision card worded in a simple way, and I believe that the greatest agency for good is to be found in the personal worker's band. God's method is a process with a climax, and unless that is carried out we are simply marking time. The changing of the time-limit of pastorates will not bring a revival, it must be through a process of personal work. When people know that a minister stands for all that is best in a community he can present the claims of the gospel and be heard.

"Today we have a traveling people and a partially settled pastor, whereas a few years ago it was the reverse. We used to have class meetings, out of which were born class leaders, preachers and missionaries. They are things of the past. I believe the solution is to be found in the pastor organizing a band of personal workers and the climax of this process will be a revival."

The other speaker of the evening was B. S. Elsall, of the Roseville M. E. church, who made a short address on the subject, "What we Need and Expect from Connectional Methodism," in which he declared that today much is expected of Methodism and he urged everyone to help make good the declaration at the Indianapolis conference, an advance of 10 per cent. in membership the coming year.

Rev. Dr. Charles L. Mead, of New York, made the principal address yesterday afternoon, his subject being, "The Need of Evangelistic Passion." He declared among other things that only 2 per cent. of the boys of the country go to college and 80 per cent. of the number are fitted for bankers, legislators and other secular business in connection

POULTRY JUDGES COMPLETE WORK

List of Prize Winners for Great Quality Exhibition Has Been Announced.

LOCAL BIRDS SELECTED

Frank T. McInerney's Single Comb Rhode Island Reds Among the Most Conspicuous of Plainfield's Entries.

Many surprises were evident in the judging at the "Great Quality Paultry Show" last night and this morning and the distribution of awards has now been completed, over 200 cups and nearly as many medals having been given out to the various entrants. The unusual array of poultry and the numerous birds has made the judge's lot a difficult one and all of the prizes have been closely contested. Much rivalry has been stirred up among the various poultry raisers who have birds in the show and many watched the judging in each class.

Local birds played a prominent part in the prize winning and some of the best exhibits in the show are credited to local raisers and many from nearby suburbs also have come in for their share of the laurels. One of the most consistent of the Queen City winners during the opening days of the show has been Frank T. McInerney, of Lenox avenue. His poultry has attracted a large amount of comment from expert breeders and poultry fanciers and his exhibits have come in for more than their share of the trophies. His claims are particularly strong in the single comb Rhode Island Red class and as the result of his competition in this division he has been awarded several handsome cups by the judges.

The exhibitors who have brought their entries here from other parts of the State have been present in person in many instances and all have commented favorably on the manner in which the local show is being run and the method used by the committee on awards in judging the 1,200 birds. Despite the fact that competition has been keen in every class not a single expression of dissatisfaction has been evidenced on the part of respective poultry raisers.

The following are the balance of the awards made by the judges:

Barred Plymouth Rock class—Frutchey's Pharmacy cup for the best pen, Linden Poultry Yards; G. J. Finger cane for the best cock, J. Walsh.

Buff Plymouth Rock class—The Gayle Hardware Company mash hopper for three best hens, and the Harry Dreier suit case for the best display, C. M. Affleck.

White Wyandotte class—P. Traynor cup for the best pen, W. H. Williams; R. J. Shaw cup for the best display, Castner and Dundas.

Columbia Wyandotte class—Hillside Farm cup for the best display,

MRS. L. L. GILBERT'S DIVORCE IS SECURED

Decree Given Wife of Lawyer at Reno, Nev., Husband Not Contesting.

Mrs. Jennie E. Gilbert has been given a divorce from her husband Lucius L. Gilbert, of this city, the decree being granted at Reno, Nev., yesterday. The defendant made a formal appearance, but did not contest the suit.

The couple was married in Brooklyn on March 6, 1906, subsequently removing to this city, where the plaintiff said that her husband became dissatisfied and left her on November 11, 1912. Mrs. Gilbert testified that she had been a faithful wife and had given her husband no cause for action. There are no children.

Mr. Gilbert has been a resident of this city for many years, with the exception of a time when he resided in Brooklyn. He is a practicing lawyer in New York, and is a well-known member of the New York bar.

AUTO IS HIDDEN FROM RECEIVER

Bankrupt's Wife, Claiming Ownership, Says Its Whereabouts Are Unknown.

LAWYER SECRETED IT

George Bird Explains the Mystery—Car Was Put Away in Order to Get Court to Pass on Its Title.

Newark, Nov. 20.—Stating that her attorneys had hidden her automobile where she couldn't find it, Mrs. Josephine M. Coffin, of 306 Harrison avenue, Westfield, wife of William H. Coffin, proprietor of the bankrupt Coffin Rubber Company, of 38 William street, this city, testified in Bankruptcy Court that neither she nor her husband had any idea where the machine might be.

Nathan Bilder, attorney for the receiver, in an effort to locate the missing car, subpoenaed Mrs. Coffin, who claims that she purchased the car from her husband just before the bankruptcy.

Mrs. Coffin declared that she went to see her attorneys, Swackhamer & Bird, of Plainfield, about the car and she says Mr. Bird asked her if she was willing to trust the car with him.

"I asked him why," said Mrs. Coffin, "and he replied that 'it was for the best.'"

Mr. Bird came to the Coffin garage and took the car away, according to Mrs. Coffin. This was after the bankruptcy of the Coffin Rubber Company.

"Don't worry, I'll take care of the car," Mrs. Coffin says Mr. Bird told her. She says she hasn't seen the automobile since and doesn't know where it is.

Mr. Bilder stated that he would ask that the attorney be served with a rule to show cause why he should not turn over the machine to the receiver. Mrs Coffin declares that the transfer of the car to her by her husband was bona fide, but she said that she wanted to see her attorneys about it because she was afraid "it might look funny" being transferred just at the time of the bankruptcy.

Mr. Coffin places his liabilities at over $20,000. The largest creditor is the Hood Rubber Company with a claim of $12,000. The assets include a small stock of automobile accessories and about $2,000 worth of book accounts.

George Bird, of Swackhamer & Bird, said today that his purpose in secreting the machine, a 1905 Peerless, was to have the ownership ruled upon the courts. Had he not hidden it away, Mr. Bird states, that the receiver could have taken and sold it before the courts could pass upon the ownership. The car, he said, was bought by Mrs. Coffin and she paid for it by putting a note in the bank.

"We want the courts to say to whom the car belongs and if it is not Mrs. Coffin's it will be surrendered to the receiver."

Mr. Bird declined to tell where the car is at present except that it is stored in a garage many miles from Plainfield.

CHURCH WOMEN TO HOLD SALE OF XMAS ARTICLES

The Volunteer Class of the Park Avenue Baptist church has made arrangements for a sale of fancy and useful Christmas gifts to be held in the store at 237 West Front street, beginning tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, and continuing all day Saturday until late at night. A large display of goods will be placed on sale at reasonable prices and appropriate Yuletide presents for both young and old will be sold. Mrs. J. B. Groendyke is chairman of the general arrangement committee and Mrs. J. C. Evans will have charge of the orchestra which will render a musical program on both days.

The following will have charge of the respective booths and tables: Fancy table, Mrs. B. F. Hadley; utility, Mrs. Ira Van Arsdale; dolls, Mrs. A. N. Laggren; tea room and flowers, Mrs. William Wright; preserves and canned fruits, Mrs. Ella Duy; cakes, Mrs. James Pray; ice cream, Mrs. Franklin Goff; children's articles, Miss F. G. Hawkins; candy, Mrs. Daniel Van Winkle.

HEARING CONTINUED.

Newark, Nov. 20.—By agreement of counsel the case in which Mrs. Francis Sparks Hood sought to obtain from the Court of Chancery a restraining order, preventing her husband, Richard Haden Hood, from removing personal property from the Stelle avenue home, Plainfield, was continued from today until next Tuesday.

More Employes Laid Off and Cause is Said to Be Concern's Internal Strife.

There was a further reduction in the force at the Saurer plant of the International Motor Company, yesterday, when forty-five men were laid off. Among those who lost their positions were several clerks in the office. At present there are about one hundred men employed at the plant. Whether there will be any more changes soon is not known.

This condition, it is said, is not due to any slackness in trade, but to an internal fight among the stockholders. Recently, the Supreme Court of New York, gave a decision in favor of the minority stockholders, preventing the majority stockholders from doing certain things without their consent and limiting the amount of money which could be borrowed. This decision has been taken up on appeal by the majority stockholders and until a final decision is reached conditions are likely to remain unsettled at the local plant.

WHAT THE Y. M. C. A. MEANS TO PANAMA

Dr. Saunders Tells Facts at Joint Association Campaign Meeting in New York.

At yesterday's luncheon of the workers in the great campaign for $4,000,000 now being conducted by the Young Women's and the Young Men's Christian Associations of New York, a spirited tribute was paid to the value of the work of the Y. M. C. A. on the Panama Canal Zone by Dr. William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield. His talk was one of a series which is being given at these daily meetings by distinguished friends of the work of both the Y. W. C. A. and the Y. M. C. A. on different aspects of the many-sided service of those great and useful organizations.

He quoted Colonel Goethals as saying that the building of the Canal had been made possible by the wonderful achievements in sanitary engineering of Colonel Gorgas and by the Association's work in providing for the physical, social, educational and moral needs of the men who are digging the canal. He said that, as an engineer, he had visited and inspected all the great engineering operations of the present day and that everywhere excepting at Panama the only place where the men on these great contracts could find entertainment was in the saloon or the brothel. He had heard men in charge of such great undertakings advance the theory that it is necessary to maintain such resorts in connection with them. "Panama upsets such a theory," said Dr. Saunders. "The Y. M. C. A. club houses, with their bowling alleys, billiard rooms and other facilities for wholesome recreation are instrumental in keeping the men working there happy and efficient."

Speaking of the effect the operation of the work of the Y. M. C. A. had had on the saloon business in Panama, he related an interview with a saloon-keeper who had been in business both during the French and the American regimes on the Isthmus, in which the saloon-keeper stated that business amounting to $125 to $150 per day under the old order had dwindled to no more than that amount of business per week.

PRISONERS WILL BE PUT TO WORK

Union County's "Jail Birds" Will Earn Dollar a Day as Laborers.

DOANE SPONSERS PLAN

Outdoor Life Will Be Beneficial Committee Reports—Judge Connelly Ready to Sign Order—Election Bills Paid.

Quite largely through the efforts of Freeholder J. Hervey Doane, of this city, supported by other members, the Union County Board of Freeholders at its meeting in Elizabeth, yesterday, adopted the jail committee's report, of which Mr. Doane is a member, providing that male prisoners in the county jail shall be put to work on the county's farm at Bonnie Burn Sanitorium.

Mr. Doane has been an advocate of this plan for some time, being supported by the various charity organizations in the county. The present plan is to pay the men $1 a day and give them their meals. As soon as arrangements can be made to house and feed the men they will be put to work. There was some opposition to the plan yesterday, Freeholder J. Logan Fay expressing doubts as to the right of the Board to take such action.

However, when the report was presented all the members voted for it. It is understood that Judge James C. Connolly is ready to sign the order at once. The Board paid election bills amounting to $40,000. The jail committee's report, signed by Freeholders J. S. Perry, J. Hervey Doane and William Bourdon, is as follows:

"Your committee for some time past has been carefully considering the best method of dealing with prisoners who have been committed to the county jail.

"Humanity bids us to reclaim rather than punish. No argument is required to convince us that persons confined within the four walls of a jail, without opportunity for proper exercise, become sullen and morbid, and, when released, are a worse menace to society than before their imprisonment.

"The Union County Medical Society certify that a certain disease, prevalent among the prisoners for the past five years, is caused by the unnatural condition of enforced idleness of the men in the jail.

"Two Grand Juries have recently recommended that the prisoners be given outdoor employment, and the charity organizations of our county have made strong appeals to your honorable body.

"In this crisis, when the pressure of public opinion is felt on all sides, we must give heed to this popular movement.

"Essex and Mercer counties are in the advance movement. In Mercer they are working a farm, the products of which are raised for county use, and, in Essex, the prisoners are employed in a workhouse, and a farm has been recently purchased which is being worked by the inmates of the county jail.

"Sheriff Wright is in full sympathy with the idea and your committee therefore recommend that a trial of the farm plan be made by employing three or more prisoners on the county farm as soon as arrangements can be made to house and feed them, paying them one dollar a day and their meals, in exchange for labor; all arrangements for the housing, feeding and safe-keeping of the men to be left with the jail committee and the sheriff."

MONATON REALTY CO. IS UNDER FIRE

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Nash Figures in Concern Which is Being Investigated.

FOLLOWING COMPLAINT

Some Big Profits Cause Suspicion—Dominies Big Investors—District Attorney and Postoffice Get on the Job.

The investigation of the affairs of the Monaton Realty Investment Co., with offices at 220 West 42nd street, New York city, by the New York District Attorney's office, Post Office Department, Attorney-General's office, and the Insurance Department of New York State, reveals the fact that Rev. Dr. Charles E. Nash, of Watchung, is one of the chief sales agents of the corporation. It is alleged that Rev. John C. Chapman, a Presbyterian minister, of Hackettstown, who it is said edited a magazine booming the company, and Rev. Dr. Nash became interested in the concern while making visits to Wall street in search of sermon material. Numerous complaints by those who have dealt with the firm led to the investigation.

The company was formed in 1907 under the laws of New York State with an announced capital of $1,000,000. Offices were opened in several cities and it is said that more than $1,000,000 of the company's certicates were sold. In December, 1910, stockholders in the company, then in the Times Building, were so pleased by the reports of profit that they sent a committee to learn the secret of the success. It is reported that the committee never reported.

Some time ago the New York State Banking Department did a little investigating to see if the company was not doing a banking business, but found it had no jurisdiction. Last summer the Attorney-General began suit to cancel the company's charter on the ground that it had violated the law by doing what amounted to a banking business. The suit is still pending. Next the New York State Insurance Department became interested because it learned that the firm was doing what appeared to be an insurance business.

It is said that many clergymen, through the efforts of Nash and Chapman, became heavy investors in Monaton securities. One investigation of $1,700,000 in realty holdings is said to have disclosed "that such of these properties as were in the name of the company were mortgaged beyond their value and that as a matter of fact the company had no real equity in any of the property." It is alleged that the New York Insurance Commissioners office made this report.

Mrs. Margaret B. Waters, of the Hotel Bristol, New York, is one of the clients of the firm. Rev. Mr. Nash could not be found today at his home in Valley road.

SMOKE RESPONSIBLE FOR CRASH OF AUTOS

Cars of Kenneth Runyon and L. K. Hyde Damaged in a Head-on Collision.

Blinded by a cloud of smoke caused by a bonfire of leaves and other refuse in front of David King's home, on Craig place, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, two large automobiles, one owned and driven by Kenneth Runyon, of Madison avenue, and the other owned by Louis K. Hyde and driven by his chauffeur, came together head on, neither driver being able to distinguish the outline of the other's car directly ahead. Runyon was traveling west on Craig place and as he approached the King home he swerved to the left hand side of the road to pass a wagon standing at the curb and as he entered the cloud of smoke his machine struck the Hyde car which was traveling in an easterly direction on the proper side of the thoroughfare.

The vehicles, although traveling at a moderate rate of speed came together with a heavy impact and each was considerably damaged although none was seriously lisabled. Runyon and two other occupants in his car were thrown out into the road but escaped with a few bruises. Mr. Hyde's chauffeur managed to maintain his seat in the limousine enclosure and his car fared considerably better than Runyon's which was badly damaged and had to be towed to a garage. The radiator was stove in, the mud guards bent and broken and the glass wind-shield completely demolished by the impact.

Both drivers refused to comment on the accident other than to exonerate the other from all blame and the matter was privately adjusted to the satisfaction of all.

BRODHEAD QUITS BOTH THE JOBS

Appointments to Be Made to County Tax Board and to Education Board.

HE GOES TO SCRANTON

Becoming Officer of Mfg. Concern at $8,000 Salary. Former Assemblyman Must Resign Political Jobs in New Jersey.

Former Assemblyman Calvin E. Brodhead, of Belvidere avenue, resigning his political positions, will remove to Scranton, Pa., his removal being necessitated by his appointment as vice-president and general sales agent of the Scranton Bolt and Nut Company, a position paying $8,000 a year. Until recently Mr. Brodhead has been the New York manager of the concern and his promotion followed the death of F. B. Rutter, who was a victim of the New Haven railroad wreck on Sept. 2. That Brodhead was the only man considered in filling the vacancy is considered by his friends as a compliment to his ability.

Calvin E. Brodhead.

Already Mr. Brodhead has sent in his resignation as a member of the Plainfield Board of Education. A year ago, Mayor Percy H. Stewart appointed him to that place to succeed J. Herbert Case, vice-president of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. of New York. According to his colleagues in that body, Mr. Brodhead has made a valuable member of the board.

As he is also a member of the Union County Board for the Equalization of Taxes it will be necessary for him to quit that job, which pays $1,800 a year. He said today that his resignation would be transmitted to Acting Governor Taylor within the course of a month.

Mr. Brodhead was first heard of when as a faithful Democrat he consented to be an Assembly nominee of that party in Union county, to aid what was considered a "forlorn hope." The landslide given Woodrow Wilson for the Governorship swept him into office. During his incumbency he proved a good legislator and the then Governor Wilson highly appreciated his services in behalf of progressive legislation.

Recently, Mr. Brodhead's name has been connected with the postmastership appointment, but his decision to remove to Pennsylvania eliminates him from that contest.

Mrs. Brodhead and their children will leave on Monday for Scranton and Mr. Brodhead has placed his property on the market as will be noted in our advertising columns.

I. O. F. SUPREME ORGANIZER CONFERS WITH COURT AIDES

Elizabeth, Nov. 20.—The supreme organizer of the Independent Order of Foresters, George A. Mitchell, of Toronto, Canada, met in conference here with the thirty-five court organizers of the New Jersey jurisdiction at the Foresters' headquarters to arrange for an active campaign during the winter months.

The reports submitted by the organizers from different sections of the State showed that the actual results in the way of lapses as a result of the recent legislation of the Supreme Court affecting the members admitted prior to 1899 was much below the number rumored.

In the twenty-two Newark courts, with an aggregate membership of 4,000, the net loss, it was said, was insignificant, but a few more than the usual lapses for non-payment. In other sections of the State the same condition was reported. In Hudson county there were very few, as a number of the courts have no affected members.

In this city, where there are ten courts and 3,000 members, the loss has been small, according to the statement of the city organizers.

It was also stated that the effect of the proposed new organization of "insurgent" Foresters has not been noticeable. While a number talk about it, it was pointed out, few have actually severed their membership, preferring to hold what they have rather than take chances with an uncertainty. Adverse comment was made as to what was called the unfair methods that have been followed by the solicitors for the proposed new society.

PRAISES WORK OF THE CAMERA.

Princeton, Nov. 20.—Edward A. Havers told the Natural Science Society, Tuesday night, that the camera has been the means of practically revolutionizing more recent discoveries. With a number of slides he indicated some of the marvels performed by the camera. He said that it gives to the modern age a means of recording events, even to the most gorgeous pageants for future generations. The speaker showed how the art has been so cultivated that wild beasts have been photographed in their haunts with the camera a mile distant. Some "fake" photographers also were shown. Mr. Havers predicted that within a comparatively short time color photography will be within the reach of every one.

MO-JO White Chewing Gum

Talk No. 3

WE SAID in our first MO-JO talk that we wanted to find out if people would continue to chew dirty gum when they knew the facts.

These talks will present these facts. The future of the chewing gum business is in the hands of the public. If people insist on clean white gum, they will get it.

Other manufacturers will be quick to follow our lead. Just now, MO-JO is the only clean white chewing gum on the market. If you like it, it will be a pleasure to us to continue to lead the way. Try a MO-JO and decide the question for yourself. If you can't remember the name, just ask for clean white gum.

WOULD HAVE STATE TAKE D. AND R. CANAL FROM P. R. R.

New Brunswick, Nov. 20.—A State-wide movement was inaugurated at a Common Council meeting here to bring about State ownership of the Delaware and Raritan Canal. A resolution was offered by Alderman Henry Seiffert calling upon the Legislature to take steps to ascertain if the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, which controls the canal by lease, has not abandoned navigation for more than three years, thus violating the conditions of the charter. If this condition is found to exist, then the resolution calls upon the Legislatude to appoint a commission so the State can take possession of the property.

Copies of the resolution are to be sent to all municipalities, towns and villages throughout the State and all boards of trade and other bodies, and a public hearing will be held here next Monday night by Common Council, to which all parties interested are invited.

Alderman Seiffert said the day of charging tolls on highways was past, and the canal should be made a public highway. As it was, the whole water front of this city was controlled by the Pennsylvania Railroad practically, he declared. He urged the immediate adoption of the resolution, but it was decided first to have a public hearing thereon.

The resolution is of great length and covers the subject thoroughly.

ACCUSE BEEKMAN OF HAVING ONCE HAD REPUBLICAN JOB

Jersey City, Nov. 20.—Although Governor-elect Fielder declared yesterday that he had not heard of it, there was a report here that charges were to be preferred against Assemblyman Azariah M. Beekman, of Somerset county, in an effort to prevent his selection as Speaker of the House at the coming legislative session.

There are two or more candidates for the Speakership in Hudson county, and there is a suspicion that they may have something to do with the alleged charges, though it is declared the trouble is being stirred up by Somerset Democrats, who hold that Beekman has not always been a consistent Democrat.

They go so far as to charge that he once accepted the assistant postmastership of Somerville under a Republican administration. An intimation that there might be even a charge filed holding that Mr. Beekman was not entitled to his seat in the Legislature was another report, but nobody took much stock in that.

Assemblyman Walter L. McDermott has, however, not given up hope of landing the Speakership, and some of his friends seem to think that the expected charges against Beekman may brighten the McDermott chance.

SPEED COURTSHIP, THIS.

Elizabeth, Nov. 20.—It became known yesterday that Miss Lillian Gulick, of 312 Walnut street, and Ernest L. Henne, of 350 Union avenue, who were married Saturday by Rev. John T. Kerr, of the Third Presbyterian church, met for the first time at a reception Thursday night. There Miss Gulick is said to have chided Henne jokingly for not being married. He promptly proposed and was accepted. A license was immediately procured and after the usual twenty-four hour lapse the ceremony was performed.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

At a meeting of the Senior Class Tuesday there was much discussion over the selection of a class motto. There were eight in all to be voted on and after the ballots had been counted it was found that there was a tie. These two were then voted on and again there was a tie vote. The two mottoes were "Determination is Success" and "Deeds Not Words." After much discussion the class president voted in favor of the former, settling the tie. The Latin for the motto is "Sententia est feliatas."

Principal Earley has decided that there will be no weekly speaker this Friday.

Miss Bernice Attner, instructor in Latin, has presented the High School with a pennant of Radcliffe College, of Cambridge, Mass.

At a meeting of the Freshman Class Tuesday it was decided to purchase monograms for the members of the girls' and boys' basketball teams. The subject of supporting the boys' team in out of town games was assured, but was left unsettled.

After the chapel exercises yesterday morning Attwood Giddings, '14, recited Lincoln's Gettysburg address before the entire school in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the delivery of this speech.

The members of the Junior Class are making rapid progress in the preparation of their mock trial that is to be given on Dec. 5. The business managers have expended a large sum of money for music for the dancing which will be held afterwards. The trial will be given at Saengerbund Hall. It is under the direction of Miss Ray.

At the last minute Captain Burner decided that Addison Newkirk, '16, was worthy of the first trip as substitute and took him to Kearny yesterday. Newkirk received a first team jersey and can be used either as a guard or forward.

Three teachers of the Metuchen Primary School made an all-day visit to the primary grades Tuesday. They were the Misses Cheeseman, Vogel and Felter, teachers in the fifth, second and first grades, respectively. In the morning they visited the Somerset School classes and in the afternoon went to the Watchung School.

NASSAU CLUB NAMES ITS PLAY.

Princeton, Nov. 20.—The Princeton University Triangle Club has finally selected a name for the play which will be produced on its annual tour of the West during the Christmas holidays. It is to be called "The Pursuit of Priscilla," and is the work of Robert Strain, of the class of 1914, in collaboration with Henry P. Elliott, president of the club. The play has a Western locale. The music, for the most part, has been written by Hamilton F. Dyckman, who wrote most of the music last year, while the author has contributed the greater part of the lyrics. Others who have helped in the musical composition are Paul F. Dickey and Samuel M. Shoemaker, while other lyrics have been written by James A. Garvin, Gerald J. Pyle and Charles Bates Hunter.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray. Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

MONEY WASTED?, NO!

It cost Everett Colby upwards of fifteen thousand dollars to find out that there were only about forty thousand voters in the State of New Jersey two weeks ago who were interested enough in his candidacy for the governorship to take the trouble to go to the polls and vote for him.

It was a costly test of popularity, but it develops that Mr. Colby supplied less than fifteen hundred dollars of the money. Mrs. Colby contributed a little more than twelve hundred dollars and other women gave generously to the cause.

And the conclusion to which we are forced is, that the campaign waged by Mr. Colby is a record of wasted energy and wasted money—Trenton State Gazette.

If we mistake not, most thinking people will take issue with the esteemed Trenton paper in this matter. Its premises are wrong and therefore the conclusion is wrong. Mr. Colby was not a candidate to test his popularity. His personality was not at stake. It was what he represented in the way of political ideals that was the basis of and justified his candidacy. What matters it if $15,000 or $15,000,000 be spent in waging the campaign so long as the cause be a righteous one? Money used in fighting for any cause in humanity's name is not lost; it is wisely invested and though there be temporary defeat or set-back, that money brings priceless returns ultimately for right will always triumph in the end.

The State Gazette's line of reasoning is that of the old school politician, the "machine" man, and the "boss." To their way of thinking, it only pays to put money into a campaign as "grease," to buy up the electorate and to win the election. And if that idea were accepted possibly Mr. Colby's campaign was "a record of wasted energy and wasted money." But to the right-thinking citizen, who believes in a real democracy and whose political thoughts and efforts are consecrated to the well-being and betterment of the great masses and not to the "special interests"—Mr. Colby's energy and money could have been spent in no nobler cause.

The battle led by the "Father of the New Idea" in the recent campaign is only just begun. Great achievements are not speedily accomplished. They are brought about only by perseverance, by devotion to the cause and persistent fighting until at last victory crowns the righteous efforts.

MEMORIZE IT.

Fifty years ago yesterday Abraham Lincoln delivered an immortal address on the occasion of the dedication of the National cemetery on the Gettysburg battlefield. On that scene thousands of noble men gave up their lives that "the union, one and inseparable, now and forever," should not die, and there Lincoln—the heroic President in the "days that tried men's souls"—made a brief dedicatory address that is known in every land where civilized man exists.

By direction of the State Commissioner of Education the high school and older grammar school pupils committed this great speech to memory and recited it yesterday afternoon in their class-rooms. Do you know it "by heart?" If you don't, wouldn't it be well for you to memorize it? The address was reproduced on the first page yesterday.

By way of suggestion to the Board of Trade—why not get to work and by organized effort do what you can towards the reopening of the Netherwood Hotel?

That poultry show closes on Saturday night. Don't miss the opportunity of seeing a really fine exhibition of prize fowl.

The merchant who doesn't advertise finds that ere long the sheriff does it for him. Yes, Mr. Storekeeper, you read this item and your customers as well as the customers you would have read it too. If your wares were advertised in our columns you would see your business grow.

Keep right on doing it for Plainfield for only by persistent and intelligently directed effort can we advertise the attractions and advantages of this ideal place of residence and business.

Charles W. Morse added his contribution to the bunch of lemons handed to William Howard Taft according to the confession made by the professor.

Now that he has made himself famous, why doesn't Huerta retire to the soft and simple life on the earnings he could get by posing for the "movies?"

Lawson Purdy, of New York, gave us some beautiful thoughts about taxation, but the real thing that bumped our craniums was the annual tax bill.

Isn't it about time that T. R. exploded? Haven't had him on first page for a fortnight, and all those cuts are going to waste.

The price of success is honest dealing plus advertising. The straight road is provided by the Daily Press advertising columns.

The contributing editor for Saturday's issue will be a prominent clergyman and he will dwell on a seasonable topic.

The country won't go up in smoke even if the United Cigars Store company has gotten control of the drug business.

Still More Bouquets.

GOING AHEAD.

Two or three years ago, Leslie R. Fort, a son of Governor Fort, and Ralph L. Morrow, purchased the Plainfield Daily Press, a newspaper that needed young blood to place it in the front rank of New Jersey newspapers.

The blood was supplied by these young men, who gave the people of Plainfield a daily publication that commanded their support and gave them a full return for their money.

Success attended the efforts of the publishers from the start of their venture. The managership rested in the hands of Mr. Fort; Mr. Morrow guided the editorial policy of the paper, and now we have before us a special edition of the newspaper, numbering forty-eight pages, rich with illustrations and literary features, that speaks in the highest terms of the ability of its publishers.

They call Plainfield a "City of Opportunity," and sing its praises to a rational tune that is sure to attract attention. The town has a population of thirty-two thousand souls; it is within easy reach of New York city; has prosperous manufacturing establishments, and has residential advantages that promise rapid growth for the community.

Messrs. Fort and Morrow deserve the success they have won, and we heartily wish them more of it.—Trenton State Gazette.

GOOD WORK, BROTHER.

A most interesting and comprehensive story of the achievements of Plainfield is contained in the forty-eight-page edition of the Plainfield Daily Press, which reached the News office this morning. The multifarious advantages of this enterprising city are carefully detailed in this special edition, which has for its slogan, "Do It For Plainfield." The management of the Daily Press is to be congratulated upon the manner in which this edition is gotten up, showing as it does, at a glance, the industrial, social, educational and religious activities of Plainfield. Thirty-two pages of this special edition are devoted to boosting the home city, which boasts to be "The Queen City of New Jersey." The historical section is most interesting, showing as it does the rapid rise and growth of the city and at the same time the wonderful strides forward the Press has made since it was first published in 1887. The citizens of Plainfield can justly be proud of this latest achievement and of the enterprise of their leading paper.—Paterson News.

DO IT FOR PLAINFIELD.

The Plainfield Daily Press on Friday last issued an industrial edition of forty-eight pages. The task of getting out such a large paper is as great as it is creditable. Plainfield is favored in having so enterprising a newspaper.

Its industrial edition is a thing of beauty typographically and the contents full of interest to the people where the paper circulates. The value of the edition to the city as an advertisement would run up into many thousands of dollars.—New Brunswick Home News.

A PRAISEWORTHY EDITION.

With an edition of forty-eight pages to mark its zeal, the Plainfield Daily Press, under its energetic editors, has appeared in a special issue to boom the city in witch it is located.

The rise of the Press has been as gratifying to Plainfield and its surrounding territory as it is to Leslie R. Fort and Ralph L. Morrow, under whose guidance the paper is conducted. The slogan they have emblazoned over their newsy columns is an admirable one: "Do it for Plainfield," and should appeal to the local patriotism of the increasing circle of readers.

With excellent views in half tone of the city's manufacturing enterprises and its principal points of interest, and with adequate descriptions of what the city's advantages are, the special edition has accomplished a highly presentable bit of work, and deserves all the compliments that undoubtedly will pour in upon the editors.—Atlantic City Review.

WILL ESTABLISH GYMNASIUM FUND

North Plainfield High School Parent-Teacher Ass'n Plan Money Raising.

CAMPAIGN TO FOLLOW

Idea Long Agitated by the Borough Board of Education Will Then Become a Reality—North Plainfield Schools Now Use Saengerbund.

The North Plainfield High Shool Parent-Teacher Association in the Somerset School yesterday afternoon appointed an entertainment committee to arrange for a play entitled, "The Hall of Fame," to be given at the Park Club by the North Plainfield school children, the proceeds of which will be devoted to establishing a fund for the erection of a hall for basketball and gymnasium work in the borough.

Such a movement has long been agitated by those interested in educational work in the North Plainfield schools and the Parent-Teacher Association has taken the work up with the idea of establishing it on a genuine basis. Heretofore the plan has been discussed by the North Plainfield Board of Education but nothing definite has been done in regard to the matter. F. I. Sill, one of the board members, has suggested the adoption of some sort of a motion which will establish a gymnasium fund at several of the Board meetings, but in each instance his plan has been the subject of strenuous opposition on the part of certain other members, although it is a well-known fact that other members of the board beside Mr. Sill favor such an idea.

The funds resulting from an entertainment such as the one proposed to be given by the school children will not be large but it is expected that they will be sufficient to start some real work along this line. Several members of the Board of Education have openly expressed their views on the subject and it is the concensus of opinion that a fund of this kind would find many ready contributors in the borough.

During the past two years the Borough Board has set aside $300 in its annual budget for the rental of Saengerbund Hall and recently the North Plainfield High School Athletic Association has introduced Friday night games followed by dancing These have been chaperoned by Principal Earley and the parent organization yesterday proposed the appointment of a committee to assist him in this work. It is planned to retain Saengerbund Hall until some other suitable place can be erected but it is a well-known fact that this place does not come up to the requisites of the board.

It was voted to furnish a pennant which will be awarded to the class in the North Plainfield High School which as the largest proportionate attendance of mothers at each of the regular meetings of the association. Following the roll call yesterday afternoon it was determined that Miss Ray's class yesterday boasted of the largest number at the November meeting and the first pennant will accordingly be awarded to that class this month. This is the sophomore class of the borough school.

A committee was appointed, to make a banner with the words: "North Plainfield Public School—1914" in the senior class colors to be held in that class' rooms and at the close of the present term it will be presented to the boy or girl winning the valedictory honors.

MOTHER FOLLOWS HER ACROSS GREAT BOURNE

Following the death on Saturday of Mrs. John Goodwin, of North Plainfield, and her funeral and interment in Middlebush on Tuesday, comes the word of the death of Mrs. Goodwin's mother Mrs. VanDoren, aged 96 years, which occurred in Jersey City on Sunday. Her funeral and burial will take place at Middlebush today.

Mrs. Goodwin was 75 years of age and prior to her death did not know that her mother was then dying. Rev. J. Y. Broek conducted Mrs. Goodwin's funeral service at the late home, and Rev. Mr. Thompson, of the Middlebush Reformed church, officiated at the latter place. He will have charge of Mrs. VanDoren's funeral today.

PERSONAL.

Dr. T. S. Davis, of Park avenue, has returned from a month's stay at Atlantic City.

Arthur L. Wills, of this city, has been spending some time at the Hotel Wolcott, New York city.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark A. Price, of Sanford avenue, will leave on Saturday for St. Petersburg, Florida, where they will remain until next May.

MRS. THEO. A. WOOD HAS PASSED AWAY

Well Known Resident Succumbs to Complications—Aged 75 Years.

Mrs. Theodore A. Wood, aged 75 years, died of complications yesterday afternoon at Truell Inn, following a long illness. She was born in New York city and was the daughter of the late Mrs. Margaret Brewster. Her father died when she was a child.

She married Theodore A. Wood, of Metuchen, and after the latter's death she returned to Plainfield about fifteen years ago. For the past eleven years she lived at Truell Inn. She was a communicant of Grace church for many years.

There survives a daughter, Mrs. Anna Powers of New York, and a niece, Mrs. Anna Miller, of Brooklyn. The funeral will probably be held at 11 o'clock Saturday morning at the home of Mrs. E. N. Erickson on West Eighth street, and the burial will be at the convenience of the family in Trinity cemetery, New York city.

CARLSTROM ALLEGED TO HAVE BEEN HELD

Local Ballplayer May Be the Central Figure in Court Proceedings.

What is alleged to be the "covering up" of a baseball player during the drafting season by the Lawrence team, of the New England League, is aired in the filing of a petition in the Suffolk (Mass.) Superior Court by Joseph P. Sullivan, former treasurer of the Lawrence club. The player in question is Albin Carlstrom, who played shortstop for the Plainfield Central New Jersey League outfit following the close of the New England League season and who has played frequently with the local squad for several years.

In plain baseball terms, here is what Sullivan says happened in regard to the "sale" of Carlstrom:

"Carlstrom, star of the Lawrence team, was wanted by that club for the following season. In order to avoid possible drafting, the Lawrence club sent Carlstrom to the Boston Americans in a 'wash' sale, to be returned just a short time later at no cost to either club. An exchange of checks of similar amount is all the financial arrangements connected with the deal."

A stub on the check book of the Lawrence club is one of $500 to John I. Taylor, then president of the Red Sox. This was, he says, the $500 returned to the Red Sox club for the fictitious sale.

Carlstrom was sold to the Red Sox again at the close of the present season and has since been purchased by the Montreal International League club. It was at first believed that Manager Bransfield had been given nothing more than first choice on Carlstrom's services if he failed to make good at the Hub, but the name of the local boy was recently printed in the list of players reserved by the International League and it now seems that his rumored sale to the Canadian club is a certainty.

BIG SHAKE-UP IN Y. M. C. A. QUINTET

Captain Brynarski Sprang the Inevitable Last Night in the Weekly Practise.

Captain Albert Brynairski, of the Y. M. C. A. basketball team, put his charges through their regular week-end drill in the association gym last night, assisted by Henri Welle, of the Y. M. C. A. physical department corps. Several new men are being tried out by the association leader and it is quite probable that at least two new faces will appear in Saturday night's lineup against the Elizabeth Y. M. C. A. outfit, which is coming here padded up to win the contest from the locals who have succeeded in winning from the Betsytowners during the past two seasons by close margins.

Besides Brynairski, Glover, Hetfield, Buckle and Farmer were on the floor last night. Moulton and Gavett are out of the city this week and were unable to be present. The team last night lined up as follows: Buckle and Hetfield, forwards; Farmer, centre; Brynairski and Glover, guards. As Hetfield is playing with the Plainfield High School quintet it is not likely that he will get into the game Saturday night unless an emergency arises where his services will be necessary and Moulton will probably be used as the other forward.

A stiff passing and shooting drill was held last night and all of the players are in the best of condition for the big game Saturday night. Brynairski is trying to strengthen his team as much as possible prior to the clash with the New York University five on Thanksgiving.

with running the government, with the result that these young men are being trained without the proper moral influence.

"How Shall We Hold Our Sunday School Scholars for the Church," was presented by Harry Gee and Rev. Dr. G. Franklin Ream, of Westfield. The former emphasized the importance of the home influence, which is an auxiliary to the church, while Dr. Ream argued the subject more from the point of a minister and pedagogue.

Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, District superintendent, presided at last night's meeting, making a few remarks by way of comment on the addresses. Samuel Bingaman, secretary, reported that a majority of ministers in the district had attended the all-day conference. During the evening resolutions were adopted thanking the church officials for the use of the edifice and the women for serving dinner and supper.

EXPOSURE OF ALLEGED TAX INEQUALITIES IS PLANNED

Asbury Park Nov. 20.—Members of the Northwest Asbury Improvement League are planning a campaign of publicity to show up alleged unequal tax assessments throughout the city. They contend that big property interests are not bearing their proportionate shares of the tax burden, and declare they are particularly incensed at alleged favoritism in assessments on James A. Bradley's land.

Condemnation commissioners last week awarded Mr. Bradley $17,500 for a plot desired by the State as a site for the armory of Company H of this city, which is assessed this year for $4,500. This is one example being cited. Another example cited is the Wellington Hotel property, listed for sale with local realty brokers at $40,000 and assessed for $12,000. Members declare that cottage owners are assessed from seventy-five to eighty per cent.

UNION LABOR MEN ARE ORDERED OFF THE JOB

Carpenters, plumbers and electricians working on the Roth building in the course of construction in East Front street were ordered off the job this afternoon by William Lunger, the local walking delegate, because Elmer D. Wilson, a Newark electrical contractor, who was working with his men on the building, refused to pay a fee of $1 for a local union card. This is the Newarker's version of the trouble. He says he has been a union man in good standing for over five years in Newark. Wilson further claimed that he offered to pay the money, under protest, if he receive da receipt for the same, but said the delegate refused to accept it under these conditions.

Masons employed by William C. Smith, continued working.

Rev. Samuel O. Kuhn, of New York, will conduct the services to be held tomorrow night and Saturday morning at the Young Men's Hebrew Association building on Grove street. The membership is now thirty-four. The committee will meet again next Wednesday night.

TO ARGUE PASSAIC GAS RATE APPEALS DEC. 1-2

Trenton, Nov. 20.—The Court of Errors and Appeals has set aside Monday and Tuesday, December 1 and 2, for hearing argument upon the appeals involving the order of the Board of Public Utility Commissioners in fixing a ninety-cent gas rate in the Passaic zone supplied by the Public Service Gas Company. The announcement to this effect was made at the conclusion of a conference of the court Tuesday afternoon.

During the call of the calendar earlier in the day the counsel involved in the cases requested that extra time be allowed for the argument because of the importance of the subject matter involved. The court expressed a willingness to accede to this request, announcing subsequently that two days would be devoted to hearing the argument if necessary. This was the maximum time requested by counsel. The principal argument will probably be made by Frank H. Sommer, representing the Public Utility Commission, and Frank Bergen, of counsel for the Public Service Gas Company. The particularly important question which will be taken up is the valuation of the gas company's franchises.

BAYONNE BUSINESS MEN WANT A BRIDGE AT ELIZABETHPORT

Jersey City, Nov. 20.—Many Bayonne business men who are interested in having a bridge built over Newark Bay from Bayonne to Elizabethport, together with some Hudson county officials, are planning a dinner for the near future, at which the project will be discussed at length. It is expected a movement will be started urging the building of the structure.

The theory upon which the Bayonne committee is working is that, inasmuch as the Central Railroad of New Jersey is about to build a new bridge across the bay, the railroad company, Hudson and Union counties, the Public Service Railway Company and the State Road Department may all be induced to help defray the expense of the desired bridge.

ELIZABETH MAJORITY FOR CIVIL SERVICE IS 1,667

Trenton, Nov. 20.—The Civil Service Commission yesterday received from City Clerk Kenah, of Elizabeth, certified returns of the referendum vote on the adoption of civil service in that city. The result showed that the act was adopted by a majority of 1,667. The total vote stood 3,223 for the act and 1,556 against it.

Aggregate results of the various referendums on civil service since the adoption of the law in 1908 show that it has been indorsed by twelve counties and municipalities as follows: Essex, Hudson, Mercer and Passaic counties, Newark, Jersey City, Paterson, Trenton, East Orange, South Orange, the Newark school district and Elizabeth.

The total vote cast in favor of the act has been 140,773, and the vote against it 83,204, making a majority of 57,569, in favor of the act. This is declared by the commission to be impressive demonstration of the esteem in which the civil service law is held in this State.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

The Housewife's Daily Economy Calendar

FRANCES MARSHALL

Making Use of Fads.

When fireless cookers first were put on the market some of us invested in one and used it day and night for months—then relegated it to the attic.

When paper-bag cookery became the fad a couple of years ago we cooked everything from soup to sausage in paper bags and let our pots and pans grow rusty. Then we forgot about paper bags, or used them to light the fires with.

Once our cupboards were stocked with aluminum, and when that wore out we threw it all away and got granite—or else we threw all our granite away and got aluminum to take its place.

Perhaps none of these accusations is justified. But certain it is we all become interested in fads, and turn to them as to something perfect. We thought that the fireless cooker would do all our housework for us. When we found that it left us something to do we gave it up altogether. When we found that some things taster better cooked out of paper bags than in them, we threw our paper bags away. When we found that granite chipped or that aluminum got so hot it burned our fingers, we gave that up in despair.

The whole trouble was that we were looking for perfection. When we did not find it we were discouraged.

Take the Best.

The real way to get the best out of changing fads in household things as well as in dress and fancy work, is to take the best out of them and discard the rest.

Take the fireless cooker, for instance. It is hardly worth while to cook green corn in a cooker. Many persons think that meats can be much better browned in an oven than in a cooker compartment. So cook meats in the oven, and when you are cooking them cook vegetables and desserts in the oven, too. And cook vegetables that require only a short cooking on the top of the stove.

But use the faithful old cooker for making soup stock and for cooking dried beans and peas and cereals of all sorts. It can do this sort of cooking to perfection and far more economically than any other sort of heat producer—or, rather, conserver,—can do it.

Fish can well be cooked in a paper bag. There is no fishy cooking dish to clean after it is cooked. No one likes to wash a fishy broiler. Moreover, the fish can be cooked in a bag without breaking.

Certain vegetables can be cooked to perfection in the bags. Spinach, for instance, thoroughly washed and then thrust in a buttered bag, sealed and put in the oven, comes out invariably tender.

If granite cracks and peels off under your care when it is heated use some other sort of cooking dishes But don't give up the clean, white granite measuring cup, or the granite mixing basin, which is light to lift and easy to keep clean. And if aluminum heats to a point that burns your fingers, only use it for dishes that are always handled with a holder or cloth. Have a frying pan and skillet of some material which does not heat through so quickly.

Some Cookery Suggestions

CHOICE CHICKEN RECIPES.

DAINTY and unusual ways of cooking chicken are suggested as follows:

Smothered Chicken.—Take a young chicken, dress it, removing the breastbone so that it will lie flat. Place it breast down in roasting pan, add butter, salt, pepper and one cupful of hot water. Bake until brown and tender.

Tempting Combinations.

Corn and Chicken Scallop.—Take one can of corn and enough cold cooked chicken to make one and one-fourth cupfuls. Chop separately. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter; blend with three tablespoonfuls of flour, one-third teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper. Then add slowly one and a half cupfuls of hot milk and stir until smooth and thick. Butter a baking dish, fill with alternate layers of corn, chicken and sauce, sprinkle with buttered crumbs and bake.

Oysters and Chicken Fillet.—Take half the breast of a raw chicken, cut it into two fillets. Trim them neatly and beat them out. Place a raw oyster in the center of each. Roll each fillet in a piece of buttered white paper and place in a buttered saucepan. Cook them in the oven for about ten minutes. Serve with a little cream or plain white sauce.

Highly Seasoned Dishes.

Supreme Chicken.—Take cold roast or boiled chicken and cut into slices. Lay it in a shallow dish and pour over it olive oil in the proportion of a tablespoonful of oil to every heaping cupful of the chicken. Let it lie in this half an hour. Cook together a tablespoonful each of butter and flour until they bubble. Turn on them half a pint of cream and half a teaspoonful of onion juice. Add two cupfuls of chicken and what oil has not been absorbed. Let all get hot and season with a saltspoonful of white pepper, half a teaspoonful of salt and a quarter of a teaspoonful of celery salt.

Deviled Drumsticks.—Take the legs of chickens and singe them slightly with a little alcohol lighted on a plate. Put them into a stock pot and boil for ten minutes. Remove, cool thoroughly and season with salt, pepper and a little cayenne, Worcestershire sauce and some ground mustard. Now pass one after another through sifted breadcrumbs and broil them over a moderate fire for four minutes on each side. Arrange on a hot dish, pour over them hot sauce, sprinkle with a little chopped parsley and serve at once.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Mr. Sandman And the Playful Fairies.

The Sandman on His Rounds.

IT was 7 o'clock, and Jack and Evelyn were in their two little white beds. They were very sleepy, for they had been playing hard all day, but they wouldn't admit that to daddy, because they were afraid he wouldn't tell them his usual bedtime story. Of course they occasionally did fall asleep before the end of the story, but then that was an accident. Daddy saw without being told how sleepy they were, so he decided to tell them the story about old Mr. Sandman, who lives forever and who sees every night that all the little children in the world rub their eyes and then crawl into their snug, comfy beds. So daddy began: "Once upon a time the queen of the fairies was getting ready for a very fine ball. She told all the little fairies that they must go to bed as soon as she left them, for even little fairies have to sleep too. But the little fairies were very wide awake and also feeling very naughty, and they thought it would be such fun to play for hours and hours, for the queen would not be home until midnight. So they began to plan the game they would play first. They decided on 'hide and seek,' as it would be such an especially wide awake game.

"They romped and raced about, hiding in this flower and that, stealing under the leaves, dodging behind the trunks of the trees and playing such jolly pranks that old Mr. Owl, who was roosting in the branches of an oak, laughed right out loud. Did you ever hear an owl laugh? Well, it is a very queer sort of laugh, and the fairies had to stop their game and laugh at Mr. Owl's laughter.

"But Mr. Sandman never goes to balls or parties of any kind, for he knows how hard children have been playing all day and how much they need their cozy beds at night. He had just started on his nightly rounds to see that all his little friends were going quickly into the land of sweet dreams when he spied the little fairies playing on the mossy grass in the moonlight. He said to himself, 'Here is some work for me to do,' and without being seen he waved in the air his magic nightcap. One by one the little fairies yawned and rubbed their sleepy eyes, and the game became quieter and quieter. Finally one very brave fairy—for it's brave to admit you are sleepy,—said, 'I must lie down on this bed of moss; I am so sleepy.' Soon all the little fairies followed suit and dropped off into the Land of Nod to dream of the other fairies that live in all the countless stars.

"When Mr. Sandman saw them all sleeping soundly he winked his right eye, which meant he felt very pleased, and said to himself, 'Now I must see that some more of the little tots have pleasant dreams.'" And, sure enough, daddy looked and saw that Jack and Evelyn had fallen fast asleep.

The Daily Press for Thursdays containing the column on Mother's Work will be sent by mail for one dollar a year, in advance.

The thirteenth annual meeting of the New Jersey Congress of Mothers was held in Brunswick Hall, New Brunswick, Friday and Saturday, November 14 and 15. Over two hundred women from all over the State, from the smallest hamlet to the largest city, were present, and listened to interesting and inspirational addresses by Miss Myra Winchester, Prof. George H. Ropes, Mrs. William Douglass Shipman, Miss Sarah Eskew, Miss Charlotte Herchner, Christopher Gregory and H. W. Foster. Especially noteworthy was the address given Friday afternoon on "The Mission of Parents and Teachers in the Home and School" by Mrs. Frederick Schoff, president of the National Congress of Mothers. The sessions were presided over by Mrs. Augustus H. Reeve, the president of the New Jersey Mothers' Congress. No small measure of the success of the congress was due to the grace and skill with which she announced the subjects for discussion and introduced the speakers.

The committee of women representing Bayard, Washington, Lincoln, Highland Park, Lord Sterling, Rutgers Elementary, Livingston, and Nathan Hale schools, of whom Mrs. D. W. Cooper, of New Brunswick, was chairman, are to be congratulated on the success of the thirteenth congress and commended for the delightful hospitality extended to all the delegates An unusually profitable session was that of Saturday morning, when delegates from sixty-six Mothers' Associations and Parent-Teacher Associations of the State gave their yearly reports and told of the many helpful things they had accomplished in the past year.

Plainfield was very well represented by the following persons: Mrs. C. H. Munro, president Plainfield Mothers' Association; Mrs. William Sandford, member State Board of Managers; Mrs. G. Stuart Simons, president High School Parent-Teacher Association; Mrs. J. Hervey Doane, president of the Stillman-Franklin-Whittier Parent-Teacher Association; Mrs. George O. Stevens, president of the Irving-Jefferson Parent-Teacher Association; Mrs. Andrew Kenney Mrs. Matthew Ewart, Miss Lynden, Miss Sydenham, Miss Kiernan, Mrs. Judd Stewart, Mrs. Herbert E. The Roselle Parent-Teacher Association held its annual meeting on Tuesday, November 18, when the reports for the year were read. A report of the Mothers' Congress was also given, after which Mrs. Warner the president, introduced Herbert E. Parker, general secretary of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., who gave an address on "The Educational Value of Motion Pictures." The Roselle Parent-Teacher Association operates the only motion picture show in the borough of Roselle. It is given in the Town Hall.

The North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association held its regular bimonthly meeting on Wednesday, November 19. An account of this meeting appears on another page of this paper.

There are two thousand one-room schools in the State of New Jersey.

Principal L. D. Deyo, of the Roselle Park Public Schools, called together the parents and teachers of Roselle Park this afternoon at 3 o'clock to listen to a talk given by Mrs. William M. Sandford on "Parent-Teacher Associations and What They Are Doing In New Jersey."

Practical Fashion Hints

By Alice Gibson

FOR indoor wear and the simpler afternoon functions there is nothing more attractive than the figured silks or crepons which were so popular during the summer and are still very fashionable. The simpler designs are suited to these fabrics as the material itself is sufficient trimming.

Two and three tiered skirts are smart and becoming, and the surplice blouse is one of the most graceful things that can be worn.

7620 shows a three-piece skirt slightly gathered at the top; the lower part is tucked to give the appearance of a triple skirt. A skirt on this order is much easier for the amateur than one in which the sections have to be joined. A line of tucks trims the blouse and finishes the sleeve.

The dress closes in back and there is an inset chemisette which may be made of net or lace. This design can be made in size 36 with 5¾ yards of 36 inch material and ½ yard of all-over lace or net. The pattern is cut in five sizes, 34 to 42.

This Is a Perfect Pattern

Be sure to state right size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust for dimensions.

It may be obtained by filling out the coupon and enclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin to the Pattern Department of this paper.

A Complete Alphabet of Script Letters for Marking Gifts.

At this time of year, when making gifts, one so often wishes to have two or three letters to use either singly or in monograms. An initial or monogram embroidered on a gift always lends to it a personal note. There are many useful articles that one can easily make or buy in the shops, at little cost, such as laundry bags, traveling cases, jewel bags and writing cases, which, if embroidered with an initial or monogram have a value far exceeding the cost.

Pattern number 14230 includes a complete script alphabet in one-inch, two-inch, three-inch or four-inch size. Any two or three-letter monogram can easily be formed by placing these initials so that they slightly overlap. First stamp the last initial, then place the middle initial and stamp that, last the first initial should be arranged so that the spacing will be even and stamped.

The one-inch letters are appropriate for marking guest towels, jewel bags, handkerchief bags, pin-cushion covers, men's shirt sleeves and small Christmas novelties. The two-inch letters are suitable for small towels, bureau-covers and they may also be used on desk-sets and book covers. Three-inch letters are made for marking large towels, sheets, pillow-cases, tea cloths and other large dining room linens, while the four-inch letters are for marking sheets, table cloths, bed spreads, blankets, laundry bags and baby carriage covers.

Pattern 14230 can be supplied to readers in 1, 2, 3 and 4 inch sizes for 10 cents.

A VISIT TO THE ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS CLINIC

The reporter strolled down Madison avenue on Wednesday night and stopped at the new clinic of the Anti-Tuberculosis League. A number of patients were waiting for the doctor in the little ante-room. Everything was brightly lighted, cheerful and freshly papered and painted. Things looked sanitary and businesslike.

The nurse was busy preparing for the consultations, making up records and giving an air of brisk and wholesome cheer to the occasion. Behind the reception room were two smaller rooms, one for consultations and another for the examinations. The most conspicuous object in the consultation room was a card-index. In this card-index is the history of every case of tuberculosis in the neighborhood. A diagram of chest and lungs and ribs, marked with spots and symbols, records the condition of the patient at each visit and tells the story of his progress towards recovery or his decline.

In a little while the doctor came in. His energetic and confident air diffused an additional and conspicuous atmosphere of encouragement. He greeted the reporter cheerily and the nurse ushered in the first patient and the patient's wife. They were Russian Jews of early middle age. The man is a driver whose life had been saved by sanitarium work. He had wasted away until he weighed only 115 pounds. Then he was sent to a New York State sanitarium and stayed there a year. By obedience to directions and under skilled treatment he gained 40 pounds and was discharged in comparatively good health. His was not and is not a clearly defined case of tuberculosis, but his mother died of it, and he is seriously predisposed to the disease. He now weighs 165 pounds. He has a wife and five children. He keeps his health by outdoor work and by faithful attention to every rule laid down for him. He realizes his responsibilities. His wife was bright and cheerful, except at the time she told the reporter of the five children at home. Then the tears came to her eyes.

This man was examined, pronounced free from unfavorable symptoms and told to report in four weeks. The wife said: "In Russia when have tuber-clos no hope—just die."

The second patient was a good-looking well-grown brown-eyed girl. Her mother, also a foreigner, explained her recent loss of weight and strength and many other symptoms The child was examined and her lungs pronounced clear at present. Her trouble was diagnosed as of the throat which might induce tuberculosis if not carefully nursed and cared. The doctor and nurse agreed that this would have been a typical case for the open-air school—if the school had not been full already. The child was given a simple prescription and told to keep out of doors as much as possible and to return in a week.

In the interval between patients the reporter was told of a pupil of one of the public schools who had been brought for examination and was found to have a serious case of tuberculosis, and of another with such an acute case of heart trouble that the diagnosis and immediate treatment probably saved her life.

Another patient was a man who has long been under the care of the League. His is an advanced case which needs careful watching. An industrious and worthy man with six children, making a fight for his life. He works at an outdoor trade as much as he can. At intervals he becomes reduced in strength, but with rest and treatment recuperates and again takes up his labors.

Still another patient with well defined symtoms was examined, found to be making satisfactory progress, was prescribed for and told to return in a week.

Some of the patients paid nothing; one put down quietly double the ordinary voluntary fee. All were prescribed for and took their prescriptions to the druggist who compounds them for a nominal charge or no charge at all, as the case may be.

If there were little merit in this work, would you expect that doctors who labor hard would compete with one another to give their services to it two afternoons and two nights a week Would you expect that one who was not looked for would come around and look in for fear something had happened to keep his colleague away? Would you expect doctor and nurse to meet every comer with a beaming smile and a powerful boost just at a time when most of us are dropping into easy chairs after dinner and giving ourselves up to the luxury of thinking how tired we feel?

The reporter was humbled. The cheerful but submissive bearing of the patients and their confidence in their advisers were good to see, but the good fellowship of the doctor and the quick understanding and helpfulness of the nurse were an object lesson in the practical Christianity which means service. And when all had been seen and counseled and sent away comforted, these strange samaritans seemed so fresh and ready as to be almost hungry for more. Truly, the reporter thought, there must be something about this work which must be well worth doing, if it makes people so happy to do it. And what a country to transform to men and women like these the oppressed and forlorn of a land whose sick have "no hope—just die."

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

PLAINFIELD WON IN SECOND HALF

Delayed Rally Produced Two Touchdowns and Victory for Locals.

PLAYED ON WET FIELD

Final Score 14 to 6—Peacock Kicked Both Goals—Steady Line Plunging in Last Half Sewed up the Game—Field a Pond of Mud.

By coming back strong in the second half yesterday afternoon at Somerville, Plainfield High School defeated Somerville High School by the score of 14 to 6. The field was covered with mud from goal to goal and in some places was under a few inches of water. Despite the fact that the field and ball were slippery there were but two fumbles made which gave the ball to the other side and these were both committed by Somerville.

Plainfield won the toss and went straight up the field to Somerville's fifteen yard line, where it was held and Peacock dropped back for a drop-kick. It was at a bad angle and the ball went wide. The ball was put in play on the twenty-yard line and Somerville carried it to the forty-yard line before they were forced to kick. Plainfield again carried it to within striking distance, and two forward passes were tried but both failed. Peacock again tried a drop-kick but it was a poor attempt and the kick went short. The ball was again put in play on the twenty-yard line, and on big gains by Robson, the ball was carried to Plainfield's forty-yard line, where the whistle blew for the first quarter.

By steady line bucking and a shift formation the ball was carried to Plainfield's ten yard line. Here Robson was sent around right end for a touchdown in the corner of the field. The ball was carried out to the fifteen yard line, but it was wet and the angle difficult, so Kershaw failed to kick the goal.

Plainfield again received, the ball going to Rosenson, who carried it to his forty yard line before being downed. Somerville's line held strong and Gavett was forced to kick, Kershaw catching it and was downed on his thirty yard line. Robson and Norton made some big gains which brought the ball to mid-field when time was called for the first half.

Somerville chose to kick, the ball going to Herrman, who was tackled on his thirty yard line. Plainfield started in with a jump and every time the ball was put in play a back went through for a big gain. The ball was steadily carried up the field to Somerville's five yard line, where they showed a little resistance; but it was too late and Rosenson carried the ball over between the goal posts. Peacock kicked the goal.

This time Butler kicked off to Robson, who was downed on his thirty-five yard line. Somerville made a good attempt to come back, but Plainfield's fighting spirit was up and Kershaw kicked to Greene, who dodged several tackles and carried the ball to his forty yard line, where he was downed when time was called for the third quarter.

Again Plainfield started off with a jump and before Somerville woke up the ball was on their five yard line. Greene went through left tackle for three yards and then Snyder carried the ball over through the same hole. Peacock kicked the goal.

Butler again kicked off and Somerville carried the ball up the field on steady gains till Plainfield held at mid-field. Kershaw kicked and the ball rolled to the side lines, hitting a Plainfield substitute standing there. Somerville claimed he interferred with the ball and Plainfield was penalized fifteen yards, the ball going to their five yard line. Gavett kicked out of danger and time was called.

GOV. TENER ACCEPTS LEAGUE PRESIDENCY

Will Remain Governor But Refuses to Draw Salary Until Term is up.

Philadelphia, Nov. 20.—John Kinley Tener, Governor of Pennsylvania, accepted the presidency of the National Baseball League, which was tendered to him in Harrisburg, yesterday afternoon by four of the eight magnates of the organization, but which did not become public news until last night in this city, when the executive of the Keystone State at the Bellevue-Stratford confirmed his acceptance of the offer.

The Governor will hold office for four years among the baseball men, during which time it is understood he will draw a yearly stipend of $15,000. He is to have absolute charge of the affairs of the league and, being a baseball man of practical experience years ago, he should find little to puzzle him in the maze of baseball politics.

The Governor, however, in accepting the presidency of the league, made it be understood that he would not resign as executive of the State and that he would not give his undivided time to the league until his term as Governor expired. During his time as Governor he will not draw any salary from the National League, although he will be fully entitled to such, but this was one of the conditions which he insisted upon.

When asked what salary he was to draw down as the president of the league, the Governor said: "I do not believe that the public is interested in that, and besides it is a private matter between the league and myself."

The Governor also wished to impress upon the public the fact that he is not to draw a cent in salary from the league until he becomes actively engaged in his official baseball duties. During his time in office as Governor of the State John A. Heydler, secretary of the National League, will attend to the principal duties pertaining to the president, such as supervising the umpires and looking after the routine affairs at league headquarters. This will give Mr. Heydler one year as "boss" of the league, for Mr. Tener will not step out of public office in Pennsylvania until January 1, 1915.

FREAK GOAL WON OVERTIME GAME

North Plainfield High School Opens Scholastic Schedule With a Great Victory.

VANMATER THE STAR

Final Score Was 20 to 19, Following Twelve Minutes of Overtime Play—VanMater Jumped the Ball Into the Basket.

Playing the first scheduled game of the season with a High School team yesterday afternoon the North Plainfield High School quintet defeated the Kearny High School five at that place in a game that might well have been a championship struggle. It was necessary to play an extra period of twelve minutes before the borough finally pulled out ahead by the score of 20 to 1. The game was played on a cement court that was very long and narrow with an extra low ceiling, exactly opposite to those that the local boys are accustomed to.

Believing that they could repeat the performance of last year and win easily by some such score as 35 to 7 the Kearny boys started in to show up their opponents but were taken by surprise when the "Canadians" held their own throughout the contest.

The referee called numerous fouls on both sides and Captain Burner dropped in three in succession and Dunning added two points to the boroughites score in the first half. In the first period the Kearny boys fared better and with the advantage of their own court made five baskets and one foul, making the score 11 to 7. N. P. H. S. tied the score in the first part of the second half.

The game resolved itself into a battle for time when Kearny made a field goal and thus took the lead "Duke" Van Mater came to the rescue and tied up the score again only to have Roberts toss another in. The contest then proceeded for about three minutes without any scoring and the game progressed until there was but one minute to play with the home team two points to the good.

At this point the boroughites' signals came into prominence. The ball was put into play in center and Dunning topped it off to Van Mater who knew exactly where Conroy should be and threw it back of him without looking. Conroy was on the job, received the ball and made the basket tying the score. Time was called a few seconds later and the score stood 18 to 18. In accordance with the rules the game proceeded until one team might get two points.

The struggle now became of the fiercest nature, necessarily becoming rougher and keeping the officials busy calling fouls. As two foul goals would win the game for either side each penalty might have meant defeat but as all of the ten players were very excited the free scoring was exceedingly light. Each team had two fouls called but neither of the men chosen to win the game succeeded in adding points to their score. Then came the hard blow for the local boys. Dunning was called for hacking and Roberts shot the foul getting a large advantage. Fully three-quarters of the time the ball was at Kearny's end of the floor and it was at such times that Van Mater and Abrams showed their great guarding ability. Time after time "Duke" would hold two men at bay for a few seconds until Abrams or Burner came to the rescue. Two more fouls were tried by each team and Kearny failed to win the game.

During one of the few times that North Plainfield had the ball at her end Van Mater managed to get a held ball decision from the referee. The toss-up was about ten feet from the basket and Van Mater hit the ball squarely into the basket and after circling around twice dropped through with the winning two points.

Kearny's mainstays were Roberts and Laub, who made seventeen of their team's nineteen between them. Van Mater was North Plainfield's star all around player, while Conroy showed up fine and Abrams and Burner put up a stellar game at guard.

WATCHUNG KNIGHTS TAKE TWO MATCHES

Belleville Pinners Wiped the First But Were Swamped in the Final Pair.

Rolling in a Knights of Columbus League match on the Belleville alleys last night the Watchung Council of this city, took two out of the three matches from the Belleville pinners, winning the final two contests with apparent ease. The Queen City pin smashers failed to strike their winning stride in the first session and after a hard fought game the Belleville representatives came out on the longer end with a three-pin advantage.

The Plainfielders began to show their opponents up in the middle tussel, however, and when the contest ended possessed an advantage of fifty-two pins. This one-sided victory was followed by a forty-pin lead and the visitors left the floor with the big end of a two to one score tucked under their belts.

Although the rolling was consistent for the most part on both sides, not a single individual passed the double century mark and few approached the honor score. Captain George Taylor, of the Plainfield quintet, hung up the high score of the evening when he pulled down 188 pins in the third contest, second honors in this department going to Hacker, of Belleville, who rolled 186 in this same game.

FEDERALS WANT MARQUARD.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 20.—Pitcher "Rube" Marquard of the New York Giants was approached here yesterday by an agent of the Federal League, asking if he would consider a proposition to join that league. Rube turned it down, stating that he expected a contract from Secretary Foster this week which he intends signing for next year.

GOLF AS A NEW CURE FOR INSANITY.

Golf as a cure for insanity is the latest prescription of the doctors. The New Jersey State Hospital for the Insane at Morris Plains, N. J., has decided to establish a nine-hole course for the benefit of its patients. Less than a year ago four holes were built, and golf became so popular that arrangements have been completed for a links of nine holes.

Some of the players show all the symptoms of being good golfers, one of them having a score of 36 for twice around the four holes, plus one more, making nine in all. Dave Honeyman, the Forest Hill professional, holds the record for nine holes, 34.

During the winter the other five holes will be laid out. Doctors at the hospital have decided that the out of door exercise obtained by the patients through golf is highly beneficial, thus the decision to have nine holes, which, in time, probably will be extended further.

CITY FRESHMEN GET A BAD TROUNCING

N. P. H. S. First Class Quintet Ran up a Big Score in Saengerbund Hall.

The first interscholastic basketball struggle of the season between the city and borough High School athletes was played yesterday afternoon in Saengerbund Hall, when the freshmen teams of the two schools met in a close and exciting contest. The familiarity with the floor was a great help to the borough lads and they held their opponents at bay throughout, although the city "freshies" threw a scare in the second half.

"Dan" Denny was again the star for the winners, making four field goals in the first half, and he also figured in the tip-ups and did some excellent guarding.

In the first half the Plainfield team only succeeded in making three points, a goal by McDowell and a foul by Alpaugh. In the second period, however, they started to play a real game and it was only the borough boys' big lead in the first half that saved them from defeat. In this half the city team ran up a total of eleven points, making the final score 25 to 14. For the winners, Captain Force and Daniel Denny made all the points, while McDowell was the mainstay for P. H. S.

HARVARD DEFENSE THAT WILL MEET THE YALE BULLDOG IN LAST 1913 GRIDIRON BATTLE

Harvard beat Princeton by the small score of 3 to 0. It had been expected that Harvard would win with a very heavy score in her favor. As it turned out, luck had as much to do with the victory as football skill. Excepting the last quarter Princeton outplayed the Harvard team steadily. Harvard's single field goal came after one of those unexpected catastrophes that so often decide the outcome of football games. Slipping in the mud, Law, of Princeton, was slow in getting away a punt and Trickley broke through and blocked it. The ball rebounded far toward Princeton's goal line and Captain Storer recovered it. This gave Harvard a chance for a field goal. Trickley scored.

BRUNSWICK TO PLAY LOCAL SCHOOLBOYS

Plainfield and North Plainfield High Schools on That Team's Schedule.

Plainfield High School, North Plainfield High School, Westfield High School and Bound Brook High School are among the opponents scheduled to meet the Brunswick High School basketball players during the coming season according to the schedule issued by Manager Chester A. Redshaw yesterday afternoon. Last year the Brunswick players used the Christ church court which is unusually small for basketball competition and the manager has been scouring the town for a better playing place for this season's games.

There are a number of large courts in that town but most of them are too expensive for the schoolboy athletes to charter. It is likely that Brunswick hall will be secured for the season, although no definite plans have as yet been announced.

The schedule:

Jan. 3—Bayonne High at New Brunswick.

Jan. 11—North Plainfield High at North Plainfield.

Jan. 17—Red Bank High at New Brunswick.

Jan. 21—Bound Brook High at New Brunswick.

Jan. 24—Roselle Park at Roselle Park.

Jan. 31—Plainfield High at New Brunswick.

Feb. 4—Westfield High at New Brunswick.

Feb. 6—Princeton High at Princeton.

Feb. 12—Curtis High at New Brunswick.

Feb. 14—Red Bank High at Red Bank.

Feb. 18—Bound Brook High at Bound Brook.

Feb. 21—Rutgers Prep. at New Brunswick.

Feb. 23—Bloomfield High at Bloomfield (pending).

Feb. 28—North Plainfield High at New Brunswick.

March 7—Roselle Park at New Brunswick.

March 14—Bayonne High at Bayonne.

March 21—Plainfield High at Plainfield.

WATCHUNG COUNCIL LEADS THE LEAGUE

Local Pinners Are Tied With Montclair for Top Rung Honors.

K. OF C. LEAGUE STANDING.

	W.	L.	Per.	H. S.
Watchung, Plfd.	4	2	.666	886
Montclair	4	2	.666	780
Star Bethlehem, New.	2	1	.666	799
Elizabeth	1	2	.333	955
Belleville	1	3	.250	691
Olive Branch, New.	1	5	.167	711
Newark	0	0	.000	000
Bayley, Eliz.	0	0	.000	000

A clean sweep for the Watchung Council pinners at Belleville last night would have meant undisputed possession of the first place rung in the Knights of Columbus League standing but the one game dropped by the Queen City representatives has caused a tie with the Montclair knights, each team having won four and lost a pair. Plainfield tops Montclair in high score, however, and that is some consolation to the local wood splitters.

Newark and Bayley have yet to roll their initial games but otherwise the league is now running along in full swing and the entrants are rolling regularly scheduled matches. As far as percentage is concerned, the Star Bethlehem team, of Newark, is on a par with the Plainfield and Montclair quintets, but has rolled one less series than the top rung occupants. Elizabeth's high score of 955 still remains untouched, Plainfield having come the nearest to bursting the bubble.

DEXTERS WILL PLAY HERE THANKSGIVING

Holy Cross Will Try to Retrieve Defeat Administered Three Weeks Ago.

Perth Amboy's pride, the Dexter football team, will make its second appearance of the season here on Thanksgiving Day afternoon to take the place of the Fordham College team, which will be unable to appear here on that date.

The Dexter eleven is the only team that has conquered the local warriors in two years and the game three weeks ago resulted in a score of 12 to 0, both of the Perth Amboy aggregation's scores coming in the first quarter before the locals had gotten up steam.

WITH THE BOXERS

Milwaukee promoters are trying to arrange a match between Packy McFarland and Jack Britton.

Young Corbett has been engaged as referee and boxing instructor at the Canadian A. C. of Montreal.

Champion Willie gathered the tidy sum of $10,000 for beating Leach Cross. Leach got $4,211, and all he had to do was to stop Willie's wallops.

Dr. McKenzie, of the University of Pennsylvania, will try to arrange boxing tournaments for students of Columbia, Yale and Pennsylvania Universities.

FOOTBALL NOTES

"Tad" Jones is in New Haven and will help get the Blue's quarterbacks right for the Harvard game.

Captain Metevier, of Holy Cross, probably will play no more football this season because of his injured leg.

"Tack" Hardwick, of Harvard, is a natural all-around football player and should be as valuable at end as in the backfield.

Harvard will need more than 28,000 seats to fill all the demands for tickets for the Yale game in the Stadium, November 22.

Fordham has lost Jim Butler, the star tackle. He will be out of the game for the balance of the season on account of a fractured ankle.

Cornell which has fared badly at the hands of Harvard and Michigan, will make a supreme effort to "come back" and beat Pennsylvania.

The 25th reunion of "Pa" Corbin's 1888 Yale team was held in New Haven recently. The record of the old team shows that it scored 698 points and was not scored on.

Dartmouth football coaches are in great demand this season. More than a dozen gridiron instructors from Hanover are in charge of college and leading school elevens throughout the country.

"MAC" SAYS

How wondrous are the ways of fate. Last year Kearny trounced North Plainfield High School in the opening tilt of the basketball season and this year the Canadians come back with a wonderful victory attached to their belts.

"Duke" Van Mater was slightly off-form in the opening game. He only rang up enough baskets to win the game for the boroughites. That's all.

"Ronnie" Conroy also experienced an off-day. Wonder what these two forwards will do when they round into form.

And the little North Plainfield High School students didn't return to Queen City soil until 1:30 o'clock this morning. Is that the way you enforce your training rules, Collier? Shocking!

North Plainfield has evidently decided to run a basketball team and not a hospital. We haven't heard of any more accidents among the High School ranks during the last few days.

While it is rather early for predictions we have a hunch that Leals will be in the running this season in that Interscholastic League.

Captain Peacock and his Plainfield High School warriors are gaining an enviable reputation as mudslingers. On several occasions this season the schoolboy pigskin chasers have come out victorious after battling in a sea of mud.

It was not until the teams got the mud stirred up on the Somerville field yesterday afternoon that the P. H. S. boys struck their stride and pushed a pair of touchdowns across the whitewash.

Ralph Smalley is hitting in midwinter form. The North Plainfield High School baseball captain is daily sighted in the business of unearthing favorable diamond talent and he is optimistic of the boroughites' chances on the baseball field this year. Smalley has several surprises to spring at the first practise.

The report that Bob Fitzsimmons has re-entered training on his farm in Dunellen has caused several young pugilists who exist in that little village to seek the cyclone cellar.

Not that it makes a world of difference but what has become of that basketball squad that was being herded together by Burnett Brodziak here some weeks ago?

Rattling the skeleton—what has become of that Y. M. C. A. swimming team, Scoop?

It is rumored that the two local Holy Cross football teams will meet in the near future, probably on New Year's, to decide which is rightly entitled to the handle now coveted by each.

N. Y. U. WILL PLAY SECOND GAME HERE

Metropolitan Collegians Open Their Season With Pratt Institute Saturday.

Coach Parkinson, of the New York University basketball team which will play here against the Y. M. C. A. Thanksgiving Day night, has a large squad of men working out under his direction in the university gym every afternoon and the team is fast rounding into form for the opening game which will be played next Saturday night against the Pratt Institute five. The game on the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. court is the second match of the season for the New York college athletes and will be followed by games with Columbia, Annapolis, Georgetown, Washington, St. Lawrence, College of the City of New York, Swarthmore, Williams, Army and Seton Hall.

The squad will be increased after the opening game and before the game played here by several football men who will strengthen the combination considerable. Wesleyan had to be dropped from this year's schedule because of the failure to arrange a suitable date.

WAWAYANDA WON GAME BY MARGIN OF ONE POINT

One foul goal tossed from the penalty mark by Snyder was all that separated the Wawayanda and Iroquois teams of the Y. M. C. A. junior department Indian League at the conclusion of the scalping fracas yesterday afternoon, the Wawayanda tribe being victorious by a count of 9 to 8.

Snyder was the laurel bearer for the winning side while Angerbauer was credited with every one of his team's eight points, totaling up a quartet of field goals during the contest.

FRANK BRUGGY PAINFULLY HURT IN BASKETBALL GAME

Frank Bruggy, left fielder for the champion Plainfield baseball club of the Central New Jersey League, who has been playing a star game for the Gloversville team in the New York State Basketball League since the last ball game staged on Parker Field, was the victim of a painful accident in a game against the St. James Triangles at Brooklyn last night.

There are several pillars on the St. James' court and Bruggy, while dodging an opponent, collided with one of the these, inflicting a deep gash in his forehead and splintering the bones of his nose. He will be out of the game for some time to come as the result of this accident.

INDIANS USED MANY PLAYERS BUT WENT DOWN TO DEFEAT

One field goal comprised the sum and substance of the Omaha team's score in the game played with the Sioux Indian Leaguers in the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon the final score being 10 to 2. Tomlinson and Henwood did the scoring for the winners while Jim Brownlee had the honor of caging the defeated team's lone basket.

FLYNN ROLLED FIRST BALL ON NEW ALLEYS

Patrolman, Thus Honored, Knocked Over Lucky Seven on Elks' New Shutes.

Four new bowling alleys were formally dedicated in the Elks' new home on Watchung avenue last night, a unique program having previously been drawn up by a committee for the opening event. The numerous members of the local lodge were supplied with tickets and following the drawing which took place last evening the holder of the lucky number was invested with the privilege of rolling the first ball down the new shutes.

Patrolman Charles Flynn was the holder of the honorary coupon and although he was given free scope on alley number one, with all of the ten pins set in position, the best the "copper" could do was to topple over one wooden man. F. C. Brunner, of Westfield, sent the initial ball spinning down alley No. 2, Harry Blimm shot the first one down No. 3, and Frederick Sandford played the same part in dedicating alley No. 4.

All of the rollers provided no little amount of amusement for their fellow club members and the opening event was an auspicious one. In the event of one of the first balls bowled going into the gutter of the alley the player was liable to a fine of $5 but the bowlers took particular pains not to let the big marble go over the edges and as a result no "V" was collected.

Following the opening events a prize bowling tournament was held and the winners of the various awards were Chief P. S. Kiely, Francis J. Blatz, Harry VanEmburgh, Fred Ivamy, Andrew Billings and Edward "Banty" Bennett, all rolling a score of thirty on three balls. On the roll-off Kiely bowled 26, Blatz 24, VanEmburgh 22, Billings 21, Ivamy 20, and Bennett 6. The first three received German Elk steins.

John Campbell was awarded a stein for rolling the lowest score, his tally being five pins. Three hundred contestants rolled in the tournament, which was concluded shortly after 12 o'clock.

SALVATION ARMY CONGRESS.

New York, Nov. 20.—The largest gathering of Salvation Army officers ever assembled in the United States greeted General Bramwell Booth, the head of the Salvation Army of the World, yesterday when he called to order the Salvation Army congress which has been called together for a session of five days for the purpose of considering many important problems growing out of certain changes in the existing conditions of the United States and out of the tremendous growth of the American branch of the Army, which is now far greater than any of the other branches. Commander Eva Booth, who is the head of the Salvation Army in the United States, and nearly all the prominent officials from England who accompanied their chief to this country. Many questions of great importance to the Salvation Army in the United States are to come up for consideration and it is believed that an effort will be made to introduce new business methods which have become necessary owing to the enormous growth of the organization.

125 IN ATTENDANCE

Rev. Drs. Eaton, Strong and Tinker Chief Talkers—A. M. Harris Toastmaster—Dr. Buchanan's Orchestra Provides Music.

Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the church, Rev. Dr. Charles R. Tinker, for five years chaplain of the Tombs, New York, and Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York, were the speakers at the fifth annual banquet of the Men's Conference Bible Class of the First Baptist church, held in the lecture room of the church, last night. Arthur M. Harris, superintendent of the Bible School, was the toastmaster. There were about 125 members and friends of the class present. While the dinner was being served, Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan's orchestra, known as "The Bunch," gave a popular program of music.

"Gumption, Grit and Grace," was the subject chosen by Dr. Strong for his remarks, and after saying that he congratulated himself upon being pastor of such a church and such a Bible class, he turned his attention to his subject. Gumption he characterized as the initiative, which was a necessary factor in the life of every successful man. Mexico, which is now having so much trouble, the doctor declared had been kept back because of a lack of gumption.

With gumption, the speaker linked grit, which he said was stick-to-itiveness, without which no man would succeed, and then to those two qualities he added grace, which he said was Godgiveness. The speaker emphasized the importance of prayer with Bible study, and he urged that the men of the church seek to acquire not only gumption, grit and grace, but to apply themselves to prayer and Bible study.

"A Chaplain's View of the Man Behind the Bars," was the subject chosen by Rev. Dr. Tinker for his talk, and at the outset said that he wanted to usher his audience in a new world, the prison, which is a human world. "When you know that one-tenth of all your taxes, including rents, is expended to preserve law and order, to maintain an efficient police system, you can realize the importance of the subject," said Dr. Tinker.

The speaker then described a visit through the tombs, telling interesting incidents as he conversed with different prisoners, which included a boy of eighteen years charged with petty larceny, a cold-hearted and cold-headed prisoner charged with murdering his wife, which crime the prisoner treated with utmost indifference; another prisoner, very courtly and reticent, who insisted on declaring his innocence of a charge of stealing $70.

"As a rule," said Dr. Tinker, "a man in the Tombs is guilty of the charge against him, but it is not always possible to convict him. One of the best ways for a man to keep out of prison is to marry a good wife and raise a large family of children. What is the right view to take of the criminal?

"There are college men today who believe in capital punishment for the criminal. In the early days there were countless crimes punishable in that way, but society today brutalizes itself in its treatment of the criminal. Then there is the sentimentalist who believes that every man is like himself, which view I take exception to, for the criminal is not just like the rest of us.

"It is the middle view, the one of the individual, which should be considered. There are no two prisoners alike. There are as many criminals as there are men. There are people who are inclined to over-judge and those who will under-judge. Some of the best men I have ever known have been in the Tombs."

Dr. Tinker then told an interesting story of how he saved a man, John Gill, from the electric chair. He was charged with murder in the first degree the result of a murderous assault on him, the case was a "frame up" and Dr. Tinker said that he knowing the facts secured one of the best lawyers in New York and got the accused off with a two and a half year sentence. He was released the other day and is now an earnest, devoted Christian. The lawyer received $25 for his three months' work.

"I have the names and address of seventy-two ex-convicts who are earnest Christians," continued Dr. Tinker. "The county jail is the abomination of our times. It is an incubator of crime. I would favor putting the prisoners to work eight hours a day and paying them a wage whereby their families will derive a benefit or themselves when they leave jail. Make the sentence indeterminate so

SOME ADVANTAGES OF THE FOLK DANCE

It Appeals to Intellect and Provides Wholesome Exercise.

The opening of a class in folk and figure dances at the Washington School makes comment upon the movement appropriate at this time. Social workers throughout the country have a confident belief that the undesirable, exaggerated modern round dances are merely a fad of the moment. Folk dances, as their name implies, are the traditional dances of the different peoples, and like most things that are worthy have stood the test of time. Many of them were introduced into this country by the girls' branch of the Public Schools Athletic League of New York in 1905. Since then their use in America has spread to all the playgrounds everywhere. Unfortunately, however, the girls alone have been taught and two misconceptions have consequently developed in the regular mind: that the dances are for children and those children the girls. But who would make the mistake of thinking the French minuet a dance for girls alone? What gallant of sixty years does not recall with pleasure when he danced the Sir Roger de Coverly, called by us the Virginia Reel? What Irishman's blood does not stir when he hears the music of the Lilt?

The advantages of the folk and figure dances are many. In the first place they have an intellectual appeal. A careful instructor will explain the historical significance of each dance and interpret it to show how the dance itself bespeaks the inherent characteristics of the people from whom it originates. After understanding the meaning of a certain dance, the pupil's intelligence is further stimulated while in the very act of dancing, because he must put his mind on the musical measures in order to develop the intricate figures properly. A second great advantage in folk dancing is that it affords a fine opportunity for wholesome exercise with bodily movements dependent upon thought to execute them. There is no objection to this form of rythmic activity in Protestant countries of Europe where our American round dance does not prevail. The third helpful factor in these dances is that most of them are the expression of a joyousness which we work-a-day Americans appreciate less and less. We do not play for play's sake. Most of our leisure time is not spent in actual recreation but in idle, passive amusement. When Europeans have a festive time they enjoy it fully. Any dancer who enters heartily into the spirit of a folk dance has an emotion of true joy that many Americans never know. Finally, the social value of a widespread use of these dances cannot be over-estimated. The public recreation movement is an excellent means of amalgamating the varying elements of our complex society. Let each nation learn of beauty from the people of other countries and America becomes a real "melting pot" for the making of a glorious new race.

PLAN TO REORGANIZE INTERBORO REALTY

Bondholders Meet Tonight When a Report Will Be Presented.

The bondholders of the Interborough Realty Company will hold a meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at 200 West Second street, when there will be a report from a committee concerning the company's affairs and efforts will be made to raise money with which to get the company out of the hands of the receiver. Steps will also be taken to re-organize the company.

There are about seventy-five bondholders in this vicinity representing from $30,000 to $40,000 worth of bonds. The company went into the hands of the receiver about July 1 last, and former Postmaster Wilcox, of New York, is the receiver. It is believed that if the bondholders will get together the company can be put on a sound basis. There is a large equity above liabilities and the mortgagees only want the interests and taxes paid. The property is covered with a mortgage for $180,000 and they feel it is a safe loan and perfectly willing to let it remain.

BUTT OF CIGARETTE CAUSES $800 BLAZE

Fire, which is thought to have been caused by a butt of a cigarette thrown into a bunch of oily rags in one of the rooms of a four-family house at South Plainfield resulted in about $800 damage this morning. The dwelling was occupied by Polish people and the fire drove them all into the street.

The Middlesex Volunteer Fire Company responded quickly and succeeded in saving the house. The loss of $112 in a pocketbook which was placed in the tick of a mattress caused great excitement among the members of one family. It was found later.

DUNELLEN TRADE BOARD'S BANQUET

Senator Pierce, Judge Daly, Mayor Viehmann Among the Speakers.

MAYOR CLARK THERE

Union County's Senator Tells of His Efforts to Get a Grade-Crossing Elimination Bill Enacted and Also Discusses Taxation Plans.

Speeches humorous and serious held the attention of the diners last night at the elaborate third annual banquet at the Dunellen Board of Trade at Stryker's Garage, in Norta avenue, the borough. To Dunellenites the address of State Senator Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford, was of vital interest. He spoke of the efforts he and others had made to pass a grade-crossing elimination bill in the New Jersey Legislature and said that their efforts would be crowned with success at the next session of the lawmakers. The Cranford man also told of his efforts directed to secure equalization of taxes throughout the State. Other speakers were former Mayor George A. Viehmann, of New Brunswick, vice-president of the New Jersey State Chamber of Commerce; O. Simmonds Dickson, of Irvington; Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., of North Plainfield; Judge Peter F. Daly, of the Court of Common Pleas of Middlesex county, and Dr. Thomas J. Hogan. William P. Deering, president of the Dunellen organization, ably acted in the capacity of toastmaster.

In beginning his remarks, Senator Pierce commented on the loss of life caused in the operation of railroads. He said that statistics covering a period of the last twenty-four years show that a railroad employe in the United States is injured every seven minutes and he asserted that the ravages of war are a comparison to the operation of the railroads in this country. The speaker scored President Wilson when he was Governor for vetoing the grade-crossing bill two years ago and said by that act the executive had deferred progress in the direction of grade-crossing elimination for one year. He added that this vetoed act was taken in general from the Connecticut laws, which have proven worthy and have been approved by the Supreme Court of that State.

"Last year," said Senator Pierce, "an untried measure was passed and signed by Acting-Governor Fielder; that law is now the subject of litigation as to its validity and I, as a lawyer, know that it will take at least five years to settle the matter. In the meantime we will be standing still and our efforts will be fruitless, unless this winter I can succeed in having a measure, that I will propose, passed."

Senator Pierce explained here that section 4, of the act signed by Mr. Fielder, when acting Governor, states that when alterations, etc., to propery are needed for grade-crossing improvements, alterations, or elimination, the owners of said property must make the change at their expense. The speaker said this was unconstitutional because he said the law distinctly states that all property owners should be reimbursed for loss of land or buildings through condemnation proceedings, or mutual settlement, to make possible the improvements.

Speaking on taxation, the Senator said the burden does not fall equally at the present time and cited Asbury Park property as an illustration, asserted that the small property, including cottages, etc., were assessed at seventy per cent of their full value, whereas the business and hotel property were assessed at but thirty to fifty per cent of their true worth. This condition, he asserted, exists generally throughout the State. He recommended that the taxing matter be placed in the hands of a trained body of men, with an inferior officer to be known as the State supervisor; a permanent assessor in each county responsible for the equalization of taxes in the various districts and a man in each municipality to look after the interests of the respective townships, boroughs and cities. He said the men employed in these capacities should be paid a salary that would enable them to make a business of the work and to earn a decent livelihood. In closing, Senator Pierce stated that the tax commission would present bills embodying these features, at the next session of the Legislature and urged that all Boards of Trade and other civic bodies send their representatives to Trenton to advocate the passage of the measure.

Judge Daly described Dunellen as a typical American town minus the influx of foreigners, but he strongly urged that the foreign laborers and imigrants who contribute so much to the success, prosperity and advancement of the country, should not be looked down upon, but said they should be assisted in attaining for

REV. MR. NASH SAYS HE'S NOT IN COMPANY

Minister-salesman Asserts He Is Not Connected With Monaton Concern.

Taking its facts from the news columns of the New York York Sun, considered by most newspapermen as always accurate and reliable, the Daily Press published a story yesterday regarding an investigation of the Monaton Realty Investment Company stating that Rev. Dr. Charles E. Nash, of Watchung, a real estate operator, figured in the concern as a sales agent. When inquiry was made over the telephone to Dr. Nash's home before the article was published, a woman said that the minister was not at home and also stated, in answer to a question, that he was employed by the Monaton Company.

Dr. Nash said today that the Sun story was incorrect and that he had not been connected with the Monaton Company for two years. He denied selling any stock to fellow ministers. Dr. Nash, however, refused to sign any statement for publication.

RECEIVER REFUSED FOR MOTOR COMPANY

Injunction Against International Concern Dissolved and it Will Continue.

Word was received today by the Saurer plant of the International Motor Company, to the effect that the Court of Appeals in New York has reversed the decision of the Supreme Court, removing the injunction secured by the minority stockholders and denying the application for the appointment of a receiver.

The decision, it is said, allows the company three years in which to meet its loans and permit it to pay its regular bills and to raise money with which to purchase materials for carrying on the work of the plant. It is further said that the decision will not compell the company to put up a cash bond which the minority stockholders sought in their complaint to the court.

It was semi-officially stated today that the company will continue to maintain a policy of retrenchment for the present. Saurer and Mack trucks are still being made and repair jobs are being made for the third concern in the company, the Hewitt branch. While there are now about one hundred men employed at the local plant, it is said, that the force will be enlarged within a short time as the orders are received. It is said that there now is a sufficient amount of work on hand to keep the plant busy for many months to come.

LOCAL ICE CONCERN BUILDING NEW HOUSES

A large gang of men commenced work this week rebuilding the Plainfield Ice and Supply Company's ice houses at Watchung, which were destroyed by fire last summer. The new structure will be somewhat larger than the old one, the dimensions being 125 feet square and forty feet high. The work is being superintended by Andrew Wilson, a member of the company, and the building will be ready for the housing of the coming season's crop.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MRS. HENRY C. RANDOLPH

The funeral of Mrs. Henry Clay Randolph was held at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. Frank French, 25 Washington avenue. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends, and Mrs. Randolph being especially fond of flowers, there were a great many tributes.

*Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trin*ity Reformed church, was in charge of the service, reading the Scriptures and making a brief address. He was assisted by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church, who read the Scripture and offered prayer. Mr. and Mrs. Edmund D. Young sang, "Face to Face," and "Saved By Grace," the last named hymn being a favorite of the departed. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the pall-bearers were L. W. Randolph, Fred Vallentine, Frank W. Jones, Whitfield French, James Headley and Herbert Runyon, the last two named being nephews of Mrs. Randolph.

ENDICOTT FARMS GETS SPERRY CUP

The Chief Award of the Big Poultry Show Goes to a Plainfield Man.

As a grand finale to four days of judging the poultry experts who have been selecting the best birds at the Great Quality Poultry Show being held this week in the City Market wound up their work this morning by awarding the Sperry cup, the principal award of the exhibit to the Endicott Farms. This trophy was offered for the best display of birds and the unusual amount of local interest attached to the Endicott Farms' exhibit makes the decision a popular one among the bird fanciers.

During the first half of the week many awards have been given to the birds entered by the Endicott Farm and these birds proved to be the most consistent prize winners in the show. The Sperry cup, valued at $150, has been the subject of a large amount of comment on the part of those interested in the exhibit and the awarding of the trophy has been a feature looked forward to during the entire week.

The prize lists are now complete and the champion birds are tagged in a way that enables the spectator to distinguish them from other exhibits. Prominent among the winning exhibits are those of the Gertson Poultry Yards, owned by Harold Rogers and Arthur Denton, of this city. Out of nine entries credited to these proprietors eight were returned as winners.

During the show yesterday afternoon, Smalley Brothers, the local butchers, placed an order with the Wilburtha Farms for 200 Wilburtha capons to be delivered during 1914. These birds have not as yet been hatched. The Wilburtha Farms have won many awards during the week.

During the evening District Deputy William J. O'Keefe, of Plainfield, on behalf of the council, presented H. J. McAleavy with a gold watch in recognition of his service as grand knight for the past five years. The timepiece was suitably inscribed.

The council, through Mr. McAleavy, the toastmaster, presented to Thomas J. McLaughlin, of Jersey City, national warden, a silver loving cup in appreciation of his services to the council since its organization.

Congressman Allan B. Walsh, of Trenton, who was to speak to the toast, "Our Country," was detained and a telegram of regret was read. The speakers of the evening were Assemblyman Azariah Beekman, Mayor W. V. Steele; Father Scully, of Hampton. Music for the occasion was furnished by the Somerville Symphony Orchestra. The committee in charge of the arrangements comprised H. J. McAleavy, Ferd. Hoch, Lawrence O'Donnell and Arthur Swinton.

MARTINE IS OUT FOR A NEW TERM

U. S. Senator Says He Will Be a Candidate for Re-election in 1916.

WELCOMES A CONTEST

New Jersey's "Farmer-orator" Will Get in the Fight He Says in Reply to a Query at Washington Yesterday.

Washington, Nov. 21.—United States Senator Martine let it be known yesterday that he wants another term. He will be a candidate at the New Jersey Senatorial election in 1916—the first popular election of United States Senators in the State under the seventeenth amendment.

Announcement of Mr. Martine's intention was not given out by the Senator in a formal premeditated statement, but in answer to a query. His attention was directed to reports about the fight in 1916 and the prospects of various public men becoming candidates.

"Those stories give me a large measure of satisfaction," said the Senator, "because they indicate even at this early time that the race will be determined by the voters choice—by the primary system that I have advocated for many a year, and which is now an accomplished fact. Provided only that I am well, or that some other momentous condition crops up that before the time set that would bar me, I shall present myself as a candidate before the people."

MARTINE WILL BUY NO MORE PRESENTS

Senator Tells of His Troubles In Selecting Gift for President's Daughter.

In a letter to Al. Hoagland, giving permission for publication, United States Senator James E. Martine tells of his trials and tribulations in selecting a wedding present for Miss Jessie Wilson to be presented in the name of the United States Senate:

"I have bought the present for the President's daughter, costing $1,000. Evidently the world at large does not know that I have selected it for I am getting letters by the score from people wanting to sell me blankets, bed quilts "of their own weave," etc., at from $175 to $300, also old furniture.

"Just this moment comes a letter from the Far West, from a woman who tells me she is a born artist and that she has a painting of the Sea that for two and a half years she worked upon. The swell of the ocean is most realistic, but the 'great triumph' is the peculiar green that she has been able to give the water. Considering the great artistic merit of this painting and the immense amount of labor she has spent on it the price she has placed on the same, viz, $7,500, is very low. 'Oh, Senator,' she appeals, 'look upon it. I know you would give me your check for the sum at once.'

"I am through with buying presents; it's too much for me."

HIS BARN DESTROYED AND DAMAGE IS $500

Igniting from an unknown cause, the barn on the estate of William G. Mowrey, a carpenter, of 47 Jefferson avenue, North Plainfield, was burned to the ground shortly before 9 o'clock last night and the roof of his house, after catching fire was extinguished by the borough fire department.

When the fire apparatus arrived on the scene the fire was beyond control. Many farming implements were destroyed and the total damage is estimated by Chief McCullough at $500. A large quantity of hay was also burned and the blaze caused by this material could be seen for miles around. Lieutenant Fritz and Driver Hogan were commended for the way they directed the efforts of the call men.

that the prisoner can be released when in the judgment of officials it is thought best. As for the feeble-minded I would segregate them and treat them as I would the insane, and thus society would be benefitted."

Dr. Eaton, the third speaker, was given a cordial reception as the neighbor and friend of many present. He said that he had a special interest in the First Baptist church for the reason that it was grown on his farm, being dug out of a hole. Not being assigned a topic, Dr. Eaton selected "A Man's Religion" as his theme. He described this as a normal community, one where the people are not familiar with the depressing conditions of New York, where one has to be city-broken and where it is hard for one to possess serenity of the soul. You want good blood in your veins, breath deep and have a high sky line.

"This is a great church," said Dr. Eaton, "but you are in danger of turning away from the Voice to secondary things. The trouble is we have too big a machine for the engine. You cannot have power unless pastor and people work for a personal Saviour. One way to grow strong is to pray every day; not a long prayer, but to have that same communion with God that a man and his wife have when they love and understand each other and live in an atmosphere of prayer. No man can be strong unless he knows the Word of God and does something for Christ. Thus will you exert a strong influence and power for good."

George H. Batchelor, teacher of the class, made a few remarks in conclusion, praying that God might help each one present to fill the place He has put them in. Among the guests present was Rev. Dr. Price, a retired pastor of a Disciples church, who said grace before the dinner. Before adjourning a vote of thanks was given to Dr. Buchanan and his orchestra.

PARCEL POST TO NET $30,000,000

First Year's Earnings Will Be Twice Sum Estimated.

TOTAL INCOME $80,000,000

Result Seems to Justify Railroads' Contention That More Should Be Paid Them For Carrying Mail—New Bill Will Settle It—Readjustment of Pay Every Four Years Hitherto.

It has just become known in Washington that the profits to the government from the operation of the new parcel post system during the calendar year 1913 will be about $30,000,000. The new system became effective on Jan 1 last. It was estimated that the profits for the first year would be about $15,000,000, but the actual figures now in possession of postal officials convince them that the profit, instead of being $15,000,000, will be $30,000,000 for the first year.

This will be interesting news to railway officials, who have been contending that their roads were entitled to extra renumeration for carrying the mails on account of the operation of the parcel post. It was learned also from a reliable quarter that, even assuming that the contention of the railroads was correct, there still would have been a good margin of profit at the end of the calendar year 1913 after the payment of extra remuneration to the roads.

Gross Revenue $80,000,000.

If a parcel post adjustment were made along the lines suggested by some of the railroads, probably not more than $10,000,000 of this $30,000,000 would be due to the railroads as extra pay. The total income from the parcel post for 1913 will be around $80,000,000.

The whole question of railway mail pay—that is, compensation to the railroads for carrying the mails—is likely to be readjusted next year. Immediately after the meeting of congress in regular session in December a bill will be introduced providing for this readjustment. The measure is now being drafted. It will seek to establish an entirely new method of paying the railroads for carrying the mails and do away with the present archaic method of computing the payment to roads.

For some time members of the house postoffice committee have been considering the question of providing a new method of paying for mail transportation. They have been consulted in connection with the preparation of the new bill, as have also the officials of the postoffice department most intimately identified with mail transportation. The bill will be an administration measure.

Pay Readjusted Quadrennially.

Pay for carrying the mails is readjusted only once every four years. For purposes of the computation the country is divided into four grand subdivisions, in each of which the mail is weighed once every four years. This is accomplished in such a way that the weighing is done in one district this year, in the second district next year, the third district the next year and the fourth district the following year.

The mail is weighed for thirty days, and upon this basis a computation is made for an entire year, showing the average monthly amount of mail carried. When once made, this computation continues for a single road for four years, and payment is made accordingly.

The bill now being prepared will propose a new method of fixing the basis of payment. It will propose a radical change in the whole system of railway mail pay and a readjustment that is expected to be fairer to both the government and the railroads. The new railway pay bill also will take into consideration the paying of the railroads for carrying the parcel post matter and will seek to meet the complaints that have been filed by different roads, several of which were willing to throw up their railway mail contracts rather than carry the parcel post without additional pay.

CANAL TRAFFIC FORECAST.

Ships Passing by Long Route Will Not Be Fewer.

A record number of steamers passed through the Magellan strait in the ten months from Jan. 1 to Oct. 31 of this year, according to an official statement issued recently in Valparaiso, Chile. The traffic comprised 221 steamers from the Atlantic and 137 from the Pacific.

Many officials are of the opinion that the number of vessels using the Magellan strait will not be affected by the opening of the Panama canal and that Valparaiso will continue to be the principal port in the southern Pacific.

Arbitration Treaty With Denmark.

MO-JOs are the ideal after-dinner confection, a pleasure to the palate and a natural aid to digestion.

Dainty and white, they are a delight to the eye. They decorate your table, and when you get the exquisite flavor of mint, you smile with delight.

You are not spoiling a good dinner by supplementing it with something of doubtful character when you taste a MO-JO.

MO-JOs are white and clean through and through, the only chewing gum that answers this description.

Serve MO-JOs with your dinner and your guests will know that you know.

The name is not hard to remember, but should you forget it, simply ask for the dainty, white, clean gum.

PRESIDENT DRYDEN'S RULES.

Advice to Agents and Policy-holders—He Describes Those Who Drop Their Policies as Absent Members of the Insurance Family—A Warning of the Dangers.

In a well thought out article contributed to the Western Underwriter, Chicago, President Forrest F. Dryden, of The Prudential Insurance Company talks seriously upon the dangers to the public of the lapsing of life insurance policies. The Prudential has made and is constantly making a special study of this question and President Dryden's twenty-five years' experience in every branch of the company's work makes him an authority on the subject. After stating that the three chief reasons leading to the dropping of life insurance policies are "lack of funds, indifference and over-insurance," President Dryden says:

"Frequently the plea of 'no funds' is due to a desire to spend the money for something else, or to failure to apportion wisely even a limited income, so as to be ready for the premium notice when received. First impressions have faded, and the sense of relative values has disappeared. Here the work of salvage must be pushed. The agent must again etch deeply on the mind of the insured, and without offence, that the need of protection for the beneficiary still exists. He must burn into his client's conscience the fact that it is not the part of wisdom to indulge in any luxury or careless expenditure, or make any commitments which will jeopardize the payment of his insurance premium. The so-called necessaries of life are no more necessary to him than the imperative need of his wife and children for the protection which his policy will afford in the event of his death." This advice to agents then follows:

"The contract should be adapted to the needs of the applicant rather than to the scale of commissions. After a policy has been delivered, it is well to keep in touch with the insured. The personal equation is a vital factor, and a friendly interest tactfully exhibited from time to time emphasizes the family relation into which the policyholder has entered. No policyholder should be allowed to lapse his insurance until every attempt has been made, during repeated interviews if necessary, to protect his interests. If in spite of this he cancels his policy, he should still be considered a member of the insurance family, although temporarily away from home. Thus he should be visited at reasonable intervals until revival application is secured, and re-instatement of the insurance should not be retarded by any unreasonable restrictions.

"Every legitimate means should be employed to discourage borrowing on the policy and systematic efforts should be made to induce repayment of loans as quickly as possible, in order to restore to the policy its full value. Since only 6 per cent or 7 per cent of the loans are repaid and the lapse rate of policies upon which loans have been made is excessive, the importance of this matter is evident. Special attention should be given to every case of change in residence, in order that the policyholders' welfare and convenience may be conserved. In offices where enough men are employed to justify frequent conferences on methods, it is well to make the conservation of business one of the principal topics for discussion. Every influence should be exerted to prevent the surrender of an old policy in order to take out new insurance. Unfailing courtesy and consideration toward policyholders exhibited with convincing sincerity on every possible occasion will bind more closely the tie of insurance brotherhood in the interest of all concerned."

ALLEGED CAR ROBBERS MAY PROVE TO BE DEPOT THIEVES

New Brunswick, Nov. 21.—Three boys were committed to the county jail Wednesday, on a charge of breaking into and robbing a freight car at the Raritan River Railroad station at Sayreville. They gave their names as John Vitznifsky, Michael Kancny and Joseph Kosh. The latter is fourteen years old and the others over sixteen.

Chief of Police Henry Boyler also expects to charge them with robbing the station at Parlin last Sunday night and stealing several checks, which one of them is said to have tried to cash at the South Amboy National Bank.

The boys were found in the woods near Sayreville and in their possession was found canned goods, blankets, axes, a saw and other goods. Part of the property is said to belong to Samuel Leonard, of Sayreville.

Upon their being committed to jail by Justice of the Peace Charles W. Sedam, some objection was made by the jailer of taking Kosh because of his age, but he finally locked up the boy.

—Nine-tenths of the merchants would advertise honestly and frankly, whether or not that were the best policy. But the tenth one will always be wise enough to do so whether it is a principle with him or not.

GETTING PEOPLE TO CHURCH.

Probably the criticism of the professional evangelist made by Rev. Dr. Hannan, of Drew Seminary, at a Methodist conference the other night occasioned no great surprise for his views are undoubtedly shared by many who know of the stereotyped excitement-producing methods and tricks of those who make a livelihood out of this occupation. Not only did the distinguished professor criticize the methods but he questioned the net results. He advised that instead of bringing in one of the itinerant revivalists, that the members of the congregation show all possible energy and zeal in aiding their regular pastor to make converts to the Christian religion and to draw people to church services.

Dr. Hannan's plan is an excellent one. So is another that has been brought to our attention. It has originated in Connellsville, Pa., where "instead of importing evangelists to wake the people up," says a news dispatch, "the ministers of ten Protestant churches have decided to try advertising in an effort to stimulate interest in religion hereabouts." These wise clergymen have arranged to buy a quarter of page advertising space in each daily paper published in that city and the campaign of publicity is to be a persistent one. Attention will not be drawn to any particular church but to the churches in general. They are going to tell why it pays a man or woman to fulfill his or her religious obligations and they are going to do it in practical talks via printer's ink.

Often the Daily Press has emphasized the value of religious advertising. It will continue to do so for it believes that it is just as necessary for a church to offer salvation free to all as it is for a merchant to offer bargains through newspaper mediums. It matters not how big and prosperous a congregation may be any more than it does a mercantile establishment. The Park Avenue Baptist church is crowded at Sunday services, but the pastor, Rev. Dr. Maguire, knows that the best way to keep it crowded is by sane publicity and that may only be obtained by newspaper advertising.

Probably one of the luckiest men in politics ever dropping into Plainfield has been Calvin E. Brodhead, who removes next week to Scranton, Pa., and in consequence being compelled to resign two offices he holds at the present time. Brodhead made good as an Assemblyman and his services were recognized by the then Governor Wilson, who made him a member of the Union County Tax Board. Later, Mayor Stewart, Democratic county chairman, appointed him a member of the Plainfield Board of Education.

If the incoming Legislature wishes to perform a real public service—to do something worth while—it needs only provide for a commission to frame an entirely new election law and to pass the measure before it adjourns. The present statutes are full of weaknesses and contradictions. A simple and common sense law is what is needed.

The Special Edition.

WHAT THEY THINK IN NEWTON.

We are indebted to Mr. Leslie R. Fort, son of former Governor J. Franklin Fort, for a copy of the "Historical and Trade Supplement" edition of the "Plainfield Daily Press," a huge publication for a sprightly burg of 30,000 inhabitants, full to the brim with matters of an historical and commercial character. It calls Plainfield "The Queen City of New Jersey," and it calls it well. From a little hamlet of five thousand souls in 1869, it is now a city of a population of 30,000. Its business is conducted after metropolitan fashion; its streets are models of cleanliness, and its trade structures, its banks, and its great industrial houses have a citified appearance that warms the cockles of the hearts of its residents and quite magnetizes prospective investors. Plainfield has a lively Board of Trade. To this its rapid growth is attributable. Listen, men of Newton, what "The Press" says: "The day when the location of industries here was discouraged has passed, the property-holders and merchants realize that the factories, with their hundreds of wage-earners, are the best asset a city can have, and without them Plainfield would indeed become simply one of the many environs of the great metropolis (New York) twenty miles away." "The Press" (formerly "Constitutionalist,") was founded in 1867. The "Historical and Trade Supplement" edition says: "Such influential men of the day as James E. Martine (and others) regarded as political authorities were frequent contributors to its columns." Later it was changed from a Democratic to an independent Republican paper. Its president is former Governor J. Franklin Fort, with Mr. Leslie R. Fort treasurer and registered agent. The enterprising gentlemen are to be congratulated upon giving to Plainfield a paper of such uniform excellence and a special edition calculated to be of such great commercial value to the rapidly growing city. When the Herald gets out a residential, industrial and commercial souvenir edition it is going to copy after the "Historical and Trade Supplement" of the Daily Press of Plainfield, of Nov. 14, 1913.—New Jersey Herald.

A FINE EDITION

The Plainfield Press has shown much enterprise in getting out a creditable 48-page issue and the town has shown itself progressive in giving the project such ample support and recognition. The manager Leslie Fort, has put the Press in the forefront of small city dailies since he assumed control two years ago and we congratulate him and Plainfield.—Morristown Daily Record.

FROM TRIBUNE EDITOR.

From Willis Fletcher Johnson, chief editorial writer, New York Tribune:

"My dear Mr. Fort:

"I want to congratulate you, and through you also Mr. Morrow, on the splendid showing which the special number of The Press made. It was a publication of which Plainfield ought to be exceedingly proud. Indeed it would have been creditable to a city of ten times Plainfield's size.

"It is very gratifying to me to see the vast improvement which has been made in The Press under your management, and I sincerely wish yourself and the paper the greatest possible degree of enduring prosperity.

"Always faithfully your,
"Willis Fletcher Johnson."

W.F.J.-A.K.

BECOMING A LEADER.

The Plainfield Daily Press issued, last week, a special edition of 32 pages setting forth the commercial and industrial interests of Plainfield. It was handsomely illustrated and exhibited to a marked degree the enterprise which has been shown by that newspaper since Leslie R. Fort and Ralph L. Morrow took charge. The Daily Press is fast becoming one of the leading papers of Central New Jersey.—Somerville Uninist- Gazette.

HIGHLY CREDITABLE.

The most pretentious special edition of a newspaper we have seen in a long time was the "Do It For Plainfield" edition of the Plainfield Daily Press, issued last Friday. It was of 48 pages, 32 of these being in the form of an historical and trade supplement, which was a high credit to the printers' art. The edition reflects the spirit of the slogan "Do It For Plainfield." It goes a step farther—it shows "how they do it" in Plainfield. The special edition was a product highly creditable to the people of this model New Jersey city. Leslie R. Fort, a son of the former Governor, is manager of the publication.—Washington Star.

ONE OF THE BEST.

The Plainfield Press issued a very creditable special edition last week, devoted to the business interests of that enterprising city. Plainfield is fortunate in having such a well-edited and progressive newspaper as The Press to exploit its merits. Less than two years ago the Plainfield Press Company, of which Leslie R. Fort is the business manager, and Ralph L. Morrow, the editor, purchased the newspaper, and the new owners have been highly successful in making it one of the best of the New Jersey dailies.—New Jersey Mirror.

BY FAR THE BEST.

The historical and trade supplement issued by The Plainfield Daily Press is by far the best of the kind ever issued here. The typographical neatness of the same was perfect and it speaks well for the prosperity of The Press to be able to get out such an edition. Messrs. Morrow and Fort are to be commended for their ability to place before the public such an issue. As a reflector of the business life of Plainfield it is a boomer indeed. 'Tis efforts in this direction that advertise a town. Long life and prosperity to The Press.—North Plainfield Review.

FROM LOCAL MFGRS.

"Editors, Plainfield Daily Press.

"We have just had a copy of "Do It For Plainfield" special issue submitted to us and it is with pleasure that we note the thoroughness and painstaking care you have gotten out this edition.

GOOD FOR PLAINFIELD.

Acting on the motto "Do it for Plainfield" the Daily Press of that city got out a 48-page "industrial edition" last Friday that was certainly a credit to the paper and the city. Thirty-two of these pages were embellished with scores of half-tone cuts, not only fine in themselves, but printed in the very perfection of art and accompanied by interesting descriptive matter. Leslie R. Fort, so well known in Spring Lake, is business manager and treasurer of the Daily Press, and the edition bears witness to his hustling qualities.—Spring Lake Gazette.

A JOURNALISTIC TRIUMPH.

The splendid "Do It For Plainfield" edition of the Plainfield Daily Press has reached our desk, and we feel like praising our journalistic brothers of the City by the Hills highly for their notable achievement. Few town booming editions of papers that have been issued in this State for a number of years surpass it. It is not only a monument to the energy of the Press management and staff, but it indicates in no uncertain manner the solid nature of the city they serve, which can marshal such an array of industries and business houses as are depicted in the pages of the special.

There are thirty-two pages in the special historical and trade supplement, printed on good book paper, replete with excellent cuts and interesting writeups. It is a mighty creditable effort in every way.—Dunellen Call.

Talented vocalists of the First Presbyterian church are showing great interest in the organization of the Kornlimo Choral Class, many good singers having added their names to the roster. At Tuesday night's meeting this trend of popularism was again demonstrated when four new names were added to the membership list.

their children those privileges and advancement as the Germans, Irish and Scots had secured. "Do not scorn the Hungarian, Greek, Italian, Pole and other foreigners," he said. "What a glorious past they have had. They have suffered much—have made history—and if they were not good, they would not have that place in the world which they occupy today. In Dunellen we have that Americanism of blood and ancestry, but do not look upon those who are less fortunate. Ancestry is a beautiful thing and in this day of progress every man has to stand on his own feet, rubbing shoulders with men of all nationalities."

Continuing, Judge Daly reviewed the historic times of Middlesex county of old and the personnel of its citizens. He said he despised bigotry and declared that the country was at the present time undergoing a great awakening in politics.

Following Judge Daly's discourse, the diners rose at the request of toastmaster Deering, and drank to the success and happiness of the country and to the American flag. The National anthem was also sung.

Mr. Viehmann in an eloquent address urged the men to work together to get benefits for the borough and to make politics a second figure in the results that are sought. Mr. Dickson confined himself to telling humorous stories and jokes, and proved decidedly entertaining.

Those who arranged the successful event were: William P. Deering, chairman; Mayor-elect Ernest B. Latham, Dr. Thomas J. Hogan, Augustus F. Todd, James G. Walton, Edward H. Dean, Edward J. Dusel, Richard Ryan, Lewis Schneider, Lewis Churchill, Harry Williams, Harry Garretson, John P. Fenner and Arthur J. Hanley. About 200 diners enjoyed the event. The decorations consisted of American flags and red white and blue bunting profusely distributed. An augmented orchestra rendered a musical program during the serving of the dinner.

LOVE RECOVERING.

Roy Love, forward on the North Plainfield High School basketball team, who was seriously injured in a practise some weeks ago, is steadily recovering and it is now a matter of only a few days before he will be able to return to the game. The stitches were taken from the injured arm last Tuesday.

MME. ALDA DWELLS ON HER REPERTOIRE

Famous Singer Considers Verdi's "Otello" One of Her Most Difficult Ones.

When Madame Frances Alda sang in Boston, last winter, she told a representative of the "Christian Scientist Monitor" that she regarded the role of Desmona in Verdi's "Otello" as one of the most difficult parts in the repertoire of prime donne.

"Think of that finale of the third act," said Madame Alda, it never fails to win the applause of the house and to bring many curtain calls, and the love duet of his opera, is one of the most beautiful sopranos and tenor scenes ever written. There is nothing that excels it, except the love duet of "Tristan and Isolde."

FRANK LA FORGE.

"The role of Desdemona demands more repose than the leading feminine roles of most operas. Compare the singing demands of it, with such a part as Mimi, in Puccini's 'Boheme.' I sang Mimi at my first appearance this season at the Metropolitan Opera House. It is a mere child's play in comparison with Desdemona. There is a sympathetic quality in the roles of Mimi and Madame Butterfly that the public likes, but for beautiful soprano music, these roles are not to be thought of, with the part of Desdemona.

"In 'Otello' the soprano must sing, and must know how to sing. Operatic sopranos today do not study enough and do not sufficiently perfect their vocal technic. All lyric sopranos should be capable, for example, of executing runs and thrills. Even dramatic sopranos should be competent to perform them. There is too little attention paid to detail in singing today. The music of Massenet, Puccini, Strauss and Debussy has taken artists out of their exact habits of study."

Frank La Forge, the famous pianist, will act as accompanist at the concert and as an added attraction Gutia Cassini, 'cellist, will appear with Mme. Alda at the Plainfield theatre on Tuesday, December 2, under the auspices of the Musical Club.

And Now for the Christmas Stocking!

The Vast GIMBEL TOY STORE

Is Ready with the Most Wonderful and Fascinating Display It Ever Presented

Your first glimpse into this enchanting Toy Store sets you into perfect thrills of excitement.

It seems as though it were almost "the Night before Christmas," and that you could hardly wait a minute longer. There's so much to see on every hand that you hardly know where to begin.

In the first place, it's the biggest, the brightest and most superbly arranged Toy Store in New York today—with plenty of fresh air and room to get about in.

Then it holds the most remarkable display of Toys we have ever gathered.

There Is the Menagerie, for Instance the whole room devoted to every kind of animal that ever came out of the Ark, and some that didn't.

There are pink pigs and soft rabbits and woolly dogs and growly bears, and other beasts, from little to big.

From Germany come marvelous Wooden Toys that a fellow can really play with, such as a London motor 'bus, a New York motor truck, a big American train of cars, and the like. There is such as "Constructor," "Erector," and "Meccano," with which it is possible to build cantilever bridges, steel skyscrapers, dynamos, that the boy can wind for himself, and so on. There is including a Model American Residence, with electric lights and all the other comforts of home. And right opposite are all the things with which to furnish these houses.

A Whole Long Aisle of Interesting Demonstrations

More Than One Hundred Sorts of Dolls and nearly a thousand if you counted all the sizes. Seems as though they grow prettier and more bewitching every year. Many have brightly interesting character faces; some will stand any amount of knocking around, cheerfully, while others are very proud and haughty and must be very carefully treated. We have dressed a good many of the Dolls ourselves, and they are very lovely.

From the tiniest China Doll at a penny, to a big 40-inch Doll at $21, they run just like a flight of steps.

The Big Railroad Yard

will set every boy wild with delight, with its whizzing electric and mechanical trains. The clever Pusher Engine, which comes out of its shed, and helps the train that gets stuck on an up-grade, is particularly interesting.

But there's too much to tell about at one time. We haven't mentioned the Games, the Puzzles, the Toy Soldiers and their Forts, the Warships and Ocean Steamers and all the rest of the Toys that make this by all odds the most interesting Christmas Display in New York. But, be sure to accept this cordial invitation

Custom of Celebrating Thanksgiving Day A Very Ancient One

THE idea is prevalent throughout the United States that our Thanksgiving day is peculiarly an American custom of New England origin. This is true in part only. The general observance through many years of a set day on which to give thanks to Almighty God for his blessings has made the custom distinctively American, but its origin long antedates the settlement of this western continent, and we must look elsewhere for it.

The idea of Thanksgiving day goes back to remotest antiquity. It is a part of natural religion and is probably as old as the human race. In written records we have ample evidence that the festival was celebrated in connection with "the fruits of the earth" by the ancient Egyptians, the Jews, the Greeks and the Romans. Long before Luther's revolt in the sixteenth century it had been observed by the Christians, and after the reformation thanksgiving days were in frequent use by the Protestants, especially those of England.

In old Egypt when the harvest had been gathered it was the custom to observe a day of feasting and to lay offerings upon the altars of Isis, the goddess of agriculture. The Jewish festival was the "Ingathering," or the "Feast of the Tabernacle," mentioned in Exodus and other parts of the Old Testament. This was more particularly a thanksgiving for the fruit harvest, but as it came at the close of the entire harvest it probably was intended also as a general thanksgiving "for the bounty of nature" in the year that had passed.

In one way or another a thanksgiving day had been observed in Christian Europe for centuries before its celebration in New England. The early Christians kept such days as the bishops named then within their jurisdiction. On the continent and for a time in England it occurred at Martinmas, which was a day of feasting and drinking. Occasionally, too, civic authorities recommended the observance of some fixed day.

PREPARING A NEW ENGLAND THANKSGIVING DINNER.

To come down to later times many instances of thanksgiving days can be pointed out in England, especially during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. One legal and annual Thanksgiving day, because of the long time it was such, deserves special mention. After the traitors in the gunpowder plot had been tried and punished in 1605, it was ordered that because of their deliverance the English people should keep "the fifth of November every year as a public thanksgiving to Almighty God, that unfeigned thankfulness may never be forgotten and that all ages to come may yield praises of God's divine majesty for the same."

The prototype of our present Thanksgiving day is found in the harvest festival at Plymouth in 1621. The long winter that followed the establishment of the colony was so severe that less than half of the settlers had survived. At one time during the winter only Brewster, Standish and five other hardy ones were well enough to get about.

In the spring and summer that followed their fortunes improved, and by autumn they had cleared twenty-six acres and made it ready for cultivation. This industry, too, had been rewarded by a bounteous harvest. Now food and fuel sufficient for the needs of the approaching winter were laid in. Then Governor Bradford ordered a thanksgiving, the first in America. This first thanksgiving was not for a day only. It continued a week.

During the Revolution Thanksgiving day became national. All through the war congress annually set apart a day for thanksgiving, but after the "thanksgiving for peace" in 1783 there were no more until Washington became president in 1789. On Oct. 3 of this year, at New York, he issued a proclamation asking the observance of Thursday, Nov. 26, as a day for national thanksgiving. This was the beginning of the orthodox "last Thursday" that has since been named in presidential proclamations.

The members of Central Hook and Ladder Company were the guests at a smoker given in their honor by the West End Hose Company, at the latter's rooms on Doughty avenue, last night, and the boys had a great time. While the festivities were at the height the fire alarm sounded, and for a few moments the gathering was broken up only to be continued after the return from the fire, which fortunately was only a slight one. Prior to going to Louis Roller's, where refreshments were served in abundance former Chief W. D. Quick presented on behalf of his company, the "Hooks," three office's lanterns to the West End company. These were suitably inscribed, and are to be used by the foreman and his assistants when on duty. Mr. Quick, who was in a happy frame of mind, also presented some magnificent tin badges to the officers of the company as well as to Chief Norton and his assistants, on behalf of his company offered to provide life net, hose and other small articles that might be needed, if the Borough Council should fail in doing so.

A small blaze in the plant of the Cott-a-Lap Company shortly after 9 o'clock last night called out the fire department, but fortunately the room in which the fire was discovered was equipped with automatic sprinkler sand there was little for the firemen to do when they got there. The blaze was in a room over the engine room, among a number of packing cases, but was extinguished before a great deal of damage was done.

Herman F. Moosbrugger, president of the State village for epileptics at Skillman, underwent an operation on his throat at the Post Gradue hospital, yesterday afternoon, and word was received here that the operation was a perfect success, and he hopes to return home by tomorrow evening.

COMPLIMENT FOR PRESS AND SCHREINER BROS.

Another evidence of the publicity gained for Plainfield by the special historical and industrial edition of the Daily Press which appeared last Saturday has come from from an unexpected source. Schreiner Brothers, the druggists at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, have received a letter from one of their wholesale houses, which proves that the special edition gained careful attention even in a busy out-of-town office. The letter follows:

Dear Sirs: We are just in receipt of the historical and industrial issue of the Plainfield Daily Press, and we note the extended notice given to your store, and your successful firm. We are apt to judge the advancement of a city and its prosperity by our sales, and we have therefore considered Plainfield one of the most cultured and appreciative cities in Northern New Jersey. Of course we realize that a great deal of the popularity that Whitman's candies enjoy in Plainfield is due to your efforts and we are very glad indeed to congratulate you upon your long continued success and your share in the remarkable growth of your city. We shall be glad to preserve this copy of the Plainfield Press, as a record of achievement. Thanking you for your kindness in sending it to us, we remain

Yours respectfully,

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

LITTLE TALKS BY THE WANT AD MAN

Copyright, 1913, The Int. Syndicate, Baltimore.

No. 34.

WHEN one realizes that anything from a hair restorer or a patent clothes wringer to a complete drug store or an entire manufacturing plant can be profitably presented for the consideration of the purchasing public, at small expense, in a newspaper's CLASSIFIED columns, one ceases to wonder at the increasing popularity and use of WANT ADS.

You can use advertising in your business, Mr. Merchant. You will use it if you want to see your business GROW. Try a little advertisement in the CLASSIFIED columns of this newspaper. If you can't afford, as yet, to be a big display advertiser.

Put your business announcement in those columns.

Put it forcibly, clearly, honestly.

It will be carried into the homes of thousands of readers—readers who are spenders—readers who will favor you with their patronage if your goods and prices are right and your announcements confidence-creating.

Try the WANT AD. columns. They'll prove a tonic for your business. And you'll continue taking the tonic with the increasing benefits of every dose.

RECOGNITION OF HUERTA BY U. S. IS IMPOSSIBLE

(By Telegraph to The Daily Press.)

Washington, Nov. 21.—The United States will never recognize Provisional President Huerta and his government. There has been no change in the situation notwithstanding reports from Mexico City to that effect.

This was made clear to the State Department today, when Secretary Bryan said the report coming from Mexico City that President Wilson is preparing to recognize Huerta is absurd. President Wilson's attitude in this matter has been clearly shown by his announcements.

AS TO ASTOR THEATRE.

Several suits that have been instituted against Benjamin Neiberg, owner of the Astor theatre in West Second street, for the payment of bills alleged to be due, will be tried Wednesday morning, before Judge Walter L. OLD BATTLE SHIP OREGON MAY HAVE OLD CREW FOR TRIP THROUGH CANAL

The Oregon

Fifty former members of the crew of the famous old battle ship Oregon have petitioned the Secretary of the Navy for permission to enlist for a period of sixty or ninety days when the ship is sent through the Panama Canal in 1915.

These men live in and around this city and all are desirous of again treading the decks of the war ship on which they made a forced run from the Pacific to the Atlantic in 1898, and arrived off Cuba in time to play an important part in the destruction of the Spanish fleet.

Inasmuch as the volunteers are now men of families, some means will be worked out to raise funds for the support of their dependents in the event of the limited enlistment being granted.

IT PAYS TO GET IN CLOSE PERSONAL TOUCH WITH THE BIG NOISE

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

ODDS STILL FAVOR RUTGERS WARRIORS

Coach Sanford Predicts an Overwhelming Victory for Brunswick Eleven.

Castle Point Field, in Hoboken, will be the scene of one of the most important minor football games in the State tomorrow afternoon when Rutgers meets Stevens in the final game of the season for both colleges. By comparative scores, Rutgers should have all the better of the argument, and rules favorite in the betting at odds of four and five to one with little Stevens money in sight.

On Wednesday afternoon Coach Foster Sanford concluded his work with the New Brunswick eleven and left for New Haven where he will put the finishing touches on the Yale team. He expressed himself much pleased with the record made by Rutgers this season and predicted an overwhelming victory over Stevens.

The entire student body at the neighboring college will attend the game, and it is estimated that eight hundred alumni from New York and vicinity will be present when the referee's whistle signifies the beginning of the contest.

Practice this week at Neilson Field has been devoted to the perfection of the forward pass and the development of the mass formation introduced by Foster Sanford. Elmer Bracher, the Rahway boy who has made an enviable reputation as a halfback, has recovered from injuries sustained against Trinity and is in excellent condition. Talman, the sensational punter, has been kicking better than ever this week and is looked upon as a sure medium of scoring on Saturday. Todd and Captain Elmendorf will be the other members of the backfield.

The team and rooters will take a special train from New Brunswick. On Monday a celebration will be held on the campus if the Rutgers eleven wins.

CHANGES IN GIRLS' BASKETBALL RULES

Three Important Changes Made by the Committee for for the 1913 Code.

In response to a number of queries we have received from feminine basketball players regarding the code of regulations as revised for the present season a summary of the rules has been compiled for the benefit of girl players complete with the revisions and other points of interest. Numerous suggestions were received by the committee on rules for changes that would make the game more interesting to the spectator and a better one to play and while some of these changes have been adopted, others have been put on record to be tried out in colleges and larger schools, but others would benefit only small localized districts and were thrown out by the committee.

The rules as present are applicable to players of the average strength and the game is not one for the woman of extraordinary development as so many are led to believe. The time has come when one set of rules should be universally adopted but many basketball players still claim that certain regulations are too rigid while others claim that the game as it is now played is not properly supervised. No other game so popular is played with so many petty modifications and until these are eliminated and one code agreed upon by all factions the game will continue to struggle for existence.

Telephone No. 266: In reply to your query regarding the weather on the day before Thanksgiving, 1912, Weather Prophet Nagle reports that on November 27 last year the maximum temperatue was 45 and the minimum 26. The wind was southwest; day partly cloudy and there was no rain.

Last year the rules on officials provided that there should be a referee, an umpire, a scorer, a timekeeper and two linesmen but this regulation has been so modified as to be changed to a referee, two umpires, a scorer, a timekeeper and four linesmen upon agreement of both teams where one division line is used. Another new ruling provides that when the referee puts the ball in play at centre, he shall blow his whistle when the ball reaches its highest point, before which niether of the jumping centres shall touch it and if the ball is batted to the outside by one of the centres it shall be given to an opponent out of bounds. When batted to the outside by both centres simultaneously it shall be thrown up between the two players indicated by the referee at the place nearest the point where the ball left the field of play. The ball may be caught or batted by one or both of the jumping centres.

Contrary to the regulation of last year, the ball may now be bounced once with one or both hands providing it goes at least as high as the player's knee. This does not interfere with the player's throwing for a goal once or twice in succession.

BAYONNE VIKINGS TO PLAY LOCALS

"Sakey" Clarke, Formerly of P. H. S., Will Play End for Holy Cross.

One of the best football games of the season, not excepting the Dexter fracas here three weeks ago, will be staged on Cricket Field tomorrow afternoon, when "Doc" Doyle's Holy Cross eleven lines up against the Vikings, of Bayonne, considered by many to be the speediest aggregation of pigskin chasers in the State. Last season the Vikings came to Plainfield padded to the limit in an endeavor to take the Queen City team's measure, but were submitted to an 18 to 0 grilling in a notable scrap on Cricket Field.

The Vikings are coming here with a determination to retrieve matters tomorrow, however, and have already shrouded the contest in mystery by refusing to divulge their lineup to Manager Doyle. The Bayonne manager says he has something to spring and will not talk for publication. Holy Cross will have practically the same lineup with the exception of "Cutey" Glover, who is laid up at his home, and the team will be strengthened by the addition of John Fritts, who starred in the backfield last Saturday afternoon for the first time as a Holy Cross color bearer.

DOUBLE BILL FEATURE FOR HOPE CHAPEL BASKETEERS

Two basketball games will be staged on the Hope Chapel court tomorrow night, the Hope first team playing the Circle Five, of Newark, and the junior boys lining up against the Mt. Pleasant boys' quintet.

The Circle Five is the same aggregation that played the Y. M. C. A. last Saturday night and are capable of putting up some good basketball against a formidable foe.

N. P. H. S. VS. PRINCETON HIGH ON BASEBALL FIELD

Charles Beckman, '14, manager of the North Plainfield High School baseball team, has arranged a diamond game with Princeton High School on the latter's grounds. The trip will be made by automobile.

Princeton has never before appeared on a North Plainfield High School schedule and will undoubtedly prove an interesting rival. Beckman is also trying to get games with other new teams, such as Kearny, Pingry, Montclair and Staten Island High Schools.

GAME AT HOPE CHAPEL.

Manager John Dawe, of the North Plainfield High School sopohomore basketball team, has arranged a game with the Hope Chapel boys' club team to be played on the latter five's court tonight. The schoolboys will lineup as follows: Townley and McDonough, forwards; Dilts, centre; LaPorte and Adams, guards.

N. P. H. S. TEAM IDLE.

Manager VanMater, of the North Plainfield High School boys' basketball team, failed in his attempts to sign up a contest for that aggregation tonight and as a result the boys' team will be without a game. The girls will oppose the Y. W. C. A. outfit.

NEW MARKET BOYS FORM NEW LEAGUE

Basketball Has Become Popular Among Public School Athletes.

Under the supervision of Jesse C. Neff, formerly a leader in the New Jersey State camp for Y. M. C. A. members at Lake Wawayanda and an experienced boys' worker, the juvenile athletes of New Market have been organized into a junior basketball league and each aggregation has been given the name of a prominent university. The opening contest of the series was played on the New Market court yesterday afternoon when the youngsters sporting the Princeton Tiger's effect trimmed the Yale Bulldog's supporters by a count of 7 to 2.

Close guarding featured the game and it was due to the excellent work of the orange and black goal preventers that the blue team was held without a field goal. Tomorrow afternoon the Army team will battle against the sons of Cornell on the same court.

The league is composed of public school scholars, Mr. Neff being one of the instructors in the New Market schools, and the teams are named as follows: Princeton, Yale, Army and Cornell. The four cornered organization has been an incentive to keen competition and the youngsters have become thoroughly aroused over the innovation.

ELIZABETH Y. M. C. A. TO OPPOSE LOCALS

New Players and New Uniforms for the Association Representatives.

New suits and new faces in the lineup will be the features of the weekly game on the Y. M. C. A. court tomorrow night, when the association team takes the floor against the quintet representing the Elizabeth Y. M. C. A. in the annual meeting. During the past two seasons Plainfield has won from the Betsytown five by a narrow margin and the Elizabetheans are coming here with their best men to reverse the score this season.

Included in the lineup will be three men who starred against the locals last season and the year before, Kelley, Powers and VanArsdale being the shining lights, and these players are expected to make things not for the Queen City players. Powers is well known throughout the State for his ability as a forward and his clever shooting has won many a hard battle for the Union county seat aggregation. Kelley and VanArsdale are members of the Battin High School team and are a pair of the best guards working in this vicinity.

Captain Brynairski, of the local team, has several new candidates in line for a try-out and while the following lineup is the one he gave out this morning it is subject to change and some shifts may be made before the game tomorrow night.

DENNIS TO SAIL AMERICA'S CUP YACHT.

Well Known Skipper Considered Logical Successor of Barr.

William S. Dennis has been selected as the skipper of Alexander S. Cochran's America's Cup yacht that is being designed by William Gardner and is to be built by Lawley & Son of Boston. Captain Dennis has never had command of an America's cup defender or even a boat built for a defender, but he is one of the best known racing skippers in the country and has been considered by most yachtsmen to be the logical successor of the late Captain Charles Barr.

They raced against each other on many occasions, and each scored victories over the other. While skipper of the schooner Elmina Captain Dennis won an enviable reputation for keen judgment under trying weather conditions, frequently going off on what seemed futile wind hunting expeditions and thereby turning apparent defeat into victory. He is also one of the cleverest professionals in the game of jockeying and taking advantage of others' weaknesses, and if the Cochran boat is selected as the defender over the Herreshoff craft being built for a syndicate of New York Yacht club members the skipper of Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock IV. will find a worthy foe ready for him off Sandy Hook. In the trial races to select the defender Captain Dennis will be opposed on the syndicate boat by Robert W. Emmons 2d of Boston, who is an amateur.

Captain Dennis was spoken of as a possibility for America's cup defense work before the last races for the cup. His skill was then acknowledged by all racing yachtsmen. His home is in Greenport, N. Y., and he has spent the greater part of his life on the water. When fifteen years old he had charge of a fishing sloop that put in at Greenport. His first yachting experience was in the catboat Minnie Rogers, and with her he beat all the boats of her class on Gardiner's bay. The late Edward E. Chase's schooner Clio was the first large vessel he commanded. With her he also won many races. Then he had the sloop Triton, the schooner Troubadour and the schooner Norma. All of them he raced with success.

BARNSTORMING INJURES TEAMS

Post Season Trips Do the Players No Good.

AND QUARRELS OFTEN ARISE

Trip of the Philadelphia Athletics to Cuba Inadvisable—The Attitude of Garry Herrmann and Ban Johnson. Latter Considers Trips Undignified.

It is not surprising that the national commission should criticise the Philadelphia Athletics for taking the trip to Cuba. The commission for a long time has been opposed to barnstorming trips after the close of the regular championship season. Its theory is that it cheapens baseball for a team of major league players to travel around the country towns or in Cuba just to gather in a few stray dollars. Many of the club owners are also against the barnstorming trips, but they were almost powerless to prevent the players from taking the jaunts.

In many cases the teams which went on barnstorming trips labeled as representing a major league club had only five or six of the players in their regular positions, and the men frequently burlesqued the national game rather than to endeavor to play up to their standard. As the players' contracts for the season expired with the close of the championship season, or about Oct. 15, the magnates could do nothing but voice their disapproval.

Last winter the national commission took the matter in hand, and as several of the magnates were afraid that their stars would be injured by playing indoor baseball, basketball, football, etc., the commission had inserted a new clause in the players' contracts. This clause provided that the player would not take part in any branch of athletics after the close of the championship season, except with the consent of the club's officials.

Evils of Barnstorming.

One of the evils of barnstorming was the friction which trips caused in the teams. For instance, when a trip was planned all the players were not invited. A few of the men got together and decided who should make up the team, and they left off players who were as anxious as themselves for a little pin money as well as for the novelty and the fun to be secured from playing in the small cities. This caused feuds in the teams, and the managers had their hands full in straightening things out before another season was due. Frequently players had to be traded owing to trouble which arose over barnstorming trips.

When President Herrmann of the Cincinnati club, who, as chairman of the national commission, had helped to have the new clause inserted in the players' contracts last spring, found that it would be advisable for him to consent to a barnstorming trip by the Reds last fall, one of the restrictions which he made was that every member of the team who desired to make the trip should do so. In this way he hoped to avoid the petty jealousies which arose over certain favored players being selected.

President Johnson of the American league some time ago was quoted as declaring that he considered it undignified for a team of world's champions to take barnstorming trips merely to gather in a few dollars. Mr. Johnson believes, and there are others who agree with him, that the men who play in the world's series get enough gold and glory and that they should be satisfied with these spoils without seeking pickings elsewhere.

Jersey College Advances.

There is a strong possibility that Rutgers college, New Brunswick, N. J., will meet the Indians next year on the Polo grounds, in New York city. Foster Sanford's showing with Rutgers this year has caused a lot of comment, and the little Jersey college is anxious to reach out for some of the larger games.

WILSON, OF YALE, THE YEAR'S GRIDIRON FIND.

Comparatively unknown until Cornish was so severely injured in the game against Colgate, Wilson, who played quarter back for Yale against Princeton last Saturday, has bobbed to the fore as one of the leading backs of the country. In the game against Brown Wilson showed he was a capable player, but he was not rated much better than mediocre, because it was thought that Brown was so weak it could not properly test the ability of any player.

It was Wilson's work in running back punts as much as anything else that helped Yale to take Princeton by surprise early in the game, and it was that first shock—the first punch, so to speak—that helped the blue's cause materially.

Wilson is a quick starter. By the time he has taken five strides he is travelling at full speed. He runs with his knees bounding high and therefore is hard to tackle. He is also a brilliant dodger, but does not zigzag back and forth across the field and thereby lose ground. While dodging he is always running ahead.

WM. BAYARD HALE IN 'LIMELIGHT'

Washington, D. C., Nov. 21.—The important role which William Bayard Hale plays in the present Mexican imbroglio as the unofficial and confidential representative of President Wilson has brought that remarkable man again into the limelight of public interest. The last time he held the centre of the stage was in 1908, when he had that famous interview with Emperor William, the publication of which came dangerously near causing serious international complications between Germany and England. His present appearance in a semi-diplomatic role under the most critical conditions and in connection with a situation requiring the most skilful diplomatic handling, naturally revives the interest in Mr. Hale's remarkable and somewhat stormy career.

William Bayard Hale was born in Richmond, Ind., April 6, 1869. His father was a man of wealth and gave him an excellent education by private tutors. Young Hale had brilliant talents and was scarcely more than a boy when he entered the field of literature by writing poetry and short stories for newspapers and magazines. He also showed considerable ability as an orator and took active part in one or two of the Democratic State campaigns. Then he came to Boston, studied at Boston University and Harvard and completed his education at the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge. There he became acquainted with Bishop Phillips Brooks, who took great interest in the brilliant young student.

The bishop placed him in charge of a mission in Middleboro, Mass., which under the energetic leadership of young Hale developed into the Church of Our Savior. As the rector of the parish the Rev. William Bayard Hale became exceedingly popular in Middleboro and his brilliant ability attracted attention throughout New England. In 1895 he caused a sensation by publishing a paper entitled "A Religious Analysis of a New England Town," in which he pleaded for the unification of church interests, at least in small towns, and severely criticized the methods used by churches to attract crowds and to raise funds. This paper and many of his sermons containing similar criticisms, made him extremely unpopular with clergymen of all denominations. He preached a series of notable sermons in St. Paul's church in Boston, and in 1896 he lectured at Oxford University, by invitation, on "The Making of the American Constitution," making an excellent impression.

He retained his hold on his own parish until 1897, when his engagement to Miss Mabel Matilda Jolly, the daughter of a Middleboro woolen merchant, was announced. His choice did not meet with the approval of some of the old women in the parish and they made things so disagreeable for the young minister that he resigned and accepted a call to a small parish in Ardmore, Pa. He married Miss Jolly in 1899 and took her to Ardmore. Seven months later she left him and in 1901 she obtained a divorce on the ground of cruelty. After the divorce had been granted, Mr. Hale retired from the ministry and, for some time at least, tried to earn a living as an insurance agent. Becoming dissatisfied with the insurance business, Mr. Hale gave it up and turned newspaper and magazine writer. He also took active part in politics and went on the stump for Bryan in 1900.

In 1908, while employed by a New York newspaper, Mr. Hale went to Europe and obtained, through the intervention of Baron von Sternberg, who had been German ambassador to the United States, an opportunity to interview Emperor William who, at that time, was cruising off the coast of Norway in the imperial yacht Hohenzollern. It was on board of that yacht that Mr. Hale had that famous interview with the Emperor which stirred up such a tremendous sensation. The Kaiser was severely criticized for his indiscreet utterances and the German foreign office made strenuous efforts to suppress the publication of the interview which was intended for a prominent American magazine. Although part of the edition had already been printed, the publishers of the magazine consented to suppress the edition and to destroy the plates and eventually the matter was hushed up.

Mr. Hale was literary editor of a New York newspaper when President Wilson became Governor of New Jersey. Mr. Hale was a strong supporter of Mr. Wilson and became an intimate friend of the Governor. The friendship continued after Mr. Wilson was elected President and Mr. Hale was a frequent visitor at the White House. When the Mexican situation became acute, President Wilson sent Mr. Hale to Mexico as his personal representative, to obtain authentic information and advice concerning the conditions in Mexico.

SENATE DEMOCRATS MAY CAUCUS ON DECEMBER 13

Trenton, Nov. 21.—The Democratic majority in the State Senate will probably hold a caucus here on Saturday, December 13. While no formal call has been issued, Senator John W. Slocum, who will become president, and Senator Peter J. McGinnis, the choice for floor leader, have agreed that this date would be as acceptable as any.

Mr. McGinnis will probably send out notices to his colleagues next week. If a desire on the part of a number of the Senators, including some of the Republicans, is carried out, there will be a change in the system of handling the bill records of the individual Senators in the next session. The caucus will probably take cognizance of a number of complaints heard last year about the file clerks and their work.

The same fault-finding has been heard for years. The file clerks are supposed to care for the books of the Senators in which are pasted copies of all bills and resolutions introduced. It was a common occurrence in the last session for Senators to find that important bills were missing from their records.

The Democrats are thinking of establishing a new method of caring for these records, but no definite plan has been evolved as yet. The subject will come up for consideration in the caucus.

NEW FIRE COMPANY REFUSES COMPROMISE WITH COUNCIL

New Providence, Nov. 21.—Hose Company No. 2, which is seeking a charter from the Borough Council, met Wednesday night and decided not to accept the advances of the fire committee of the council for a compromise.

The company discussed the suggestions made by the committe at a special conference held several weeks ago and decided the Council must either recognize the new company or negotiations would be dropped. Edward G. Miller, secretary of the new company, said the committee had suggested increasing Hose Company No. 1 to a membership of forty, instead of twenty-five, as at present. This would eliminate the scheme for an independent company.

Councilman Lyman D. Coddington, chairman of the fire committee, denied that the committee had taken any positive stand, either to render a report favoring the chartering of the new company or suggesting the rejection of its application. He said another meeting of the committee with the delegation from the proposed company would be held before the meeting of the Council Monday night.

HE WANTS TO ORGANIZE A UNION OF BARTENDERS

Joyce, of Cincinnati, Ohio, organizer for the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America, associated with the American Federation of Labor, was in Plainfield today in the interest of the proposed organization of a union of those working in local cafes and hotels. According to a statement he gave out this morning, a charter has been sent for and the organization of the bartenders in Plainfield and vicinity is assured. Patrick W. Guinee has been appointed temporary secretary.

Wilson Wedding Recalls Last White House Bridal.

FORTUNE IN PRESENTS.

Nellie Grant When Married In Washington Got Gifts Valued at $60,000. Diamond Pendant Presented by House of Representatives to Latest Bride a Token of the Nation's Affection.

Of all the gifts that have come and still are coming to the White House for the wedding of Miss Jessie Wilson to Francis Bowes Sayre none, perhaps, will be more cherished by the fair recipient than the diamond pendant which is the official gift of the house of representatives. The reason for this is that the token is essentially of an intimate, personal nature, having more of an individual and special character than the conventional tea and coffee services with their accompanying silver pieces and embodying in itself a constant reminder of the American people's affection and regard for the latest White House bride.

The pendant, which is made up of one canary diamond weighing six and one-half carats, surrounded by eighty-five smaller diamonds arranged in a pear shape and attached to a neck chain in which smaller diamonds are set, will be presented in a silver casket with the following inscription:

"Presented to Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson by the members of the United States house of representatives, as a token of their affectionate interest and regard, on her marriage, Nov. 25, 1913."

At the last White House wedding—that of Miss Alice Roosevelt and Representative Nicholas Longworth on Feb. 17, 1906—the house did not unite in this manner, but committees and state delegates as well as members individually sent tokens of their own indicating their affection for Congressman Longworth and the White House bride.

The members of the committee on foreign affairs, of which Mr. Longworth was a member, gave a silver and gold loving cup. A punch bowl was presented by the Ohio delegation, despite the protest and the prayers of the Woman's Christian Temperance union and the objection of some of the Ohio congressmen.

Presents From Foreign Lands.

It was President Roosevelt's expressed wish that no foreign governments, as such, should send wedding presents. Several governments, however, had their plans all made before the request reached them.

There was a piece of Gobelin tapestry from the French republic that was deemed perhaps the most beautiful item in the White House display on the day of the wedding. It was delivered in person by Ambassador Jusserand. Art experts said that this tapestry could not be duplicated for less than $25,000.

The Cuban government sent a rope of pearls bought in Paris. It also was appraised at $25,000. In compliance with the president's wishes Germany's wedding present came as a personal gift from Emperor William. It was a handwrought bracelet of Roman gold set with diamonds and sapphires. It was incased with illuminated leather, embossed with the imperial arms of the house of Hohenzollern.

The empress of China, who had received Miss Roosevelt when the Taft party was traveling around the world, remembered her with a dower chest filled with oriental treasures.

The gift of the emperor of Japan was a piece of embroidery and two silver vases. Among the other rulers who sent gifts were the emperor of Austria, the king of Italy and the king of Spain.

Mr. Longworth's gift to his bride was a necklace of perfectly matched diamonds, which he had ordered in Cincinnati several weeks before the engagement was announced. The bride's gift from President and Mrs. Roosevelt was a corsage ornament of emeralds and diamonds.

Gifts Valued at $250,000.

Of course nobody knew exactly the value of all the presents, which numbered about 500, but it was said at the time by those who inspected them that the figure was about $250,000.

The gifts which Nellie Grant received at her wedding were valued at about $60,000.

The presents ranged in character all the way from the Gobelin tapestry and Cuba's rope of pearls to a washtub, a Boston terrier, potatoes and anthracite coal.

Probably the most perishable of the collection came a very long distance. It was a box of peaches, apricots and plums from Cape Colony, South Africa. It was remarked that apricots of that excellence at that season would cost here about 50 cents a bite.

The Boston terrier came from a Pittsburgh friend of Mr. Longworth. It was not exhibited with the other gifts in the White House.

Chief Justice Fuller and other members of the United States supreme court sent flowers. There was a silver service from the Rough Riders' association and a working model of a Krag-Jorgensen rifle in solid gold from officers of the United States army.

WASHINGTON AWAITS THE WEDDING OF THE PRESIDENT'S DAUGHTER IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

That the wedding of Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson, second daughter of the President and Mrs. Wilson, and Mr. Francis Bowes Sayre, at half-past four o'clock, November 25, at the White House, will be a most picturesque event goes without saying. The setting is ideal; the afternoon hour, which admits such picturesque effects as the introduction of hats, floral muffs and other incidentals of the luxurious dress of the moment, is another factor that makes for aesthetic effect.

ELIZABETH PEOPLE DISCUSS SALOONS AT CONFERENCE

Elizabeth, Nov. 21.—Opinions on the saloon question were expressed by a number of residents of this place at a conference called by Mayor Victor Mravlag in the city hall. The session was open to some newspaper men, but others were barred.

The gathering was in line with a scheme which the Mayor recently suggested to the excise commissioners. The English Liquor Dealers' Association was represented by Henry Murphy, and the German liquor dealers had as their spokesman, Anton Sauermein. General Dennis F. Collins represented the Peter Breidt brewery and Edward Nugent the Rising Sun Brewing Company.

Rev. Dr. H. J. Behr and Monsignor Mackel were present as representatives of the Catholic church. Rev. F. C. Mooney, of the Methodist church, also was a speaker.

Written orders have been issued by Chief of Police John A. Peters to Captains Michael Mulcahey and John J. O'Leary, to see that all of the saloons are closed on Sundays. Both captains predict the city will be "dry" next Sunday.

Dr. and Mrs. T. B. Fulper returned to their home in Hampton, yesterday, after spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Alvater.

The Flemington W. C. T. U. held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Lewis L. Holcombe, in Pennsylvania avenue, yesterday afternoon. The subject for discussion was "Echoes from World and National Conventions." Rev. W. G. Nyce, who is conducting revival services at the Amwell German Baptist church, made an address.

The Hunterdon County Tax Board met here Wednesday. But few appeals were made from assessments.

Rev. J. H. E. Schultz, pastor of the Methodist church, left for Belvidere yesterday, where he will assist Rev. J. W. Hampton in a series of revival services, now in progress in the Methodist church there.

HUSBAND SALOON OWNER, SHE CAN'T COLLECT INSURANCE

Trenton, Nov. 21—Because Adolph A. H. Ostmann, of Hoboken, engaged in business as a saloon-keeper, his widow, Katherine Ostmann, cannot recover $500 which would otherwise be due her from the relief fund of the Supreme Lodge, Knights and Ladies of Honor. This is the judgment of the Supreme Court in an opinion handed down by Justice Trenchard, setting aside a verdict for $500 obtained against the order by Mrs. Ostmann in the District Court of Hoboken.

The rules of the supreme lodge prohibit any member from engaging in the occupation of a soloon-keeper and provide that any violation of the rule shall result in the forfeiture of his membership. Judge Trenchard held that this provision of the contract is self executing and works automatically.

Admitting that the unconditional receipt of dues and assesments by a fraternal beneficial association from a member, with knowledge of the association that he was engaged in a prohibited occupation, would constitute a waiver of the forfeiture, Justice Trenchard pointed out that it must be shown that the association had such a knowledge. In the present case, he said, there was no evidence that the association was aware of Mr. Ostmann's being a saloon-keeper when the dues were accepted.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

"Way Down East" will be the attraction at the Plainfield theatre, Saturday afternoon and evening, November 29. Year after year audiences so large as to test the largest theatres in the country, have greeted Squire Bartleta, Anna Moore, Hi Holler and all the other characters in Lottie Blair Parker's famous drama of New England life, and have laughed and wept by turns over the quaint bits of comedy and pathos which constitute its chief charm. The famous play is obsessed of the secret of perennial youth. It never grows old or loses its freshness or wholesomeness. The younger generation fall in love with it now as the older ones did almost twenty years ago. This season the management have provided an entire new production, and a cast of exceptional merit. In fact it is doubtful if it has ever been better presented. William Lawrence, star for the past ten years with Denman Thompson's "The Old Homestead," will be seen in the role of Squire Bartlett and the role of Anna Moore, made famous by the late Phoebe Davis, is in the competent hands of Eileen O'Malley. The musical features are of the same high order as in former years. A capacity house should greet this famous idyl of New England at both performances. A bargain matinee is announced, prices 25 cents and 50 cents; night prices 25 cents to $1.00.

The titanic character of the Grand Canyon of Arizona will be reproduced by Lyman H. Howe at the Plainfield theatre, Wednesday and Thursday, November 26 and 27. This appalling fissure is now universally recognized as the most wonderful geological and spectacular phenomenon known to mankind. Stolid indeed must be the spectator who can view the unearthly splendor of the sublime gorge without gasping in astonishment. Its like is found nowhere in the world. It impresses the mind as a chaotic under-world, just emptied of primeval floods. The spectacle presented is so vast that it seems to elude all sense of perspective or dimension. It is entirely beyond the faculty of measurement. And while it is terribly real, yet it seems spectral as a dream. It comprises a labyrinth of huge architectural forms, endlessly varied, in design. On an awe-inspiring scale it alone expresses what the greatest poets, painters, sculptors, orators or musicians of all ages have ever tried to express. A faint realization of the immensity of the scene may be derived from the fact that in comparison with Niagara, the latter would seem nothing more than a rivulet. Mr. Howe's reproduction also shows the means of descending into the Canyon via mule-back over a trail zig-zagging at an unrelenting pitch. Among the twenty other big features to be represented are thrilling scenes of rescuing survivors during a terrific gale from an ocean greyhound dashed on the rocks and torn by raging seas; an aeroplane ride over Paris; wonders of deep sea life; a motor ride through the French Alps; a study in palmistry and many others.

CROSS-COUNTRY CHAMP. RACE.

New York, Nov. 21.—Speedy runners representing a dozen colleges have gathered here in readiness to take part in the annual cross-country championship race of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America. The race will be run tomorrow over the Van Cortlandt Park course. Represented in the entry list are Yale, Harvard, Cornell, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Dartmouth, Brown, Syracuse, Colgate, Columbia, Penn State, College of the City of New York and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Cornell, Harvard, Yale and Princeton appear to be the more formidable contenders. Michigan, the only Western institution represented, fills the role of dark horse in the contest.

"RICHEST WOMAN" 78.

New York, Nov. 21—Mrs. Hetty Green, whose wealth is so vast as to make a "twenty-million-dollar widow" appear as a mere "piker," reached her seventy-eighth birthday anniversary today, but she did not observe nor celebrate the occasion. All week days look alike to Mrs. Green. Apparently she saw no reason why she should vary her usual routine of business just because it happened to be the anniversary of her natal day. She made several calls in the financial district and put in considerable time at her offices at 111 Broadway. Ever since she reached her seventieth year it has been rumored at intervals that "the world's richest woman" intended to retire and turn over the management of her colossal business and financial interests to her only son, Col. E. H. R. Green. The rumor appeared about to be verified a year or two ago when "Ned" Green quit Texas and came to New York to live. He has made his home here ever since, but if his mother turned her affairs over to him nobody knows it.

FIELDER SPENT $2,312.

Trenton, Nov. 21.—A statement filed with Secretary of State Crater yesterday shows that Governor-elect James F. Fielder contributed $2,312.78 to the Democratic State committee, which he names as his campaign committee. Under the law a candidate for Governor may contribute $2,500 toward the expenses of his campaign.
